Another error on the part of this correspondent is in presaging the line to be taken by "The Canadian Countryman" by the advertising patronage it receives. In view of the reference in this letter to the alleged connection with political and manufacturers interests, and our advertising, it is of interest to note that all Canadian publications, not excepting "the various agricultural journals that have been long patronized by Ontario farmers" have of necessity to rely upon whatever advertising they are able to obtain, from manufacturers generally, of course. The "Farm and Dairy," published in Peterborough, has not been accused of leanings toward reciprocity or the Conservative party, yet they have been able somehow to obtain advertising from the present Government at Ottawa, that the "Canadian Countryman" has failed to get. Is "Agricola" to accuse "Farm and Dairy" of being anxious "to promote—another defeat of reciprocity and the continuation of the Borden Government in office?"

Most other farm papers in Canada have carried the advertising patronage of the Cockshutt Plow Co., and many other manufacturing concerns, different members of which concerns have publicly announced their disapproval of reciprocity, and who have yet refused their advertising to "The Canadian Countryman," while giving it to these other journals. We do not believe they will always refuse it to use because we believe they give their advertising patronage for good reason in the promotion of their sales, which in the early stages of our existence, they had some right to doubt that we could help in doing.

We are not interested in the allegations against Sir Edmund Walker and Mr. Lash, who are doubtless quite able to defend themselves, if defence is needed. It is only fair to this publication, however, to point out that their connection with it is surely no more detrimental than it is to the University of Toronto, of whose Board of Governors they are respectively Chairman and Treasurer.

We have uttered no sentiments upon the subject of trading with the United States, and would, in all good humour, ask "Agricola" and any others who may have been influenced in their opinions by him, to let their judgment operate upon the sentiments expressed in this journal without taking too much for granted in the meanwhile. This applies particularly to "Agricola's" whole-hearted, but entirely mistaken argument that the "Canadian Countryman" desires to "oust the 'Grain Growers' Guide' or any other agricultural journals from their places." Such earnest believers in free trade should, it seems to me, be willing to give us a fair opportunity, and permission to enter competition as one of the agricultural journals of Canada. Our readers—of whom there are many in the neighbourhood of Peterborough—know well that we have justified our right to acceptance as a medium of educational interest.

Thanking you for the courtesy of publishing this reply to the attack which is regrettable more for its spirit than for the harm it might do, I am,

Faithfully yours,
A. L. McCREDIE,
Editor-in-Chief,
The Canadian Countryman.

Looked Suspicious.

This happened in Scotland: The last edition of the newspapers had been sold out and the newsboys were calculating their earnings.

"Hallo," said Jimmy in alarm, "I'm a 'a'penny short!"

"Well, wa's the use of 'arpin' on it?" growled Dick, as he calmly cracked a nut; "you don't think I took it, do you?"

"I don't say you 'ave. But there it is. I'm 'a'penny short and you're eatin' nuts."

Postponement Of Offical Plans

Owing to intricacies of situation I have decided to delay Surveying plans until Spring. I have however made careful measurements and a fairly correct sketch showing location and dimensions, streets, lanes etc. From this intending purchasers may select at once and this should be done without delay by a large number of people who want to save a little of what they earn, who may prefer having a home of their own within commission in Spring, or who may desire a beautiful garden block to make money from while they sit-up. Low prices, easy terms, assistance to build. Every lot will please and make money by increasing values as city grows. Call for particulars.

READING AND ITS PLEASURES

(By MR. F. M. DELA POSSE)

BIOGRAPHY—PART TWO.

In the prefatory article of this series reference was made to a few of the books in our Biographical section that have never been taken out by the public. There are very many others that could be placed in the same category and the names of a few will be given herewith together with a rough epitome of their contents, in order to furnish readers with some idea of what they are passing over day after day in their quest for a literary bonne-bouche.

Attention has often been called to the fact that no greater mistake can be made than to pin one's faith entirely to the title of a book as providing an accurate index to its contents. This caution is now reiterated for it holds good in Biography just as well as in any other branch of literature. Take for instance "The Heart of Asbury's Journal"—What can that title possibly convey to the mind of anyone ignorant of the early history of Methodism in America?—absolutely nothing. On opening the volume, however, one finds it to be the cream of the journal of Francis Asbury, first bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America, who for no less a period than forty-five years acted as a peripatetic preacher, working sedulously for the establishment of that church Opinions may vary as to his claim to rank in the Apostolical Succession, but all must agree as to the beauty of his character and the self-denial that marked his whole career. There is a succinct account of Asbury in a little volume entitled "Bright and Shining Lights," which is also to b found in the Biographical section.

In "Personal Traits of British Authors," one lights on a veritable feast of reading. It deals almost entirely with every writer of note, poet, prose-writer or novelist, who flourished in the late Georgian and early Victorian days. Shelley, Wilson, Wordsworth, the Brontes, Coleridge, Byron, Lamb, in fact the whole glittering galaxy is made to pass in review before us. Sydney Smith is there with his inexhaustible fund of humour and animal spirits; Walter Savage Landor, (the original of Lawrence Boythorne in "Bleak House"), that strange medley of ungovernable fury and tenderness, who lived in a perfect Maelstrom of quarrels with friends, estrangements from his family and libel suits with his enemies; DeQuincy also, whose "Confessions of an Opium-eater" ranks in regard to style and eloquence amongst the most remarkable products of English literature. Here, too, we are brought face to face with Hogg, the Ettrick Shepherd, not the least interesting amongst the wonderful personalities of the period. Hogg was a man, who, bred in a humble sphere of life, raised himself by his own exertions to a level with the noted literati of the day. He did not learn to read till he had attained the age of eighteen, nor to write till a much later date. When he did start he laboured long and eagerly and one can picture him, seated on the bleak hill-side, using his knees as a desk, his inkhorn suspended from a button of his clothing, copying the Italian alphabet. In his twenty-sixth year he first essayed to write verses and seems to have looked on the occupation as a sort of wrestling bout, for we are told that he always took off his coat and waistcoat for the undertaking. It was not till his fortieth year that he commenced his career as a man of letters. We are given an insight into Hogg's character and his rough upbringing in an account of a dinner party in Edinburgh to which he was invited to meet Byron and a distinguished and aristocratic company. He arrived reeking with the unsavoury odours of sheep and pigs and oxen, in whose company he had been for hours. Nevertheless he soon made himself at home with the fair ladies on each side of him; somewhat too much so; for supper over, the cloth was withdrawn and the toddy introduced; the song going round and his next door neighbours being too languid in their maner of joining in the chorus to please him, he turned first to the right hand, then to the left, and slapped both of them on their backs with such good-will as to make their blade-bones ring again; then with the yell of an Ojibway Indian he shouted out: "Now then, leddies, follow me, 'Heigh, tuttit tuttit! Heigh, tuttit tuttit!"

For those whose tastes lie in the direction of light and gossipy biography, "The Wits and Beaux of Society" will introduce them to Beau Nash, Beau Fielding, the Earl of Cresterfield, Scarron, Congreve, Walpole, Selwyn, Sheridan, Hook and many others. It is a mine of information concerning the more famous of a long departed race of society butterflies.

"Stories of Remarkable Persons," deals with several historical characters, among others Taylor, the Water-Poet, of whom so little is known by the average reader notwithstanding the fact that references to him are constantly met with in one's daily reading. Years ago, there lived in Clifton (England) an old man of the name of Gabbittass. He had a small stall on the Suspension Bridge where he sold leaflets of his own poetry or wrote verses for you whilst you waited. No subject came amiss. He was just as willing to rhyme away on the hidden mysteries of Creation as on the last speech of Gladstone or the Oxford and Cambridge boat-race. As a boy I knew him well and remember distinctly looking upon him as a genius of the first order. Some years afterwards I came upon a specimen of his lucubrations and I regret to say that a re-perusal of it lowered him sadly in my eyes. Such a man was evidently Taylor, the Water-Poet, who received his name and title from no less a personage than King James I.—for what reason it is hard to conceive. The distinction conferred upon him was "The King's Majesties Water-Poet and Queen's Waterman." Taylor was a London waterman, but he varied this employment by frequent incursions into the realm of poesy and was ready to write for anyone at any time anything from an elegy to an anagram. His most noted production is entitled "The Pennylesse Pilgrimage," and is an account of a journey on foot made by him from London to Edinburgh. He published his account of his travels by subscription, much in the style of some present day authors, and seems to have had trouble in collecting money from certain of his so-called patrons for in 1619 he issued a satirical poem taking them to task. It was entitled "A Kicksey Winsey; or a Leary-come-Twang; wherein John Taylor hath suited eight hundred of his bad debtors that will not pay him for his return of his Journey from Scotland." Other well-known characters mentioned in "Stories of Remarkable Persons" are William and Dorothy Wordsworth, Camille Desmoulins, Thomas Edward, the Scotch shoemaker and naturalist, Horace Greeley, the Astor family, the Herschels, DeLesseps, and A. T. Stewart, the New York merchant.

"Brief Biographies," by Samuel Smiles, gives short descriptions of no less than 35 notables in the fields of Literature, Science, Art, Statesmanship and Philanthropy. Amongst others it introduces us to that strange personality, George Borrow, the author of the "Bible in Spain," "The Romany Rye" and "Lavengro." The last-named work is professedly an auto-biography of the author but is in reality, as Smiles very aptly describes it "a kind of poetic rhapsody" where "fact is liberally mixed with fiction." To quote further from Smiles "Here was a travelling missionary of the Bible Society, who knew all about gipsy life and lingo, was familiar with the lowest haunts of field thieves and mendicants, and up to all their gibberish; a horse-sorcerer and whisperer, a student of pugilism under Thurtell, and himself no mean practitioner in the 'noble art of self-defence' but withal a man of the most varied gifts and accomplishments—a philologist or wordmaster" knowing nearly every language in Europe and the East—a racy and original writer with the force of Cobbett and the learning of Parr—the translator of the Bible or parts of it into Mantchu, Basque, Romany or Gipsy tongue and many other languages, and of old Danish ballads into English—a person of fascinating conversation and of powerful eloquence. Fancy these varied gifts embodied in a man standing six feet two in his stocking soles, his frame one of iron, his daring and intrepidity unmatched and you have placed before your mind's eye George Borrow, the Bible missionary—the gipsy Hogarth-Lavengro, the word-painter."

"Borrow's Life" (2 vols.) and all of Borrow's books, save his earliest, "The Gypsies of Spain," are to be found in the Library.

LOCAL YOUTH BREAKS GAOL

In Picton Where He Was Incarcerated on a Charge of Assault and Robbery

The following account is taken from the Picton Times, and concerns the escape from the Picton County gaol of Russell McCall, who was awaiting trial for assault and robbery. McCall is a Peterborough youth. Chief of Police Thompson, at the request of Chief Cooper of Picton, has forwarded McCall's record concerning his local escapades.

Recovered Money.

The article referred to says:

Russell McCall, of Peterborough, and J. McDonald, one committed for trial for assault and robbery, and the other under a four-year sentence in the Central Prison, escaped from the county gaol Saturday afternoon. The prisoners found a rope some place about the gaol premises and by its aid swung themselves to the top of the stone wall and dropped down into the garden. They evidently crossed the little bridge and went up Mary street and had a start of two or three hours before Chief Cooper was notified of their escape. The Chief despatched rigs to the country and telephoned in all directions. He knew that a freight train had left Picton station station early in the afternoon and thought perhaps the prisoners had caught that. He took the afternoon train himself with the intention of searching along the line. At Bloomfield station he made enquiries and found some boys who had seen two men answering the description of the prisoners going west along the road. The Chief sent instructions with the boys to Fred Cooper to meet him at Wellington with his automobile. Selecting a boy who knew McCall, Mr. Cooper lost no time in responding to the Chief's request. The automobile overtook the prisoners near Wellington and Mr. Cooper asked them to ride, and they willingly accepted the invitation. At Wellington the Chief haled the auto party and when McCall and McDonald heard his voice they knew their flight had ended. They were brought back to the gaol in the auto. Fifty-nine dollars were discovered after the prisoners were returned to gaol which McCall acknowledged as his. The money is thought to have been recovered from its hiding place while the prisoners were at large. The other prisoner, Frederick, refused the opportunity of escape.

The prisoners were before Police Magistrate Williams Wednesday morning charged with gaol breaking. Six months was added to McDonald's sentence, and McCall's case was left for the County Judge to deal with when the case comes before him in December. McCall had previously elected to be tried by jury.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

The Sin of Moses and Aaron. Num. xx:1-13.

Golden Text—Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Jehovah, my rock and my redeemer. Ps. xix:14.

(1.) Verse 1—Who was Miriam? What are the principal events in her life?

(2.) How many years had intervened since the report of the spies and the Israelites being turned back from the borders of Canaan into the wilderness?

(3.) Verse 2—What is the difference in the value of a community where there is no water compared to one where there is plenty of water?

(4.) If the water supply of this place should permanently fail what effect would it have upon the population?

(5.) What is the economic value of water which God so plentifully supplies without money and without price?

(6.) Verses 3-4—How is it that the people generally blame those who are in authority for their providential troubles?

(7.) By what sort of arguments, having the semblance of reason, could the Israelites support their accusation against Moses and Aaron?

(8.) What proportion of pious speaking people to-day when they are in trouble act in a similar unreasonable manner as these Israelites?

(9.) Is it possible, and if so how, to have peace and inward poise of soul no matter how severe the calamity?

(10.) Verse 5—Contrast their general providential condition since they left Egypt with their condition in Egypt and say which was the better.

(11.) Why is it that people generally undervalue the present and speak of "the good old days")

(12.) Verse 6—What is always the best thing to do, and why, when we are confronted with a painful problem which we cannot solve?

(13.) What generally happens when we faithfully and earnestly tell our troubles to God?

(14.) When in our troubles God appears to us in a realistic manner and our hearts are filled with the joy or "glory of the Lord" what effect does that have upon our judgment and our actions?

(15.) Verses 7-8—When and where did Moses before this at the command of God bring water out of a rock?

(16.) What were the exact steps which God commanded Moses to take in order to get water out of the rock?

(17.) Verses 9-11—What was this rod which Moses took in his hand, and what had he probably done with it in the past?

(18.) Wherein would you say Moses and Aaron sinned in the manner in which they got the water from the rock?

(19.) Verse 12—Wherein did Moses and Aaron show unbelief in God?

(20.) When a preacher or Sunday School teacher or parent teaches against the sin of petulance or anger and yet shows anger himself, which is followed, his precept or his example?

(21.) Why would you say it was necessary for God to execute some penalty upon Moses and Aaron?

A MILLION DOLLARS FOR GOOD ROADS

County Council of Essex, Ont., Presents By-law for Improving 150 Miles

One of the most important of the many road improvement plans now under way in various parts of Canada, is that just launched in Essex County, Ontario. At a meeting of the Council, on Thursday, October 16th, a By-law was drawn up for presentation to the voters next January. This By-law calls for the raising of a million dollars to provide for concrete roadways covering no less than 150 miles, and connecting all the important communities of Essex County. The proposed routes of the concrete roads will completely circle the County, and afford the finest type of highway connection to the farmers for reaching Windsor or any of the smaller towns.

With the assistance of Engineer Huber, of the Ontario Government, the committee appointed at the last session of he council, went over the different roads proposed for paving. Basing his recommendation upon the fact that the route will be used for much heavy traffic, Mr. Huber made his report in favour of using Concrete throughout.

An interesting feature of the plan as outlined, is the provision of a continuous route of good roads. There have been instances in other communities where otherwise excellent road development ideas were, in a measure, spoiled by failure to have the good road a continuous good road The Essex County Council have shown their wisdom and far-sightedness by providing for the complete connecting up of the proposed concrete stretches, so that in the completed project will appear no interruptions of unimproved or bad roads. While not in a straight line, the completed series of roads will be, in effect, one long continuous highway all of concrete, and taking in practically the whole of Essex County.

There would seem to be a peculiarly enterprising spirit in the vicinity of the Detroit River. On one side of the River we have Wayne County, Michigan (the county of which Detroit is the principal centre) with approximately 100 miles of concrete County highways. This magnificent series of highways has been a model for other communities, and has attracted visitors on inspection tours from all over the world. Now comes Essex County, a sister community, on our side of the river, with a plan which bids fair to fully equal that of Wayne County, and which will, perhaps, eventually eclipse the splendid road system that is the pride of Michigan. The building of 150 miles of concrete highways such as Essex County is to have, means a model county from the viewpoint of intercommunication between towns. Doubtless we will find deputations of municipal officers visiting Essex County to obtain pointers on how best to link together the farm communities with the market places. The eyes of all North America will turn toward Essex County and watch with growing interest the completion of this project.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine a mother can give her little ones. They are absolutely safe, being guaranteed by a government analyst to contain neither opiates, narcotics or other harmful drugs. They are good for all children from the newborn babe to the growing child. They cure constipation, indigestion, expel worms, break up colds and make teething easy. In fact they are a cure for all the minor ills of little ones and a box should always be kept in the house as a safeguard against sudden attacks of stomach or bowel troubles. Mrs. J. P. Richard, St. Norbert, N.B., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets all that is claimed for them. My baby suffered from his stomach and bowels and the Tablets certainly did him good." They are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

There will be an entertainment in the Charlotte St. Church Lecture Room, on the evening of the 1st and 2nd of December. Reserve the date.

FINE WATCH REPAIRING

"ACRES" OF DUCKS AT RICE LAKE FOR FALL FEEDING

The number of wild ducks at Rice Lake at this season is practically beyond enumerating possibilities. What are known as the late ducks find their way to Rice Lake about this time of the year, remaining until the ice begins to form when they seek waters further south.

One day, a year or so ago, Mr. Jack Gillman, who was then located at Jubilee Point, said to a belated boarder: "There are two million ducks off Hatrick's Point. The young man looked skeptical, sort of that Missouri smile flickered about the corners of his mouth, whereupon Mr. Gillman advised him to paddle out and see for himself. In describing the scene the boarder said he though he was back in the old days the pioneers have told so much about. Mr. Gillman had numbered the ducks at two millions and they actually appeared to be as numerous. The easiest way to estimate them was by acres, for they were floating in one big flock, about half a mile or more from Hattricks Bay. Their number was simply beyond estimation.

And this is the season of their return. Several of the lovers of old Rice Lake have made recent visits to their favourite haunt and state that the ducks are just as numerous as ever. It is believed that many of them are ducks from the north west and have made their way east with the advent of the first signs of approaching winter. These late ducks will keep arriving in flocks until the cold season is advanced into zero weather.

Oyster Season Here—Nutritious Food

Some oyster recipes will not be amiss at this season:

Virginia Creamed Oysters.

Allow ten oysters for each person. Wash and dry thoroughly. Make a sauce of two tablespoons of flour and two of butter and blend smooth. Add one cup of cream, into which stir a tiny pinch of soda and one cup of oyster liquor. Put in double boiler and stir until you have a smooth, thick sauce. Add two drops of onion juice. Place layer of oysters on flat baking dish. A deep pie pan will do. Salt and pepper to taste. Cover with the cream sauce and set in hot oven five minutes. Serve with Virginia fried potatoes.

California Pepper Oysters.

Dredge oysters with salt and pepper and Mexican sweet pepper. Lay on baking pan and cover with a few fine cracker crumbs and bits of butter. Bake in top of very hot oven until oyster begins to "ruffle." Remove at once and turn over them sauce made of one pint of oyster liquor, one tablespoon of chopped chillies, one whole tomato cut in small pieces, boil all together, salt to taste and turn at once over oysters and serve.

To lay an oyster open on a dish for any length of time diminishes its piquancy. Insist always that the oyster be opened on the deep shell and thus save every drop of its liquor.

Oysters and Spaghetti.

Two cups of spaghetti broken in small pieces and cooked in salt water until tender. Drain. Butter a baking dish and place on bottom a layer of spaghetti, then a layer of oysters, salt, pepper and butter, and one cup of white sauce and the other layer of spaghetti, oysters and sauce until all are used. For one quart of oysters use three cups of sauce. Sprinkle top with bread crumbs and with dots of butter. Bake in hot oven fifteen minutes. Use the sauce hot, as it does not require as long to bake.

Oyster Catsup.

Squeeze through a sieve one pint of oysters and their juice. Add one pint of white wine or sherry. Salt to taste. Put one clove of garlic, one stock of celery, one ounce of mixed spice in a bag. Simmer all together fifteen minutes. Cool and bottle.

Philadelphia Broiled Oysters.

Heat liquor from the three dozen oysters to boiling point. Take oysters and lay on hot broiler. Broil on each side. Drop broiled oysters into hot liquor and season very highly with pepper and butter. Serve with strips of buttered toast.

Stewed Oysters.

This dish does not mean oyster stew. No! It means stewed oysters, and is one of the ways those famous old southern cooks prepared oysters for company.

Drain the juice from two quarts of oysters. Put in a little salt. Set over fire and allow to boil up once. Strain through a cloth. Put back on fire and turn in the two quarts of oysters and cook until the gills begin to curl, about five minutes. Stir the oysters so each will be cooked. Do not cook slowly or allow to stand. Add two tablespoons of butter, one cup of hot cream or top milk. Take from fire and serve at once. This is a fine food to make in chafing dish.

Manhattan Oysters.

Twenty-four oysters, one tablespoon of butter, one-half teaspoon of paprika. Salt to taste One tablespoon ofm inced parsley. Have oysters freshly opened and in large shell. Cream the butter, parsley and paprika. Put a bit of this on each oyster. Cover each oyster with a thin slice of bacon. Bake in hot oven ten minutes. Serve in shell with thin slices of lemon.

Oyster Fritters.

Chop thirty oysters. Make a batter of two beaten eggs, half a pint o milk, a scant pint of flour, one scant teaspoon of baking powder and salt to taste. Stir the oysters into the batter, drop this by the spoonful into deep, boiling fat. As they brown turn as one does doughnuts. Drain on paper. Serve hot with mashed potatoes and a cabbage salad.

Steamed Oysters.

Fill a wire basket full of oysters in the shell and immerse in kettle of boiling water that is deep enough to cover the basket of oysters. They will be done almost immediately and must be removed at once from boiling water. Open on big platter, on which is melted butter, salt and pepper. Serve at once with crisp celery and salted wafers. Serve the water in which they are cooked as broth, with a little milk and butter added.

COLD IN THE CHEST?

RUB WELL WITH ZAM-BUK!

For bad colds on the chest, rub the chest and between the shoulders well with Zam-Buk at night.

If you suffer from catarrh or cold in the head, just insert a little Zam-Buk at the base of the nostril, and as the balm becomes warm, inhale the healing essences which vaporize.

Sores in the nostril, which are sometimes set up by catarrh, will yield to Zam-Buk treatment.

Mrs. N. S. Babcock of Matawatchan, Ont., says: "For a long time I had a very disagreeable sore on the inside of the nostrils, which gave me great pain and caused much annoyance. I feared it would turn to cancer, and all I tried proved unavailing. I was ordered to try Zam-Buk, and I am glad to say that the sore that defied all other remedies was overcome by one box of Zam-Buk and is now quite healed."

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, eczema, blood-poison, piles, cuts, and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores, 50c. box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Try Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet!

Supersedes Massage As Wrinkle Remover

(The Woman Beautiful.)

Many women regularly visit the beauty specialist to have their wrinkles ironed out with the help of hot applications, cold creams and massage. Most of us realize that there comes a time when no amount of persuasion of this sort will avail. This process of "wrinkle removing" is wrong in principle. Both the hot water and the massaging tend to expand and loosen the skin, besides softening the muscular foundation.

The very opposite result should be aimed at. The tissue should be strengthened, the skin tightened, so there'll be no room for wrinkles. The best known preparation for the purpose can be made at home by dissolving 1 oz. saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel. Use as a wash lotion. The effect is really marvellous. Tell the druggist you want the powdered saxolite, which dissolves immediately.

English Epigrams.

A man never thinks a woman means what she says or knows what she means when she says it.

In a woman there is little difference between honesty and immodesty.

A man never talks about the woman he loves—while he is in love with her.

One can make time, but one cannot make opportunities.

VERULAM FARMER HAS MADE MONEY

Sells Farm He Bought in Toronto and Makes Good Profit

NORTH VERULAM, Oct. 24.—The many friends of Mr. John Lawrence will be pleased to hear that he has sold his farm which he bought two years ago for $10,000. There were many who thought John was going wrong when he sold out here. The following is a clipping from the Toronto Telegram: "Hubert Page & Co., real estate dealers, have invested in another farm for subdivision purchases. The newly-secured property is the Lawrence estate at the corner of Bathurst Stree and Mill Road, adjoining the Yongehurst estate, which was bought by the same firm this summer and sold in lots. Twenty thousand dollars is the price paid for the latest acquisition. It has been used as a farm by John Lawrence who occupies it at present. It contains 125 acres and is considered among real estate men a good purchase. It fronts on Bathurst for 23,000 feet.

C.P.R. MEN GET PRIZES.

Agent at Jack Fish, Lake Superior, Winner.

To have merited the distinction of having the most beautiful station garden on the whole Lake Superior division of the Canadian Pacific Railway is to have won the admiration of every stationmaster on the company's lines reaching from ocean to ocean. This honour has just been awarded to P. A. Nicol, station agent at Jack Fish, in winning the general superintendent's prize of twenty-five dollars. Since the C.P.R. inaugurated the system of beautifying the station houses, round-houses and section houses by supplying seeds and offering prizes for the best gardens, competition has become keen among the officials at various points of the system. Each year has brought forth better results until a perfection has been reached, and now the railway station, which was ever unsightly, has assumed the aspect of the Swiss chalet. Each property, by the individuality of its respective official, has its own unique characteristics, and is artistic and wholly beautiful.

The other prize-winners of the Lake Superior division were as follows:

W. Chandler, locomotive foreman, first prize for the best roundhouse garden, $10.

A. Dresti, section foreman, Kama, first prize for the best section house garden, $10.

F. Zanna, section foreman, Craigs, Ont., second prize for the section house garden, $5.

W. J. Summers, agent, Cache Bay, first flower garden on district No. 1, $10; second prize, $5, won by N. W. Vansycle, agent, Clamsford.

District No. 3, first prize, $10, won by P. Barr, agent at Pearl; second prize, $5, awarded to J. Nicol, at Rossport.

Co-Operative Members will receive supply of Bread as usual Monday. Temporary stoppage is now remedied.

USE NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE IN TIME AND YOU WON'T NEED ANY FALSE HAIR

Wearing artificial hair is a harmless deceit of which many ladies are guilty. These women are all objects for sympathy rather than criticism.

Early neglect in the care of the scalp has caused the loss of so much hair that their personal appearance is sadly marred. To correct this defect they resort to artificial hair.

Most ladies would resent any imputation of personal carlessness and neglect. And yet very many women permit their natural hair to become so dull, brittle and lusterless that it looks no better than the artificial.

All this is as unfortunate as it is unnecessary. Hair that is unsightly or thin may usually be attributed to the malevolent activity of the dandruff germ. This vicious germ burrows down into the hair follicle, shortly destroying its life. The hair becomes dead, loose and finally drops out.

There is a remedy sold by all druggists, the intelligent use of which will remove all traces of dandruff. It also cleanses the scalp of all accumulations and makes the hair shine with the lustre of life and beauty.

That remedy is Newbro's Herpicide, "the Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer."

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c. and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Applications may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlours.

The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich., will send a nice sample and booklet to any address upon receipt of 10c. in postage or silver.

SILK AND WOOL CREPE DE CHINE

Crepe de China, for that is the translation of "Crepe de Chine," has for so long been held high in milady's estimation, that little needs to be said about its lovely appearance, and the long time for which it will wear.

These examples in silk and wool mixture, are particularly desirable because their texture has a solid substance, not too light for the evening frock that must have a more general wear.

At $1.00 a yard there are shades of shell pink, pale blue, yellow, champagne and deep cream.

THE BROCADED SILKS AND HYPTHIA SATINS

It is difficult to imagine more beautiful fabrics than these, or something more correct and appropriate for evening wear, whether used alone or in combination with plain material. The Brocaded Silk possesses the charmeuse finish with twilled back, and has all the delightful softness and clinging texture of the richer silks. And the brocaded effect adds a delicate charm, which is enhanced by the uncommon shades in which it is procurable. These are, Carnation Red, Nell Rose, Chestnut Brown, Amber, Cambridge Blue and white.

The width is 40 to 42 ins and the price per yard $2.25.

Hypthia Brocaded Satins, luxurious in appearance, are to be obtained in cream, pale blue and pink. Forty two inches is the width, while the price ranges $2.50 to $3.50 per yard.

KNIFE PLEATING of HEAVY NINON

Wonderfully dainty and delicate is this material, for it comes in pretty shades of Pink, Light Blue and Cream; the pleats being no more than three sixteenths of an inch in breadth.

And with it's shimmering folds, that change with the wearer's every movement, it has won for itself a distinct preference, where exquisite evening fabrics are concerned

It measures forty inches in width and costs $1.25 yard.

Or Plain and Fancy Ninons to match, there is an abundant choice.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

Vesper service will be held in the "Green Room" of the Y.W.C.A. Sunday afternoon, October 26 at 5 o'clock. This is a very short, interesting service to which all who feel inclined to spend a home-like half hour with us are very cordially invited.

Sunday afternoon Miss Jessie Munro, who spent many years in Japan as principal of the Young Ladies' Boarding School in Tokio, will deliver the address. With the interest in the "Flowering Kingdom" we have, the address cannot but be appreciated by us all. Miss Gertrude Allison, as soloist, will add greatly to our enjoyable half hour together. We hope our old friends will accept this invitation and that those who are strangers will be present also, that we may learn to be friends.

Just Apply This Paste And The Hairs Vanish

(Beauty Notes)

It is not longer necessary for a woman to go through life with a face disfigured by a fuzzy growth, for if she will apply a plain delatone paste to the objectionable hairs for 2 minutes, then rub it off, every trace of hair will vanish. To make the paste, mix some water with powdered delatone. After the paste is removed, the skin should be washed to free it from the remaining delatone. Better results are obtained if the delatone is purchased in an original package.

Annual Concert of St. Mary's Convent

St. Alphonsus Lyceum in spite of the pouring rain, was well filled last night, for the annual concert of the musical department of St. Mary's Convent, and the concert was in every way worth the trouble. It was worthy both as a musical entertainment of itself and as additionally demonstrating in a very pleasant and effective way the admirable character of the musical instruction imparted by the musical staff of the Convent.

The programme was chiefly presented by pupils, but one exception was the work of a new member of the musical staff of the Convent, Miss Mignon Telgmann, violinist, whose performance of two double numbers, demonstrated her excellence of technique and orthodoxy of method, as well as her interpretative skill. She is a remarkably gifted young lady, and is a living embodiment of music—her heart is in her work. Her first offering was a double number, of contrasting styles, a Wieniawski Mazurka and a Minuet by Beethoven. The audience was delighted and enthusiastically demanded an encore—Carnival de Venise. Her second number was Musin's "Mazurka de Concert"—a brilliantly difficult piece, brilliantly performed and with the splendid and artistic abandon of a maestro, and "Angels' Lullaby," by the noted Canadian violinist, Alfred De Seve; this, played with muted strings and delicately as a dream, was perfect in performance. For an encore "Annie Laurie" was given. Miss Telgmann showed herself an artist of high capability, and she justified Bishop O'Brien's hearty congratulations to herself and to the Sisters and prospective pupils on her addition to the musical staff of the Convent. Her work last night was greatly helped, by very effective and really artistic accompaniments given by Miss Kathleen O'Brien.

The programme, except what has been referred to, was as follows:

Piano Duet—"La Chasse aux Gazelles," Calvini. A. Grant, M. Weatherhead.

Vocal—"Greeting Waltz," Macy. Sopranos: M. Quinlan, K. Moher, E. McCabe, E. Davis, G. Lane. Altos: M. Allan, G. Rudkins.

Japanese Fan Drill—Junior pupils.

Piano (six hands) — Overture: "Barbiere di Seviglia," Rossini. M. McDonald, B. Malane, L. Hill.

Piano Solo—"Marche Triumphale," Gloria. Bernice Giroux, A. T. C. M.

Vocal—"Last Night," Kjerulf. 1st soprano, M. Quinlan; 2nd soprano, E. McCabe; 1st alto, M. Allan, 2nd alto, G. Rudkins.

Distribution of medals and diplomas.

Accompanists, H. Pierce, K. O'Brien.

"God Save the King."

All the executants, from the primary performers to the advanced, both instrumental and vocal, gave evidence of rare proficiency, bespeaking competent instruction. Special mention may, however, be made of the brilliant performance of "Marche Triumphale," by Miss Bernice Giroux, who showed that she was well qualified to win the honour of a diploma carrying the title, A.T.C.M.—Associate of the Toronto College of Music. The fan drill by the girls was beautifully interesting and well done. Miss Harriett Pierce is to be congratulated upon the excellent accompaniment she furnished for the vocal numbers.

At the close of the concert the testimonials, prizes and diplomas were presented by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, as recorded in another column. He warmly expressed his appreciation of the excellent work done as a tribute to the excellence of the musical instruction of the Convent. He specially complimented Miss Telgmann, and said her work had given him a new idea of the wonderful musical capacity of the violin in an artist's hands. Similar commendation was made by Very Rev. Vicar General Casey, and Very Rev. Dean McColl.

"God Save the King" closed a delightful and interesting evening.

Addresses At The Convention

Ways and means of preventing the depopulation of the rural districts were enumerated yesterday in the course of an address delivered by Mr. Lawlor at the annual convention of the school teachers of the City and County of Peterborough. The sessions are being held in the Collegiate Institute. A large number of pedagogues from throughout the City and County are in attendance. The Convention concluded this morning following the election of officers for the year.

Three Causes.

Mr. Lawlor, who is Principal of the Norwood High School, attributed the exodus to the City of the youthful element of the country to three causes, namely: The cheapening of transportation, the invention of farm machinery and a radical social change. To offset this and thereby stem the tide, the speaker advocated concentrated effort on the part of teachers and parents; the exposition of the natural beauty of the country and the science of farming, also the profits to be accrued by farming. It might be good policy for the teachers, if possible, said the speaker, to encourage the parents to give the boy a "square deal." The Ontario Agricultural College, the Experimental Farm at Ottawa, and the County representatives of the Agricultural Department were always ready and will ing to lend their assistance in this regard.

A Community Affair.

Mrs. Miller of the Ontario Agricultural College would teach the youth of the present decade how to play, sing and relate stories more consistently. Mrs. Miller contended that it was a teacher's business to encourage good, wholesome play, both from a recreative and educational standpoint. Play is a community affair. It makes children happy and happy children are always good.

Singing was also regarded by the speaker as a powerful factor in the education of the child. "We do not sing as we have a right to sing," said Mrs. Miller.

Story telling is an excellent means of gaining, first, the attention, then the confidence of the child. It is the open sesame o the child's heart. Story telling enriches the vocabulary and improves the enunciation, inflexion and modulation of the voice. Stories should have a moral value, but the moral should be implied, not stated. To illustrate her meaning, Mrs. Miller read the "Gingerbread Man."

A Humourizing Effect.

Mr. White of the Normal School, Toronto, gave a brief address on "Modern Methods in Geography." "All methods," said the speaker "are liable to contamination by older theories. Geography should have a humanizing effect. This can be obtained by relating geographical facts to the lives of men. The power of memorization in children is stronger between the ages of eight and eleven than at any other period of their lives. This is an excellent time to impart locational geography. The senior work in the Public Schools should appeal to the power of judgment and reason.

The question of school hygenics was also taken up. It was contended that teachers should aim to develop simple habits of living. Even in the school-room the ordinary principles of health were frequently violated. Mr. Walker, President of the convention, spoke on the tendencies of education in the Province during the year, particularly in Peterborough. He complimented Mr. Mayberry, President of the Ontario Educational Association, for his services in connection with the Association.

was unable to account for the inspiration which prompted him to interest himself spiritually in the girl's welfare under the conditions in which she was found. It was like "casting bread upon the water," he asserted.

Added a Codicil.

A deathbed wish of the girl who was reclaimed through the instrumentality of Byrne, was that her share of her father's estate should be deeded to Byrne. The wish was carried out by the father and implied in his will in the form of a codicil. The Examiner was privileged to examine a true copy of the will, drafted at the instance of the late millionaire and bearing his cross. The latter bears silent testimony to the fact that Byrne's benefactor was unable to write, a fact which did not prevent him from amassing a large fortune. Affidavits affirming the legality of the document are attached to the will. Extracts in part from the will, state as follows: "This donation is made to Mr. Kidd, now David S. K. Byrne, our new son, as a gratification gift for the reclaiming of my daughter Lucy after twelve years of a life of shame. That if David S. Kidd will change his name to Byrne, he will rank as one of the legal heirs to the balance of my estate. That the residue of my estate, if any, is to be divided equally between my wife, Lucy Selina, son George, and David S. K. Byrne our new son." In the codicil to the will one quarter of the estate is bequeathed to David S. K. Byrne.

A Memorial Fund.

He will also have absolute control of a Memorial Trust fund exceeding a million dollars, the interest of which is to be expended in the erection of a memorial building in Toronto on settlement of the donator's estate. This will provide for the construction of a maternity hospital, an institute for girls and a church all under one roof. The institution will be interdenominational and exclusive of the church and will accommodate three hundred and fifty persons. The seating capacity of the church will be about 1,500. Mr. Byrne has been appointed sole trustee and treasurer. The sum of $5,000 has been set aside for a set of chimes to be installed in the memorial building and the hymns to be played are designated in the will as follows: "Blessed be the Tie That Binds," (deathbed hymn of Lucy Byrne); "Rock of Ages," (the mother's favourite hymn); "Sweeping Through the Gates," (the father's favourite hymn); "Rescue the Perishing" and the "Holy City."

Mr. Byrne, who is staying at Mr. B. J. Pollock's, 244 Antrim Street, will leave in a few days for Florida, where he expects to secure photographs of the interior and exterior of the hospital ward where the late Lucy Byrne was confined prior to her death. Similar photographs of the building in Chicago have been obtained by Mr. Byrne, and were shown the Examiner representative this morning. Mr. H. A. Ward of Port Hope is representing Mr. Byrne's Canadian interests, and Mr. S. Bloomfield is acting in a similar capacity for Mr. Byrne, on the other side of the border.

Has Local Relatives.

David Samuel Kidd-Byrne was born at Kidd's Corners, Lot 30, Con. 8, Hamilton Township, on July 8, 1868, being son of Arthur and Elizabeth Wood Kidd. He was educated at S. S. o. 5, and his teachers were: Jas. Pedley, Hilton Pedley, Charles Pedley, Robert Hosburg and sister, Wm. Muldrew, and Wordsworth Porter. The first named is now a distinguished divine. Mr. S. K. Byrne was educated at Pugwash Collegiate Institute in Nova Scotia. He was married on Dec. 10, 1889, to Miss Mary Ann Johnston of Millbrook, cousin of Dr. Johnson, of Port Hope, and daughter of Hugh Johnson, but she died Feb. 13, 1893. His second wife was Miss Janet La Warne, daughter of Nicholas LaWarne and Jane Hamilton LaWarne of Cobourg, marrying her on the 28th June, 1895. Three children blessed this union, only one surviving, viz., Clarence Ephraim Kidd.

The present Mrs. Byrne was a cousin of the late Peter Hamilton of this City, Wm. Hamilton of Cobourg, the late James Hamilton of Lindsay, and the late Miss Day of Cobourg.

The Morning Musical Society

Sir Edward Elgar Was the Master Studied

The second meeting of The Morning Musical Society was held at Mrs. Fessenden's on Thursday last.

A most interesting paper on Sir Edward Elgar, the eminent English composer, was read by Mrs. Allan; after which several numbers of his works were ably rendered by members, the programme being as follows:

Paper—Mrs. Allan.
Song—Miss Ruby Quartermaine.
Violin Solo—Mrs. Boyd.
Song — "Salut D'Amour," Mrs. Massey-Cooke.
Piano Solo—Minuet, Miss Fair.
Duet—Pomp and Circumstance, Mrs. Gliddon, Miss Gladman.

The next meeting will be held on Thursday, November 6th, at Mrs. W. H. Hill's, Bethune street, when Mendelssohn will be the master studied.

SUN SPOTS ARE PASSING OFF

There is now passing off the northwestern limb of the sun a very nice family of sun spots. These came on a day or two ago, but have been unobserved because of the cloudiness. This in the fourth group of sun spots since spring and is an evidence of the passing out of the mid-summer sun spot period.

There is a feeling of security, even though the baby is croupy or has a cold or whooping cough, when there is a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house.

Mothers of small children have learned that it can always be depended upon, that it is pleasant to take, and that there is not the least danger in giving it, even to babies.

RAILWAY NOTES

The Canadian Lines notified their Agents at various points to refuse all freight in fibreboard, pulpboard, or double faced corrugated strawboard packages, unless the packages are fully strong enough to carry the contents Complaints have been received from time to time, indicating that these packages are reaching destination in a damaged condition, evidence that shipments are being sent to the Railway in packages that are not of sufficient strength to safely transport their contents. Agents have, therefore, been notified that henceforward they must positively refuse to accept shipment of any nature, in fibreboard, pulpboard or double-faced corrugated strawboard packages, that do not comply fully with the requirements and specifications provided in the Canadian Freight Classification. In the past, Agents have had the right to accept such packages at an increased freight rate of 20 per cent. From now on, Agents have no option in the matter, and must refuse such packages.

Granulation Of The Eyelids

Is Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment—Scores of Uses for the Great Soothing, Healing Ointment.

Most people know Dr. Chase's Ointment best as a cure for eczema and itching piles. Nor is this to be wondered at when you think of the remarkable record made in this class of cases.

But there are scores of other uses for this ointment, which are only discovered when it is kept constantly at hand.

Mrs. Martin, 13 Carroll Street, Toronto, formerly of Bowmanville, Ont., writes: "We have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for years, and found it invaluable in treating skin irritations and all sorts of burns and wounds. In fact, we would not be without it in the house. It is a most excellent treatment for granulated eyelids, from which I suffered without finding anything to help me."

Wherever there is itching of the skin or a sore that refuses to heal you can use Dr. Chase's Ointment with full assurance that it will prove entirely satisfactory. 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto

PERMITS FOR THE WEEK

Show a Substantial Increase—Four New Houses to Be Built

The housing problem in Peterborough will be ameliorated to the extent of at least four new houses. Permits for the construction of the quartette of homes were taken out during the week ending Oct. 25th. One of them, in fact, was issued upon the day that Sanitary Inspector Spence delivered an address to the local Council of Women, and which contained special reference to the housing problem as it was said to exist in Peterborough.

House construction has not decreased to any extent since the advent of Autumn, and indications point to a continuance of the present activity. Nothing but the possibility of a shortage in building supplies remain to mar the prospects of a record season in so far as building operations are concerned.

Permits Issued.

Building permits for the week include the following:

W. H. McDonald — Brick veneer dwelling on Olive Avenue. Estimated cost, $1900.

J. J. Lynch—Brick veneer dwelling on Lock Street. Cost $1700.

George Metcalfe — Brick veneer dwelling on Stewart Street. Cost $2,500.

Fred J. Agnew—Stable at 214 Munroe Avenue. Cost $40.

H. G. Walker — Alterations to dwelling at 774 George Street. Cost $275.

J. J. Meharry—Frame dwelling on Monaghan Road. Cost $900.

The total valuation equals $6,615. This is a substantial increase over that of the preceding week. A total of six permits were issued for the week. Four out of the six permits call for the construction of new dwelling houses.

BARS PHOTOS IN WATCHES.

Illinois Central's Efficiency Order to Operating Employes.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—No longer may engineers, conductors, brakemen, and other employes in the operating department of the Illinois Central Railroad carry pictures of their wives, sweethearts, and babies on their watch crystals. An order against the practice was issued yesterday and distributed to-day by the management.

Officials of the company have decided that such pictures are likely to distract the attention of employes from their work, and that accidents might result. The order also specifies plain dials of a uniform design.

"This rule may seem to be a small matter, but, after all, it is the little things that count," said Vice-President W. L. Park in discussing the order. "Every railroad man will admit that success in the operating department requires strict attention to duty."

Exports Doubled

Examiner Special:

LONDON, ONT., Oct. 25.— Figures just being compiled, show that the export of oats, cattle, hay and dairy products from this district into the United States has just doubled since the reduction in tariff went into effect. American buyers are still scouring the district contracting for huge quantities of cattle and dairy produce. As a result the prices are steadily rising.

MEN NOW DECOLLETES.

Fashion from Vienna Seen at a Paris Theatre—Not Well Received.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—A strong attempt is being made in Vienna, where the season is at its height, to introduce a "decollete" fashion for men. Shirts of silk are worn, with a soft roll collar. A "V"-shaped opening is left in front, showing about three inches of neck.

The new mode was first seen in Paris at a theatre last nigt. Two young men appeared in the stalls wearing the open-neck shirts with evening dress. They were not well received.

Cries of protest were heard, but the young men stayed obstinately until the end of the performance.

THE HISTORY AND MEANING OF THE MEXICAN MUDDLE

The history of the Mexican muddle may be summed up in a few words. After a long and successful, though despotic administration, President Diaz was expelled from the country by the usual revolutionary process, and General Madero succeeded. But revolution was more prompt in his case, and he was deposed; and President Huerta followed. Shortly after Madero was murdered, if not by the authority of Huerta, yet evidently with his connivance and approval. Another revolution followed, which is still in progress, though Huerta holds the seat of government and its vicinity.

Some of the European governments were disposed to recognize Huerta; in fact Great Britain did recognize him to a certain extent, as de facto president. The United States ambassador at Mexico advocated his recognition. But President Wilson hesitated. He wanted some evidence that Huerta was going to be recognized by his own people. And even then he was not disposed to recognize the person who had sustained himself in his position by assassination. He demanded that there should be an election by the people; that the election should be free and untrammelled; and that Huerta himself should not be a candidate. The latter professed to be indignant that his good faith and honour should be questioned, but finally seemed to acquiesce, and arrangements were made for the election.

But as proceedings developed it became quite evident that Huerta was not to be trusted. He made claims that he could not substantiate, and promises that he evidently had no intention of fulfilling. He claimed that the rebellion was practically quelled, but it is growing stronger. He claimed to have secured a large loan in Europe, but it turns out that he only obtained the renewal of an old loan, and that he is really bankrupt. While negotiating with the United States and expressing a desire to act in harmony with it, he sent an envoy to London to stir up financial and political interests in his favour against the Government at Washington. At the same time, and for the same purpose, he was sending an envoy to Japan, but Japan declined to receive him. He promised that a regular and legal election would be held this month, and implemented his promise by arresting a large number of the deputies in the Legislature. And though he subsequently released them, yet this, in connection with the arrangements he made for the election, showed plainly that he was determined to control it, and have his own candidate chosen.

Now, what can be done with such a man, or with a country in which such men can attain position and power? Some hold that the United States should allow all parties in Mexico to import all the arms and munitions they want, and fight it out among themselves. But there are European and American interests at stake; foreigners are engaged in business there, and neither their property nor their lives will be safe if unlimited internecine war is to go on. Should foreign governments interfere and enforce order? There is much to be said for this course. When a domestic fight occurs, and pistol shots are flying, the police come down on the house. And if the police are not available, or are slow in arriving, the neighbours are justified in going in, and quelling the disturbance. Self-defense justifies that course, for the bystander in a fight is always in danger.

If interference is permissible and advisable in the case of Mexico, the United States is evidently the party to step in. The European Governments interested would not object—would, in fact, be very well pleased. But the idea does not meet with universal favour in the neighbouring republic. It means committing the Government to a sort of moral responsibility for the good behaviour of all disorderly neighbours. And there are plenty of them in Spanish America. It was tried in the case of Cuba. Though that was a good thing for Cuba, it involved the United States in a great war, and it gave the country a responsible and expensive protectorate in the Pacific. To undertake the reorganization and control of Mexico would add another heavy burden.

The only remedy for conditions like the one we are discussing is an international court, with an international police force to carry out its decisions. Such a tribunal is not available now, nor possible in the immediate future, though we have no doubt it will be established some time. Until that does come to pass, the only thing left is for small communities which show themselves incompetent for self-government to be considered under the watch and care of some powerful neighbour. It cannot be done in all cases, for sometimes the greater powers will be too jealous to agree on a guardian. But in the case of the United States and Mexico there would be no such objection.—London Advertiser.

INDEPENDENCE IN THE HOME

By RUTH CAMERON

Three young matrons were chatting over their family affairs one day.

Said one of them, "Oh I must tell you the good news. My Mother-in-law isn't going to live with us this winter after all. She's going to take an apartment with her widowed sister."

"Isn't that fine?" cried one of the matrons.

"Im so glad," said the other.

And then, being young people with an unusual sense of humour, they all began to laugh at their own frankness.

"I suppose we ought to be ashamed of ourselves for talking this way," said the young woman who had announced the "good news."

"But what's the use? We all feel that way and we might as well admit it. And I know it isn't because we dislike our mothers-in-law either. I'm sure mine is a dear. She can't do enough for us and I'd as lief have her with us as any-one I know. But oh I'd so much rather not have any one in our little house except David and the baby and me. Isn't it queer? I'm ashamed of myself sometimes, but I just can't help feeling that way."

Do you think this woman had any thing to be ashamed of? I don't.

She was merely expressing the universal desire for independence of life.

Of course if the mother-in-law had needed a home, it would have been her duty to give it and give graciously; and knowing her, I feel sure that she would have done so. But I don't blame her, nor the other women for being glad that they could preserve the unity of the family and their own independence.

I believe that every human being, or group of human beings, should have all the independence possible without infringing upon the rights and privileges of others.

I believe that if we all allowed each other more independence we should be happier.

For instance, I think children are far better off when they are allowed all the independence of action compatible with the rights of the rest of the family and their own best interests. If possible a child should have a room which belongs entirely to him and be king within that room. He should be allowed to arrange it to suit himself, and should be responsible for its condition. The rest of the family should respect his rights—by knocking before entering.

Again, I think husbands and wives are far happier together when each allows the other a large measure of independence. A great deal of unhappiness is caused by assuming that husbands and wives must like exactly the same things and spend all their leisure time together. Now two people may love each other most tenderly, and yet each enjoy certain things which the other does not. The conventional assumption in such cases is that one or both must be sacrificed to a unity of interests. Why should anyone be sacrificed? Why shouldn't the husband read and the wife play cards with their neighbours for an hour or two, if he likes best to read and she to play bridge? They will still have plenty of time to be together and will probably enjoy that time much more.

Chains are burdensome things even when they bind us to those we love.

We all enjoy independence and by that same token we ought to be willing to give it to others.

Record Trestle Building.

A timber trestle 3,500 feet long and varying from 30 to 40 feet in height across Newark Bay, in New Jersey, was rebuilt in 11 days and six hours by the Pennsylvania railroad maintenance-of-way forces, and local contractors. Fire destroyed the trestle early in the morning. With the burning structure fell 35 freight cars loaded with produce. The removal of the steel rails, wrecked cars and other debris, required about 36 hours, and was hastened by the use of the oxyacetylene blow-pipe, which is a part of the regular equipment of Pennsylvania wrecking trains. The burned trestle piles were sawed off below water mark, and capped. Upon this foundation, a new two-track trestle was erected to replace the old four-track trestle, two tracks of which were owned by the Pennsylvania and two by the Lehigh Valley. The new trestle is now operated as a double-track trestle for the use of two companies jointly. In rebuilding, 1,000 men were employed at times and the equipment consisted of 14 pile drivers, six marine derricks, two marine wreckers, two air compressors and an erection car.

Recollections Of A Landlord

"The man with houses to rent has to contend with many difficulties and problems, and receives no sympathies," recently remarked the owner of a string of houses whose revenues have put him on easy street.

"There should, in the first place, be a protective association of landlords so that the individual member would be in a position to catalogue persons who are seeking a roof to shut out the weather and the wolf. Then if a house is left in an unsatisfactory condition the landlord could notify the association and every other member of it would be forewarned. He could then suit himself in regard to renting his houses.

With the present utter lack of system the landlord simply has to take a chance when he lets his house to someone he is not well acquainted with, and he considered himself fortunate when he gets a good tenant. Where is there any other business that is so blindly entered into as this?

Of course, there are some exceptions. I have known a few landlords, and I might say landladies, who make it their business to inquire into the housekeeping ideas that are in force in their houses. I have seen them warn the tenants' children that the front lawns were not intended for romping plots, that the verandah posts and filigree work were not unbreakable and that gate hinges were not made to carry a "parcel of children."

"I know one landlord who took a great deal of pains with the appearance of his property. He got a new tenant early one spring, and about the time the grass was beginning to grow he noticed that his tenant's taste in this particular was not very pronounced. Finally he said one evening.

"Why don't you cut the lawn. It's beginning to look pretty wild."

"I haven't a mower," was the reply.

"Well, you can use mine any time you like," the landlord said.

"It's too much trouble anyway," replied the tenant, "I don't own the house. The last place I had the landlord had a man cut the lawn when he couldn't do it himself."

Then the landlord replied: "If that is the way yo uregard the house you had better look around for a new one."

And he got rid of him. He told me that he would not trust that fellow any farther and I did not blame him.

"The need of protective measures against bad tenants was emphasized to me one time when I had only a house or two. Another owner asked me to go up and look at a place that had just been vacated. I went, and you would hardly believe that a place could be left in such an untidy and disgusting condition. The kitchen could have been worse if pigs had been kept in it. Yet, they got another house and I suppose they will give the landlords a dose of the same stuff. It was surprising to me, for I knew the family, and they were in very "comfortable circumstances."

It just goes to show that a majority of tenants do not realize that they have certain responsibilities towards their landlords. They adopt an attitude of we should worry, and to the landlords and his rights they give him a thought once a month and generally regard him as a robber.

If there were some way, and there are easy way if the landlords would get together, of checking up these people and making it difficult to get houses, they would soon realize their position and many of the present difficulties would be removed.

GETS EUGENIC CERTIFICATE.

Prospective Bridegroom Receives the First Issued by the Government.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Homer B. Terrill, a Government architect of this city, got the first eugenic certificate issued by the United States Public Health Service.

Terrill, about to marry, went to Surgeon General Blue and asked for the examination. Assistant Surgeon General Rucker and the other doctors put Terrill through the most approved line of investigation known to the science of eugenics and pronounced him fit. Terrill's fiancee had previously taken a similar examination conducted by her own physician.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

SOME INTERESTING ISSUES ARE EXPECTED TO-DAY

Middlesboro and Bolton Wanderers Match is Interesting From the Fact That the Teesiders Beat Their Opponents in Corresponding Game Last Year---When Danny Shea Left the Wilds of West Ham.

First division clubs in the English League are this week paired up in just about as interesting a manner as could possibly be wished for. The Villans of Birmingham should just about find a winning vein at the expense of Chelsea, though the way in which they have been moving sin the opening day of the season does not give their supporters much to enthuse over. One can rest assured, however, that the Villa will eventually improve, and under ordinary circumstances should make a beginning in that direction on Saturday. In the same game last year the Pensioners were only beaten by the odd goal of the game, and if this be any criterion to go by, the Brummagem gentlemen will have to get a hustle on.

In the Bradford City and Sunderland game the Wearsiders walked away with honours last year at the Yorkshiremen's expense to the tune of 5-1. But it's a case of the mighty having fallen now, and looks as if last year's champions will be faced with a mighty hard task in sharing the honours on this occasion.

Derby County and West Bromwich A. should produce a rare tussle, and will find form students something to do to pick the winner. The Albion triumphed last year by 2-1.

Liverpool and Oldham A. should keep the Merseyside people on the tip-toe of excitement during the whole ninety minutes. Liverpool gained the verdict by 2-0 in the same game last season.

Manchester City and Everton is another good thing. The Cits need points and will have to go all the way to eat up the toffee men. They did it last year by the odd goal of the game.

Middlesboro and Bolton Wanderers are interesting from the fact that the Teesiders beat the Trotters 4-0 in their corresponding game last year. Bolton are now doing well. Can they keep it up? That is the question to solve.

The Uniteds of Manchester and Newcastle will meet at St. James' park. A grand battle should result, for did not the Manchester men trim the Novocastrians to the tune of 3-1 last year on this occasion? 'Nuff said, there's bound to be something doing, and the Geordies have got top weight on.

Preston at home against Burnley are bound to make a bold bid to annex a much needed couple of points. The result was draw 1-1 when the clubs met each other in the same engagement last season. The Turf Moor men will be hard to beat, and the proud Prestonians are faced with a hard task.

Sheffield United and Wednesday day will of course be a "Derby day" in the cutlery city. The Wednesday turned the trick by the score of 2-0 last year. Wednesday invariably win at Brennall Lane. Will history repeat itself again? is a very interesting query.

Tottenham Hotspur and Blackburn Rovers will also find the latter in the position of leaders as having to go the pace at a merry clip in their effort to hold on to their unbeaten certificate. Hotspurs are pretty hot stuff this season, while the Rovers have made themselves greatly respected persons all over the land. To land another brace of points, or share the honours, means they'll have to be at their best again. A good game should result in any case.

Clapton (F.A.) and the Old Malvernians (A.F.A.) have already provisionally arranged to renew their old-time Boxing Day fixture which has been in abeyance since 1907, whilst another equally well-known Isthmian league club is contemplating a visit from one of the 'Varsities in the near future. Even Dulwich Hamlet are looking forward to renewing acquaintance with local rivals in Alleyn and Townley Park. The healing of the breach will make an immense difference to the London area.

When Danny Shea left the wilds of Wets Ham for the pastoral placidity of Blackburn he was expected to immolate himself on the altar which has been built to signify the greatness of John Simpson. From the time Simpson left Falkirk until the time when Shea left West Ham the chief concern of thousands of people was to find a partner for Simpson. The English Football Association selectors brought forward several seemingly eligible parties, but John, of Falkirk, would have none of them. At length the Simpson-Shea union was brought about and now all is peace. They make a great wing, these two, and one begins to wonder whether Shea is going to be the predominant partner. So far Shea has shown no sign of subordinating himself to Simpson. He has, indeed, developed his individuality since he arrived at Ewood, and those who know him best say that he is a young man with a very decided mind of his own.

The Big Leagues

(By Christie Matthewson)

There has been a vast change in the tone of the big leagues since I first started. Few fights occur between players either on the same clubs or rival clubs now. I recall the time when every club house was the scene of several tough battles each season, and "scraps" on the field, between the men on rival teams were common. The old "shellbacks" of baseball argue that this improvement has not advanced the game. I believe it has.

"When ball players were rough they were steadier," said "Pop" Anson to me when I met him the other day. "Since ball players started getting their finger nails manicured and wearing silk shirts with their initials on them and having temperament, the game ain't what it was. That was what was the trouble with the Giants in the world's series. Now take my old White Stockings—"

I don't agree with "Pop." There used to be a lot of good ball players in the old days, but I don't figure where the White Stockings in their prime would have been any better than the Athletics we met in the world's series. That is a great ball club, to my mind the greatest I ever saw, and there is no scrappy tendency among the players except to win ball games. They have the reputation of being the best behaved lot of men in the game. The desire for physical encounter is often false courage. But there used to be some great battles.

A Little Meeting in Centre Field.

They tell a story about Tinker and Egan, the second baseman of the Cincinnati Reds up to this year. While Tinker was playing with the Cubs, his fiery temper got him into many arguments which had to be settled according to Marquis of Queensbury rules with certain amendments which permitted kicking and biting. Tinker and Egan got into some sort of a mix-up at second base in a game one day, and Egan challenged the shortstop of the Cubs to a battle after the contes.

Joe is quick empered, but he gets over his outbursts rapidly. Before he was dressed he had forgotten the incident and the challenge, remembering only that he had a date and must dress with the speed of a fireman to keep the appointment, as the contest had been a long one. On the other hand, the matter rankled in Egan's mind, so, as soon as he had got dressed, he made his way to the Chicago Club House in search of Tinker and a battle. Joe had already departed, but only a minute or so before.

"He's just crossing the field," said Chance. It was necessary to cross the playing field to get out of the Cubs' club house into the street.

"Well, he said he'd fight me," replied Egan, "and he's running out now. I guess he knew when he was well off."

"Tinker never ran away from a fight in his life," answered Chance, who knew Joes disposition well. "I'll get him for you."

Chance went out on the field, after slipping on a sweater, with Egan in his wake. Tinker was just passing second base.

"Hey, Joe," yelled Chance.

Eganhad started to sprint across the field in pursuit. Tinker turned, and the whole thing came back to his mind. He tore off his coat and ran toward Egan. They met in centre field, and, with many of the Cubs looking on, many of them dressed like September Morn, the two players had a battle. My source of information says that Tinker got a very positive decision. Then he straightened up his necktie and hurried along to keep his date.

A Game That Pugilism Never Helped.

There used to be some good battlers on the old Giants when fellows like Devlin, Bresnahan, Donlin, Dahlen, Gilbert and McCann were in the box score. Devlin and Bresnahan had an argument in the club house one day that is still a matter of league history, about which more later. Devlin was one of the handiest men in the big league with his "duks".

The contention is that players of this type do not pay as much attention to newspaper criticism and are better in a short series where the steady hand and the mind which does not become nervous and shaky is the big feature. But the Athletics stand out to refute his argument. You never hear of any trouble on Mack's club and I did not notice any display of nervousness during the series. I believe that ball players are coming into the game younger now, without such long, rough rehearsals in the minor leagues, because of the demand of speed, and the fast men are the youthful ones. The great amount of publicity attendant on the world's series may worrythe younger men to some degree. Old birds like Dahlen, McGann and that bunch never cared what the papers said about them. But what I want to add that ball players are living more carefully now and training more conscientiously. The pugilists of baseball never helped the game any.

Walking Regarded Best Of Exercises

"Walking when considered from every aspect is the greatest of all exercises," said Carl H. Burkhardt, physical director of the Buffalo Public schools.

"Exercises if taken in but one form such as vaulting, basketball or football, in most cases, are not helpful to the body, but rather tend to deform the body. Considering safety and benefits to the body, exercises should be classed as follows: Walking, first; swimming, second; climbing, third, and balancing, fourth.

"People should develop endurance and walking is one of the best means to be used Some of the world's greatest writers were consistent walkers, among them being Sir Walter Scott and Robert Louis Stevenson.

"Boys living within a radius of three miles of their school and girls within two miles should walk. Walking should be begun moderately and gradually increased.

The following set of rules was laid down by Mr. Burkhardt for wholesome and effective walking: In the matter of clothes. For boys, stout shoes, short coats and protected hands and ears; for girls, low heels, and suitable garments. He enumerated four points to be observed in walking: Walk fast, walk regularly, dress properly, breathe deeply.

COUNTRY ROADS ARE SOFT AND MUDDY

The country roads in all sections of the surrounding district have been badly softened by the recent few days of rain. The farmers who came to market this morning experienced the effect of this with the result that it took many of them a much longer time than usual to reach the City. Consequently the transactions on the Market Square were delayed, and it was not until late this morning that things took their usual brisk turn.

The road from Springville to the City seems to have suffered least of any, but even that highway is in a very bad condition for the last couple of miles leading into the City. All the other roads, and perhaps more than the rest, the ones leading southwest into Otonabee, have suffered considerably.

The farmers anticipated an even worse journey homeward than coming to the City, as the heavy Saturday traffic is almost certain to wear provoking and dangerous holes in the thoroughfares.

City Entertains The Citizens

And a Special Item to That Effect Should be Included in Statement of Cost

Although it would involve intricate calculation, an expert in abstract matters might be able to figure out the sum owing the City for the entertainment afforded large numbers of the enlightened electorate in the work of street paving. The City appointed an Inspector for the work, and a host of citizens appointed themselves assistants in that office. They began duties out near the corner of Aylmer and Hunter streets, when many pairs of eyes popped at the expeditious manner in which the cement was spilled upon the prepared roadway. But the novelty of this apparatus was just beginning to wear off when along came the asphalt "topping" crew with their rakes, pounders, wooden shoes and pungent odours; and the little road roller used for compressing the surface of the asphalt, was the headliner on the bill. It has been running a dizzy, circuitous course along Hunter street to the west of George street, and this morning began on the George-to-Water stretch. The crowd on the sidewalk has watched the rapid manoeuvrings of the little roller until they felt themselves whirling and their eyes were crossed. Several men even wagered a nickel that it would run up over the sidewalk, and another wanted to know where the traffic squad was. But the engineer buzzed away, rolling out the wrinkles. It is, therefore, about time some city official either passed around the hat and informed the Board of Education that a civic school of applied science is operating under the most approved outdoor conditions, or extend a vote of thanks to the citizens' inspectors, who have given their valuable time and expert knowledge gratuitously.

Lift Lock Out Of Commission

Owing to the loosening and dropping off of a hinge from one of the gates of the lift-lock, that structure has been out of commission for the past three or four days, and crafts which were visiting the upper lakes found themselves unable to get back. The Beaver, which is towing wood for the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company, is one of the steamers affected, while several launch owners who made the holiday trip to Stoney Lake, have been unable to get down to their home ports. However, a diver has been at work and has located the trouble, and the canal authorities state that the lock will be working as usual to-night or on Monday morning.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

Extreme dulness prevailed at the opening this morning and the market's tone was heavy with fractional losses all through the active issues. There is an inclination to await the outcome of the election in Mexico, but the hope was felt that a change for the better would occur soon in relation to the United States and the neighbouring Republic.

Pennsylvania rallied yesterday afternoon but opened 5-8 off, owing to the publication in newspapers of the announcement of a new stock issue.

President Wilson will notify the powers that any interference in Mexican affairs will be unfriendly to this Government.

Reports show that the business situation is fairly satisfactory. Monday will probably present an irregular and waiting market on account of the developments of importance scheduled to take place on Sunday. The Mexican situation has made many operators cautious and disinclined to make any large commitments on either side.

There is a scale absorption; but it takes no notice of the foreign troubles.

In addition, it is said there will be important steel news developments over Sunday. This subject is a very active feature in the speculative mind at present. On Monday the Supreme Court is expected to hand down some important decisions. In view of this it is probable that even Monday will reflect uncertainty unless something definite develops between now and "decision time". The market shows a trading area, but with very good buying on declines, and we think the conservative operator who buys such stocks as U. P. Rds., S.P., G.Q., N.P., Erie, G. W. and St. Paul, when they are weak, will have no cause for regret.

READY TO CONFER

Home Rule Principles Stand However, Says Asquith

FOR THE SAKE OF IRELAND

ernment Consents to Compromise.

LONDON, Oct. 27—(Through Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Right Hon. H. H. Asquith, Prime Minister, addressed an enthusiastic meeting of his constituents at Ladybank, East Fife, Scotland, Saturday evening. He dealt exclusively with the question of home rule and emphasized the Government intention to make use of the Parliament Act in order to give Liberal legislation something approaching an equal chance with their opponents. The Government, he said, had declared in favor of home rule when they had an overwhelming majority over all parties, and the last election was fought with the knowledge that home rule would come next to the passing of the Parliament Act. It would have been the grossest breach of public faith to put off this legislation.

Mr. Asquith affirmed that the Government still believed that as the bill now stood the Irish Legislature which it would bring into existence, even if it had the disposition, which the Government did not believe it to have, would not and could not have the power to be guilty of acts of oppression against the minority. He pointed out that the Lords had not attempted to modify, amend or improve the bill. The Prime Minister paid a tribute to the loyalty and self-sacrifice of the Irish party in the House of Commons.

The bill as it left the Commons, continued the Prime Minister, had been twice rejected by the House of Lords, but had the hearty approval of the whole Liberal party in Great Britain and of the vast majority of the Nationalists, and there was abundant evidence that it had practically the united support of all the great self-governing dominions. (Cheers.)

"In these circumstances," proceeded Mr. Asquith, "there is in my opinion a complete constitutional case for proceeding in the next session with the Irish government bill and for applying to it the provisions of the Parliament Act. Ought the action of statesmen to be affected or deflected by the menace of forcible resistance to the execution of the law? (Long and continued cheering.) The doctrines preached during the last two years in the North of Ireland, which I regret to say have received countenance in responsible quarters in this country, are a negation of the first principle of Parliamentary, still more of democratic, government. No, we need not, and shall not be intimidated by the threat of force." (Prolonged cheering.)

Then speaking slowly and deliberately the Prime Minister said: "I have more than once expressed the hope and belief that the new system of government in Ireland would be brought into operation without recourse to armed forces by the crown, but if a statute deliberately enacted by Parliament were to be met by organized armed resistance it would clearly be not only the right but the duty of the executive to assert the authority of the law by every appropriate and adequate means." (Loud cheers.)

There were two obvious reasons why all patriotic men should desire a settlement of the Home Rule problem by consent. In the first place, there was the supreme importance of the future well-being of Ireland. The new system should not start with the apparent triumph of one section, however preponderent in numbers, nor with the apparent humiliation of another section. He firmly believed that the then existing irritants would prove more durable and effective than their differences, if the unifying process were given a fair chance of success. It was worth paying even a considerable price to secure the absence of ill-will and the possibility of co-operation.

Then the second reason was that whatever was done should be regarded by all parties as resting upon a solid foundation and capable of future development beyond the risks of party vicissitudes. Ireland had far too long been the cockpit of British politics. (Cheers.) Proposals, however, made in perfectly good faith and good will, for a mermal conference of the party leaders, did not appear to him to be practically helpful. A conference without defined limits would be almost certainly abortive and would probably leave matters worse: nor was a conference necessary if there was a genuine disposition in all quarters, by an interchange of suggestions, free and frank, without prejudice, to contribute to the common stock.

"I invite that interchange," added Mr. Asquith. "Both I and my colleagues are ready to take part in it. (Cheers.) We should not depart, however, from the root and principle of the bill—a subordinate Irish Parliament at Dublin with an executive responsible to it. (Cheers.) In the second place, nothing must be done to erect a permanent barrier to Irish unity. Thirdly, while the importance of the extension of devolution to the United Kingdom is fully realized, the claim of Ireland is prior in point of urgency."

JEWS ARE IN PERIL.

Serious Anti-Semite Outbreak Is Brewing in Kiev.

KIEV, Oct. 27.—As the trial of Mendel Beilins, charged with murdering the Christian boy, Andrew Yushinsky, in March, 1911, proceeds, the uneasy feeling is growing that, whatever its result, attempts at Jewish persecutions will follow. Despatches from various quarters indicate active preparations in this direction. The Black Hundred Organ, The Two-Headed Eagle, in its inflammatory article yesterday, commenting on alleged Jewish threats against Russia, published in the Viannese press, calls on its readers "to remember always and everywhere the infamous words uttered by Jewish publicists, and that the Jews dare to insult the sacred name of our adored emperor and menace his sacred person and the whole imperial family."

Vera Tcheberiak's convict brother, Singaievsky, and his accomplice, Rudsinsky, testified Saturday. Both were in prison uniform. Singaievsky denied that he had ever seen Yushinsky. Rudsinsky denied knowing Vera.

At the trial Saturday two secret police agents, in confirming former chief of Police Krassovsky's evidence, testified that while posing as criminals, they had learned from Singaievsky that he, with Rudsinsky and Latisheff had killed Yushinsky in Vera's house.

The police yesterday arrested many persons in the suburbs of Kiev on the charge of attempting to incite riots against the Jews.

To Take Over Exhibition.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Earl Grey, ex-Governor-General of Canada, and the Earl of Kintore, with an influential committee, have taken over the proposed Anglo-American Exhibition, which is to be held in London in 1914, and having eliminated the commercial element, have made it a part of the centenary peace celebrations which are to occur on both sides of the Atlantic in that year.

Organizers have leased the exposition buildings, which are ready for occupation, and all the profits will be handed over to the American-British peace committees for the purpose of scholarships and prizes in connection with the educational, social and commercial economics of both countries.

ENGAGED IN BATTLE

Mine Guards and Strikers in Conflict in Colorado

FOUGHT FOR TWELVE HOURS

LUDLOW, Colo., Oct. 27.—A general battle between strikers, mine guards and deputy sheriffs, was waged for twelve hours yesterday in Berwin Canyon at Hastings and in the vicinity of the Colorado and southern station at Ludlow.

Firing started at three o'clock yesterday morning and continued intermittently until nearly four o'clock in the afternoon. One mine guard was killed and, according to union men, one striker is missing.

The situation is extremely critical to-day. More than seven hundred armed strikers are reported to be in the field against the mine guards.

Armed strikers patrol the entire district in the vicinity of Ludlow and communication with the camps of Cedar Hill, Tollerburg, Berwin, Hastings, Del Augua and Tobasco has practically been cut off.

The firing started in the vicinity of the Colorado and Southern Bridge, the zone of Saturday's battle. At daylight yesterday the strikers from the Ludlow tent colony made their way along the hills past Cedar Hill to Tobasco and opened a heavy fire on that camp.

The guard who was killed was struck while returning the fire of the strikers near the Mine Tipple at Tobasco.

The attack on Hastings began at about 11 o'clock. Shots rained on the camp from two-quarters for nearly two hours, but according to the officials of the Victor American Fuel Co. no serious damage was done.

The final skirmish of the day was an attack by the strikers along the Colorado and Southern tracks, near Barnes Station, on a passing Denver and Rio Grande train, which the strikers declared was carrying mine guards.

MONS. MONTAGNINI DEAD.

Well-Known Prince of Roman Church Widely Mourned.

ROME, Oct. 27.—The death of Mons. Montagnini, reported to the pope Saturday from Berlin, has caused great grief at the Vatican. He had been suffering recently from an affection of the throat and was operated on a few days ago.

Mons. Montagnini was very popular at the Vatican and was much esteemed by Cardinal Merry Del Val, who took him to London when he went to attend King Edward's coronation.

At the time of the rupture between France and the Vatican Cardinal Merry Del Val entrusted Mons. Montagnini with the charge of the Nunciature after the Papal Nuncio, Mons. Lorenzelli, left Paris. When former Premier Clemenceau later expelled Mons. Montagnini, Cardinal Merry Del Val appointed the distinguished prelate to a post in the office of the papal secretary of state, where he remained until last winter, when he was nominated special envoy from the Vatican to Colombia.

Level Crossing Tragedy.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Oct. 27.—Garfield Fleming, aged 22, drove a traveller in a livery right from Tillsonburg to Aylmer, and on his return was struck and killed by a G.T.R. train at a crossing near Glencoe.

MINISTRY RE-ELECTED.

Italian Cabinet Successful at Polls—Clerics Voted.

ROME, Oct. 27.—General elections were held throughout Italy yesterday. The disorders were not as grave as expected, although one person was killed and man were wounded.

Numerous arrests were made in various quarters.

The balloting was light, because, on account of the spring-like weather, the people preferred to go on excursions rather than to the polls. Results of the elections will not be definitely known until late Monday, but already the Government is assured of a large majority.

Giovanni Giolitti, the Premier, has been re-elected almost unanimously with the other members of the Cabinet. Others elected include ex-Premiers Baron Sidney Sonnino and Luigi Luzzatti, the ex-governor of Erythrea; Ferdinando Martini, the Socialist leader; Leonida Bissolati-Bergamaschi, the Republican leader; Signor Barzilai and the former Minister of Public Instruction, Nunzio Nasi, who served a term in prison for embezzlement and later was elected several times to the Chamber of Deputies, only to have his election annulled.

In a hundred constituencies a fierce struggle was waged, especially between the Socialists and Catholics, and in these a second ballot will be taken next Sunday.

In some constituencies, particularly in the Venetian Provinces, ecclesiastics voted openly. At Cesena the bishop was the first to go to the polls.

So far as returns have been received, 197 Liberals or Ministerialists have been elected, as well as 28 Moderates, 17 Socialists, 14 Republicans and 10 Clericals.

WELCOME WAS QUIET.

Governor-General's Party Greeted at Ottawa by Cabinet.

OTTAWA, Oct. 27.—Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and the Princess Patricia with the royal suite were given an undemonstrative yet warm welcome home at six o'clock Saturday evening by nearly all the members of the Cabinet Council and their wives, a few other prominent people and a big crowd of the general public. The special C.P.R. train of nine coaches steamed into the Central Station sharp on scheduled time.

When Their Royal Highnesses alighted they shook hands with the Cabinet Ministers and their wives and others. Contrary to reports the duchess was in excellent health, and for a few minutes she and the Princess Patricia held animated conversation with Mrs. Borden, wife of the Premier. Mr. Borden was with the royal party on their trip from Quebec.

Their Royal Highnesses and suite left Ottawa for England on March 19 last owing to the severe illness of the duchess.

Shortly after their arrival the party were driven immediately to Government House, which was entirely renovated during their absence. They remained indoors yesterday owing to the inclement weather.

Killed at Crossing.

CHATHAM, Oct. 27.—While returning from church about 1.30 yesterday, Thomas Sparks of North Buxton, was struck by a westbound M.C.R. express at the North Buxton crossing and instantly killed. Sparks, who was about 70 years of age, has lived in the town for the last eighteen years and in the vicinity of Buxton for the past forty years. He at one time owned a farm, but in later years he has been working for others. He leaves a wife.

ELECTION A FIASCO

Nearly Everybody in Mexico Stayed Away From Polls

VOTE MAY BE ANNULLED

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 27.—There are eighty thousand voters in Mexico but more of them turned out yesterday afternoon at the usual Sunday bull fight than chose to exercise the right of franchise at the Presidential elections held yesterday.

The election passed off without a ripple. So far as outward evidence may be taken there was not the slightest interest to the average Mexican citizen in what was going on at the polls. There was less curiosity if anything as to what the result of the polls would show. Police and soldiers had an idle day, in anticipation of possible disturbances, the entire force of gendarmes remained on duty, while several hundred troops were drawn into the city from other parts of the federal districts. Soldiers loafed in their barracks and the police sunned themselves, smoked cigarettes and gossiped.

The leaders of the Catholic party claimed a long lead, although they were unable to estimate the number of votes polled for their candidates, Federico Gamboa and Gen. Rascon.

If this claim is correct it is generally thought that Gen. Felix Dias and Senor Requensa ran second.

The Liberal candidates, Manuel Calero and Flores Magon, had no printed ticket at their polling places, their constituents being obliged to write their names in blank ballots.

Since the Deputies and Senators are not subject to the election provisions governing the Presidential election, it is said that the choice of Congress is assured. It is assumed, on the showing so far as known, the Catholic party will secure a majority in both Chamber and Senate.

No police and soldiers were on guard at the polls. Observation made at thirty polling places in widely separated sections of the city by correspondents shows no intimidation or effort by the authorities to influence the vote in any manner.

It was estimated that fewer than 10,000 eligible voters in the republic went to the polls. It is regarded as certain that Congress, the members of which also were voted for yesterday, will declare the election void, thus continuing Huerta in office.

Gen. Huerta did not vote. He spent the day in his Popola suburban hobe.

Manuel Calero, the Liberal candidate, did not vote. Instead he took his family early in the day into the country. After he returned last night, he said:

"I understand the voting was exceedingly dull. Nobody appears to believe in the seriousness of the election. On account of the political condition many refused to vote. I myself did not. Had we indirect balloting I would have done so, but since it was otherwise I did not care to cast a vote either for myself or any other candidate."

Federico Gamboa, the candidate of the Catholic party, on the other hand, cast his ballot for Senor Calero. Neither of these candidates cared to express an opinion as to whether a sufficient number of ballots had been deposited to make the election effective.

Diaz Has Broken Free.

VERA CRUZ, Oct. 27.—The last shred binding Gen. Felix Diaz and Gen. Huarta was severed yesterday when Gen. Diaz telegraphed to the Department of War his resignation as brigadier general of the army. The negotiations regarding his return to the capital, on invitation of the provisional President, ended by his flat refusal to accompany Col. Vidaurrazaga, secretary to Gen. Blanquet, War Minister, giving as his reason the illness of his wife. Col. Vidaurrazaga continued his efforts to induce Gen. Diaz to change his decision, but finally left for the capital on a special train last night. Diaz and his family remained here.

The few partisans of Diaz who have stood guard in his room at the hotel for the past few days, also left for their homes in Mexico City, but a handful of supporters are still here subject to the orders of their political chief. The building is being closely watched by plain clothesmen and police from points of vantage in the streets and on roofs.

Hunger Striker Released.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The Government was obliged to capitulate Saturday in the matter of the announcement made by the Home Secretary on Oct. 9, that suffragettes imprisoned for crimes of violence would not be given their freedom under the cat-and-mouse act. On that date the Home Secretary refused to release Miss May Richardson, who was arrested on Oct. 4, on the charge of arson, and forcible feeding was resorted to two weeks ago. Her condition became so serious that her release was ordered yesterday.

In his previous announcement the Home Secretary declared that the act would be applied only to minor suffragette offenders, whose crimes did not include acts of serious violence.

Noted German Dead.

BERLIN, Oct. 27.—Privy Councillor Ludwig Max Goldberger, the well-known capitalist and economist, died at his residence in Berlin Friday evening, aged 65 years. The immediate cause of death was arterio-sclerosis, combined with heart disease.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The holding of a Universal Exposition in Montreal in 1917 was discussed at a large meeting there Saturday.

Twenty firemen were overcome by ammonia fumes when pipes burst at a $500,000 fire in Swift & Co.'s plant at Chicago. All will recover.

Alfred Noyes, the English poet, accompanied by Mrs. Noyes, sailed for New York on the Imperator Saturday for a lecture tour of six months.

Sir James Whitney, Hon. J. J. Foy and Hon. I. B. Lucas have left for Ottawa, where the interprovincial conference of Premiers is being held.

Howard H. Barnum, the aged gatetender who was charged with allowing Harry K. Thaw to escape from the Matteawan Asylum, was freed by the grand jury.

Five men were killed and two injured, by a premature explosion of dynamite early Saturday in the mines of the Piedmont Manganese Corporation near Lynchburg, Va.

A serious railway accident, resulting in the death of three people and injury to several others, occurred on the Southeastern & Chatham Railway at Waterloo Junction, Eng., on Saturday.

An infernal machine containing enough nitro-glycerine to have depopulated the bureau found its way into the U. S. dead letter office Saturday, but was rendered harmless just in time.

Congress Hall, Philadelphia, where many historic events in the early days of the republic transpired, was rededicated Saturday in the presence of President Wilson and a great crowd of people.

The body of a man which floated ashore near Fire Island yesterday corresponded to the description of Albert Jewell, the young aviator, who set out from Long Island in his monoplane nearly two weeks ago, and was not seen again.

ALLAN KNEW.

The teacher in a country school always tried to make the lessons as interesting as possible.

"Now, children," she said, "let me see what you remember about the animal kingdom and the domestic animals that belong to it. You have named all the domestic animals but one. Who can tell what that one is?"

There was no reply.

"What!" exclaimed the teacher. "Does no one know? It has bristly hair, likes the dirt and is fonds of getting into the mud."

A small boy at the end of the class raised a timid hand.

"Well, Allan?" said the teacher.

"Please, ma'am," said the little boy reflectively, "it's me."

"THE MEDIATOR"

By ROY NORTON

He broke off abruptly, to the preachers amazement, and bolted through the meagre crowd. He had just discovered, in the midst of his religious enthusiasm, that Maggie, the red-haired girl, had escaped. She was far down the street when he gained the front of the church lot and looked anxiously down the tree-bordered way. And hasten as he did he could not overtake her before she reached the hotel, although in the last lap of his pursuit they were almost running a foot race.

"Howdy, Miss Maggie," he saluted her, when she came to take his order at the table, but she frigidly refused the amenities. It did not appear to have any effect on him. "Fine service we had this morning', wa'n't it? That part where the parson spoke about bein' led through green pastures—"

"I said there was roast beef, mutton stew, and corned beef and cabbage," she interrupted.

"Maggie," he said humbly, "I think I'll have to eat some of the sheep." She was gone before the echo of his voice had died away and he did not have another opportunity to speak before he made his regretful departure, an hour later. He communed doubtfully with himself as he trudged over the road, followed by his burros.

"With most of em, the best way is to make 'em jealous. Then there's others that a feller has to be spoony with, and still some more, mavericks I call 'em, whose affections is dependent on how big a bank roll a feller flashes; but I'm beginnin' to be afraid she ain't none of them kind and I'm just plumb discouraged! A man can't have the wholeshop full of peace unless he's got the right kind of a wife for full measure, and this-here Maggie's the first one I ever saw whose lookin's I like. So here I am at Peaceful Hill; and got everything but the woman."

He was surprised when he arrived at Channel's claim to see that it's owner was nowhere in sight, and went up to the cabin to see if any ill fortune or accident had befallen him. But the cabin was unoccupied, although it gave evidence that the ancient had stopped there over night. Lish surmised that he had gone over to the Canada Hill Mine for some foolish reason, so began his work. It was almost noon when he heard a shout from the bank above, and saw Channel standing there with an unusually troubled look on his face.

"I been to the Canady," said Channel, squatting down down on the nearest rampart of dirt, "and Miss Higgins, she's right sick."

Lish gave instant and undivided attention.

"Everybody over there's sort of fussed up over it," the old man added. "Not about the cookin', because they can get along with the boy; but because Miss Higgins won't let Murdock send her down to Peaceful, and there aint no woman they reckon they can get to come and set with her."

Lish immediately crawled up out of the pit in which he had been working, and got to the bank. "I'll go right over there and see about that," he declared. "You see, she's sort of a friend of mine, and I feel I orter look after her some."

Without pausing to get his coat he stalked away over the trail, and Channel, with a melancholy sight, followed after him to his own claim, and watched him from sight.

Just as Lish came out into the road a man driving a buckboard came along, and the prospector without hesitation, asked him for the privilege of a ride, which was granted. He climbed in and explained his reason.

"I'm goin' over to the Canady Hill to see a sick woman," Lish said, "or I'd just as soon hoof it."

"That's where I am going,' he man said. "I'm a doctor. They sent word down to the camp for me to come up."

Lish looked relieved; but was, none the less, determined to visit Bill Higgins' wife and form his own conclusions. At the door of her cabin he decided it might be wiser for him to remain outside, which he did, with rare patience, until the doctor emerged. Murdock came also, and looked gravely at the physician.

"That woman in there threatens to be pretty ill," the doctor announced. "She ought to have some woman with her to act as nurse; but to save my life I don't know of anyone we can get in Peaceful. I'm afraid we shall have to sent out to get one, maybe to Sacramento, an that means, perhaps, five or six days maybe longer. Nurses from down there don't like to come this far away."

The prospector interjected himself into the conversation.

"Excuse me, Doc," he said, "but I got an idea I can get a woman, if Murdock will lend me a rig to go and try."

The superintendent did not hesitate a minute but bawled to the yardman several hundred yards up the creek to hitch up his own horse to his buckboard and bring it out to the flat.

"There," he said; "that fixes your. You can go straight down and have a try at it. My mare's skittish, sometimes, and she has a tender mouth; but I have an idea you know horses."

Lish nooded. "Know em" he said. "I know 'em' as well as if I was one of the hoss family. I'll watch her, and she and me'll get along all right.'

The doctor was already climbing into his vehicle. "Come to my office before you start back," he said, "and I'll send some more medicine up, and if you get a woman, I will tell her what to do."

He drove away, and Lish walked with Murdock to the flat. As he climbed in and picked up the reins, the superintendent spoke to him.

"Dont let any reasonable amount of money stand in the way," he said. "But if you can 'make it, get a woman."

Lish nodded again, and drove away. He found the mare just as described by her owner, but his voice pacified her and steadied her, with its quiet, "Whoa-a girl! Whoa-a!" Once he got out and walked around, and caressed her, and she put her muzzle out and made friends with him, as did all animals with whom he came in contact. It had been no vain boast he had made to the superintendent when he told him that he was a horseman. He had gone so rapidly that he trailed almost at the tail of the doctor's buckboard when that professional man, whose horse was speedy, entered the streets of the camp.

Lish drove on past the doctor's office until he came to the stage station, where he asked if the mare could be taken out and cared for until his return. He then walked away toward the Peaceful Hill Inn with a well-defined idea, and around to the rear door. His knowledge of the hours told him that Maggie would probably be through with the midday work, and this surmise he found correct.

"Hello!" he said, climbing the steps to the porch.

She looked at him with a far-away stare. H held out his hand, and she took it with as much nonchalance as if he were not quite, but almost, a stranger.

"I reckon you'd better get some duds together and come with me up to the Canaday Hill Mine," he said, without any hesitancy.

"Oh, you do, eh?" she replied, and then he appeared to realize that he had not yet given any reason why.

"It's Mrs. Marthy Higgins," he said, "Don't s'pose you know her, but she's a woman."

"Why, how strange! She's a woman, is she—Mrs. Marthy Higgins?" Lish persisted in ignoring any sarcasm. "Yes, she's some woman, is Mrs. Marthy. And she's sick."

"Do you keep track of all the women on the Divide?" the waitress asked. "If you do, you've got more time than I have. I've got my own business to attend to, and I find it keeps me pretty fairly busy."

For the first time he had confidence in himself. His earnestness overcame his embarrassment. He stepped up to the last step of the porch, and looked at her gravely, his grey eyes having lost their twinkle and appearing deep and warm.

"Maggie," he said, "this ain't what I'd expected of you. You disappoint me. If you feel that way, and ain't just talkin' because you're sore about somethin', I'm mighty sorry; because, Maggie, I want to tell you that there ain't none of us so big we can keep from rubbin' elbows with the others, and there ain't no place in the world so lonesome and far away that it ain't made a little bit nicer by havin' someone else to think about. Sometimes it's only a stranger, as far as names and such go, but nobody's a stranger to me, or to anybody else who's decent, when they're in trouble. It ain't what you do for other people that does them good, so much as it is the good you do for yourself by doin' it. I've done a heap of things in my life, but the things that stick was the ones I did for somebody else—even if I forget 'em, Maggie, because I sort of reckon a man or a woman can't do anything that's good and kind for someone else, no matter how small it is, without its sort of makin' 'em sweeter themselves."

His earnestness had carried him along until th soft light in his eyes had deepened to a glow. The man was preaching a doctrine of life, all mixed up with illiteracy, and incongruous with one capable of extreme cold and strenuous decision. His very homeliness had been glorified and the red-headed waitress gasped, and stared at him in astonishment, discovering that a new man stood before her, of whom she was a trifle afraid, and, moreover, she sustained a sense of shame as if she had been chastised.

"Well?" she faltered.

"That's all," he said, smiling gently and looking out across the far-distant peaks. "That's all. Mrs. Marthy Higgins is a woman, and she's sick in a camp where there ain't no other woman to help her, and she needs a woman! She's got to have one, Maggie. I want you to fix it up somehow so's you can go."

"Go!" she gasped. "Why, what on earth would they do here at the hotel?" It was as if all her life revolved around it. "Why, I'be been here for eight years! Someone must wait on the tables, and 'tend to things."

He ran his fingers through his hair, forgetting that they were still covered with the dust of dried clay, and looked perplexed.

"Do you reckon," he asked, brightening with resource, "that I could get the Widder Callahan to go?"

Maggie shook her head.

"No, she has three children to look after. They go to school."

He slapped his leg with his battered hat and exclaimed: "Bully! I see how. The widder can come over here and sling the grub. The boss can tell the boarders that she ain't no great shakes as a hustler in an eatin' house, but that she's here because you went to nurse a sick woman. Then, if there's any man that kicks up ugly, the boss can send for me, and I'll just naturally load up that gun of your'n and come down here and shoot his cussed head off! Easy, ain't it?"

Somewhat bewildered by the prospector's ideas of humanity, the waitress agreed; and Lish, intent on his mission, hastened away, after telling her he would let her know within the hour. He found the widow over her washtubs. He looked at her shrewdly and attacked her from a different angle than he had adopted with Maggie. He was learning diplomacy, and exercising all previous knowledge of the sex.

"You work for a livin', I take it," he said pleasantly, "and it's good to work ain't it?"

"You don't suppose I'd be scrubbin' clothes for fun, or excitement, or joy, every day I can get 'em to do, do you?" she asked, favouring him with a broad grin.

"I've been sort of wonderin' sometimes, when I see you workin', how much more you make than the shift boss of a mine, or a packer, or a storekeeper?" he said, staring at the calloused spots on his hands. "I suppose you make sometimes as much as five or ten a day, don't you?"

The Widow Callahan, plunging her hands into the tub, laughed heartily, a big, strong, Irish laugh.

"If I could make three a day," she said, lifting and rinsing a garment, "I'd buy a patent wash teachine a new wringer with double rolls, and that fine set of books for which I got an advertisement the other day—'Father Cassady's Lives of the Blessed Saints.'"

"I know where you can get them Saints without look in'very far," he bravely asserted, seeing his opening. "A friend of mine has a set I could get for you, I think! He's read 'em."

He lied as unblushingly in his good cause as if he had never met Truth. Her face broadened with delight. He felt that he was gaining ground.

"And I think I know where you can make five dollars a day for maybe a week, maybe ten days, maybe two weeks," he added, hastening to lose no iota of his advantage.

The wet garment was dropped back into the tub with a splash.

"Here?" she asked.

"Sure. Takin' Maggie—Maggie — Well, wouldn't that beat you! I swan I don't know her other name! It's a cinch she's got one. Most people has. Anyhow, she's that lady that works down at the hotel."

The widow laughed contemptuously, and told him to quite his blarneying.

"Dead earnest!" he declared. "I think they'll want you down there."

"But I'm not knowin' how," she explained. "They do tell me that waitin on a table is the same as doctorin'. You have to know how. Not that I couldn't get the stuff on the table. When Mike Callahan, that was—Heaven save his bold Irish soul—would see me bringin' the things on, he used to say, 'You got all of it here you didn't drop, Kitty!' but he was a jewel, was Mike, and never kicked at eatin' things that had fallen on the floor—specially baked potatoes. I never knew him to holler but once. That was when the stuff that fell happened to be noodle soup. But it's a Dutch dish, anyhow!"

If It Were Not For "Fruit-a-tives", The Wonderful Fruit Medicine

FENAGHVALE, ONT., JAN. 29th, 1910

"For thirty five years (and I am now a man over seventy) I have been a terrible sufferer from Constipation. No matter what remedy or physicians I employed, the result was always the same—impossible to get a cure. About 2 years ago, I read the testimonial of Hon. John Costigan regarding "Fruit-a-tives" and I decided to give them a trial. I have used "Fruit-a-tives" ever since. They are the first and only medicine that suited my case. If it were not for "Fruit-a-tives", I am satisfied I could not live" JAMES PROUDFOOT.

CANADIAN LAW IS COMMENDED

American Paper Says Canada Has Least Security in World For Escaping Criminals

The New York American referring to the capture of H. K. Thaw in Canada said: "Of all countries in the world, Canada offers the least security to strangers with unpleasant chapters in their histories. The Dominion has a cold way of looking at these things, that, to a suspect, must appear exceedingly inhospitable. In the first place, the Canadian courts have absorbed from the present British tradition an appalling contempt for technicalities. Anyone who has ever watched criminal trials of the present day in England must have been impressed with the brusque attitude of judges to phrase-juggling or efforts to translate words into some meaning other than what might be called their 'horse sense.' Barristers even hesitate to chance the snub of 'his worship' by advancing a technical objection, unless it be unusually clever and subtle, in which case the court may, after a few brief, keen-witted sallies, leave it to the jury, with a shrug, as much as to say: 'You gentlemen of common sense are, of course, not going to take such mental gymnastics into consideration. This reaction from a too technical period, when a misspelled name or word by an ill-fed engrosser could almost upset an indictment, has had its effect on Canadian practise. We recall the cases of Greene and Gaynor after the Captain Carter-Savannah harbor scandal. In these the defendants, refugees drenched with unlimited money in a luxurious hotel in Quebec, fought with the aid of the most astute legal talent for months, right through all the Canadian courts to the Judicial Committee of the Imperial Privy Council in London, only to be landed back ignominiously in the United States for trial and sentence.

Jack Johnson, the pugilist only escaped the clutches of this law by having in his possession a through ticket from Chicago to Havre, France, which had been actually purchased in Chicago and was convincing evidence of his bona fide intention to seek neither refuge nor residence in Canada. The criminal offence of which he had been convicted in Illinois was not an extraditable offence, the Mann White Slave Act having been passed long after the extradition treaty had been negotiated. Even at that, the Canadian immigration authorities never lost sight of him until he left the country on a steamship. Nor did he then take a chance on landing at any British port."

RHEUMATIC PAINS PROMPTLY DISAPPEAR

Relief Comes After Taking Few Doses of Croxone

It is needless to suffer with rheumatism, and be all crippled up, and bent out of shape with its heart-wrenching pains, when you can avoid it.

Rheumatism comes from weak, inactive kidneys that fail to filter from the blood the poisonous waste matter and uric acid; and the only way to overcome it is to remove the cause.

Croxone does this because it neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous substances and uric acid that lodge in the joints and muscles, to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism, and cleans out and strengthens the stopped up, inactive kidneys, so they can filter the poison from the blood, and drive it on and out of the system.

Croxone is a truly remarkable medicine for rheumatism, kidney troubles and bladder disorders. You will find it differs from other remedies. There is nothing else just like it. It matters not how old you are, or how long you have suffered, it is practically impossible to take it without results. Relief follows the first few doses, and you will be surprised how quickly all misery and suffering will end.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle and all druggists are authorized to sell it on a positive money back guarantee. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to overcome the worst backache or urinary disorders.

NEW CONVENIENT TRAIN TO WINNIPEG.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

The popularity of Canadian Pacific service, and the excellence of that road's equipment, has ben so greatly appreciated by the travelling public that it has been found necessary to put into service an entirely new Through Standard Express Train between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Commencing Sunday, October 26th, the "Gate City Express" will leave Toronto at 2.30 p.m., and will run daily thereafter, arirving Winnipeg at 8.25 a.m. second morning. The train will consist of the highest-class modern equipment; Observation Compartment Car, Standard Sleeping Cars, Tourist Sleeping Car, Dining Car, First-class Coach and Colonist Car. This will be found the most convenient and best train between Toronto and Winnipeg on account of the daylight departure from Toronto at an hour when the Union Station is not badly congested, and also on account of the early hour of arrival at Winnipeg.

The present "Vancouver Express" will continue to leave Toronto at 10.20 p.m. daily and will consist of the same equipment as the "Gate City Express." This train is the best to take for points west of Winnipeg. But for Winnipeg and east the "Gate City Express" is the right train to travel by.

God's Curse Not What We Supposed —The Rescue Differs Also—The Curse We Imagined—The Curse Mentioned In the Bible—A Just Penalty, Not a Devilish One—It Could Not Be Worse—The Limit of God's Law—Jesus the Rescuer —The Preparation Is Ample—Results Sure—As Foretold In the Bible.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

Brooklyn, N.Y., Oct. 26.—We report one of Pastor Russell's sermons of to-day from the text, "There shall be no more curse." (Revelation 22: 3.) He said:

We are emerging from a horrible nightmare of delusion. The shackles of superstition are breaking from our minds. Our forefathers, under the threat that to doubt the creed meant to be dammed, feared to think for themselves. Satan helped not only to make our creeds, but to manacle us to them by direful threats. Well may we praise God for the dawning light of the New Day, which is bringing us blessings of a spiritual kind, even as it is showering upon us temporal advantages such as the world never before knew. Freedom to think transcends all physical liberties. Truly "the liberty wherewith Christ makes free" is the great boon of God to man. In proportion as it has been received there is joy; otherwise there is discontent, groaning, pain.

God's curse, as set forth by the creeds, consigns the whole world to eternal torture, except as any should be so fortunate as to hear of the Saviour, and to respond and to be favorably environed for saintship. In our irrational dread we stopped not to question the authority of those who made the creeds. It was asserted that they were a condensed statement of the Bible teachings, prepared by very holy and very learned men; and that it would be dangerous for any to attempt to understand the Bible without the aid of the especially ordained apostolic bishops.

But that day has gone. Education has become more general. Contradiction amongst the apostolic bishops has demonstrated that they are fallible—that none of them were inspired, as were the twelve "Apostles of the Lamb," whom Jesus appointed to be the twelve foundations of the Church of the New Jerusalem.

Satan, perceiving the crumbling influence of creeds and the tendency to return to the Bible, has invaded all the institutions of learning. He has captured nearly all the professors. Claiming to be an angel of light and leader toward the Truth, he has been poisoning their minds with Higher Criticism and Evolution. By this master stroke he has accomplished in these last thirty years ten thousand times more than Voltaire and Ingersoll ever hoped to accomplish.

Nevertheless, the Divine arrangement will not be frustrated, although worldly wisdom has captured the worldly-wise, as the Bible foretold. (Isaiah 29:14.) Liberty of mind has brought to Bible students an opportunity and a willingness to study the Scriptures without creed spectacles. And they are being blessed. A light is going forth to the ends of the earth—a truer light from the Word of God.

Instead of God's curse being eternal torture, from which only a handful would be rescued by the Saviour, Bible students now see that the Bible distinctly tells that "the wages of sin is death"—that capital punishment with the Almighty is precisely what it is with the most intelligent of His creatures.—Romans 5:12; 6:23.

The record throughout the Bible is the same as the statement with which it begins. There we are told that the Almighty declared the curse in these words, "Because thou hast harkened unto the voice of thy wife [been disobedient], accursed is the ground for thy sake; * * * thorns and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; * * * in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, until thou return to the ground whence thou wast taken; for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." This fully accords with the Divine Law as elsewhere recorded in the Bible: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."

The curse is a heavy one. Under it our race has been going down to the prison-house of death for six thousand years, a "groaning creation," as the Apostle declares. Every century our chains of sin have grown heavier, our mental, moral and physical powers have grown weaker, until now the average length of human life is only thirty-six years; whereas Father Adam was able to stand up under the curse for nine hundred and thirty years.

The dying has attacked us in various ways. Our insane asylums tell us of some who have died mentally. Our prisons tell us of others who have died morally. Our hospitals tell us of others dying physically. Yes, all of our aches, disappointments and trials tell us that the curse of God upon us is severe, although it is just.

The statement of our text is of itself a contradiction of the eternal torment theories. A similar contradiction is the declaration of the Lord through the Prophet that Sheol (Hades, the tomb) shall be destroyed. (Hosea 13:14.) These comforting promises apply to all men. All go down to Sheol, Hades, the tomb. All are under the curse; and the destruction of Sheol clearly signifies the release of humanity from dying conditions and from the tomb. In other words, these two declarations are the equivalents of the promise of the Bible that "there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust."

But let no one suppose that the destruction of Sheol will be an instantaneous work. The curse of death has been upon our race for Six great Days of a thousand years each. God's proposition in the Bible is that in the Seventh Day, the Day of Christ, also a thousand years long, the curse shall be gradually removed. Not until the close of Messiah's thousand-year Reign will there be no more curse. Not until then will Sheol, Hades, the tomb, have been destroyed.

The reign of Sin and Death and their ravages upon our race are matters of history. The Reign of Christ, the Reign of righteousness, the Reign of life, the uplifting of humanity, are matters of prophecy. Those who believe the Bible to be the inspired Word of Jehovah may well rest their faith implicitly upon these prophetic assurances. Those whose faith in the Bible has been undermined by the Adversary's work along the lines of Higher Criticism are without chart or rudder on a sea of doubt. They know not God and have no message from Him. Their guesses would naturally be as widely different as their brains.

John Wesley came into prominence at a time when the teachings of John Calvin had saturated theology. Less logical than Brother Calvin, Wesley had a more tender heart. He could not answer Calvin's position, which was fortified by numerous texts telling about "the Elect," "the very Elect," and the necessity of making one's calling and election sure. Wesley's loving soul especially rebelled against the thought that the non-elect should have been predestinated to their fate before the world was created. He could not dispute Calvin's logic, yet he felt that it was an aspersion against the Divine character, which made God to appear Satanic in the extreme.

While agreeing with Calvin that all except the saintly would be everlastingly torture, Wesley claimed that even if God foreknew the number of the unsaintly and had foreordained their torture, there must have been some option left with them. He ransacked the Bible to find some proof-text supporting this theory. He found and especially rejoiced in the verses preceding our text. They pictured the New Jerusalem—the Messianic Kingdom in its glory. They show a river of the Water of Life proceeding from the Throne of the New Jerusalem.

A little further down in the same chapter, the blessed declaration is made that in that glorious time of the future the Spirit and the Bride shall say, Come, and he that is athirst may come, and whosoever will may take of the waters of life freely.—Revelation 22:1-3, 17.

"Ah," said Brother Wesley, "that tells of free grace!" He perceived that these things belong to the Truth. He trusted that the time would come when the Church would conquer the world with the Gospel Message, and when these prophecies would be fulfilled, and there would be no more curse.

We perceive now that both of these brethren, Calvin and Wesley, had grasped precious truths; and that these merely needed to be harmonized, in order to give us the full truth on the subject of God's purposes. Brother Calvin was quite right that only the Elect are to be saved during this Gospel Age. Brother Wesley was equally right that eventually Free Grace will prevail.

"And every creature, bond and free, Will hail the glorious Jubilee."

The connecting links are furnished us in the Scripture which tells that before Messiah's Kingdom may be established, the Church must be completed and glorified. The Election then ended. Free Grace will begin. The Election appertains to the "Church of the First-borns," and wisely guards that only copies of God's dear Son shall be associates with Him in His Kingdom and share its glories.

Bible students should note carefully that the Church during this Gospel Age is not classed as the Bride of Christ. Hear St. Paul: "I have espoused you to one Husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ." (2 Corinthians 11:2.) Hear what Jesus says to His Betrothed: "I will come again, and receive you unto Myself."—John 14:3.

Note the parabolic picture Jesus gives of the end of this Age. (Matthew 25:1-13.) In it He likens the faithful, betrothed ones to wise virgins, who will enter in with the Bridegroom to the marriage. He informs us that then the door to that position of honor will be shut. The number of the Elect will be complete. Note again that this marriage, or union, of the chaste virgin Church, the wise virgins, to the Heavenly Bridegroom, is declared to be in the end of this Age, when "His Wife shall have made herself ready." Note the prophetic picture of the marriage of the Lamb, and the introduction of the Bride to the Heavenly Father, as presented in Psalm 45:10-15.

Let us note that the river of the Water of Life will flow from the Throne, and let us remember that the Throne of Messiah has not yet been established in the earth. Let us remember Jesus' words to the effect that there is now no river of the Water of Life, but that each one of the Lord's faithful, begotten of the Holy Spirit, has in his own heart and experiences "a well of water, springing up within him unto everlasting life." These various considerations assure us that not to the present, but to the future, belongs this prophecy of Free Grace.

After the Church shall have become the Bride, after the Kingdom, symbolically represented by the New Jerusalem, shall have come down unto earth, then the Water of Life shall flow from it. Then the Spirit and the Bride shall say, Come; and for a thousand years "whosoever will may come and take of the Water of Life freely." This is but another way to tell of the removal of the curse.

We are not to think that because our eyes were blinded by the Adversary's dust for centuries that these things indicate a change in the Divine Program. Nay, He who sits upon the Throne of the Universe has from the very first had all the plans and arrangements before Him perfectly, and has been causing all things to work together according to the counsel of His own will. Even from the beginning, in His purpose He had arranged for "the Lamb of God to take away the sin of the world" by the sacrifice of Himself. The sacrifice was made necessary to demonstrate the enormity of sin, and the length, breadth, height and depth of Divine Mercy and Love.

After four thousand years of sin and death, God sent His Son to die, to become the Redeemer of men, that He might become their King and Deliverer. God might have waited to the full end of the thousand years before sending His Son to redeem men, had it not been for His purpose to gather from all nations a number to be the elect Spiritual Seed of Abraham, associates with His Son in His great Kingdom work of human uplift. As it was, everything was accurately timed. In due time He sent His Son to redeem man. In due time, also, He will send His Son to dispense the blessings secured by His sacrifice.—Acts 3:19-21.

Meantime, the Election of the Church—the saintly Little Flock, all tried, tested, proven in their loyalty to God, even unto death—has been almost accomplished. We are already in the Day of His Preparation. (Nahum 2:3.) He is pouring out blessings on the minds of men and is quickening human understanding. The result is that the world has taken on new beauty, fresh energy.

A spring time of Divine favor and refreshment is here, as foretold. But the blossoming deserts, answering to the irrigation streams and to the artesian springs; the railroads and the telegraphs, bringing together the ends of the earth; the printing presses, causing knowledge to increase and awakening the whole world—all these things are blessings so great as to astound us. One week of life now has almost as much possibility in it as a year had a century ago.

Evidently we are just crossing from the Gospel Age to the Millennial Age. With the death and translation of the last member of the Church, the Gospel Age will have fully ended, and the Millennial Age will have been fully inaugurated. Oh, how immense is the thought that we are living in the most wonderful epoch of the world's history—that stupendous changes are at hand!

The Prince of Darkness is about to be completely dethroned, and bound for a thousand years. The Prince of Light, our Redeemer, is about to take His great power and reign. Blessings already beginning to be poured out, will go on increasing until "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of God, as the waters cover the great deep," and "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess, to the glory of God."

As the curse came first upon the earth itself, so it is first rolling away from the earth. Already the wilderness is blossoming as a rose. Already new types of grain, vegetables and fruits are being brought to perfection, and are yielding phenomenally. Shortly the lifting of the curse will extend to humanity. With the knowledge of God will come a knowledge of the blessed opportunities which Messiah's Kingdom will afford to all who desire to return to the Father's House. More and more the willing and obedient will be blessed. Not only will the shackles drop from their minds, but also from their various powers.

By the close of the Millennium the groaning creation will have been freed from the bondage of sin and death. All the former things of sin and death shall have passed away. The final penalty of the Second Death will be executed upon all not found worthy of everlasting life under that most favorable opportunity.

What a glorious triumph that will be, when every creature in Heaven and earth and under the earth shall be heard saying, Praise, glory, honor, dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb, forever! (Revelation 5:13.) What a glorious condition will then obtain when there shall be no more crying, no more sighing, no more dying, for all the former things of sin and death shall have passed away! Ah! He that sitteth upon the Throne saith, "Behold, I make all things new!" Glad we are that our great Messiah is about to overthrow sin and evil, about to establish righteousness on a permanent and everlasting foundation!

WAS A CONFIRMED DYSPEPTIC

How Finds It a Pleasure to Enjoy Meals

Here is a case which seemed as bad and as hopeless as yours can possibly be. This is the experience of Mr. H. J. Brown, 384 Bathurst St., Toronto, in his own words:

"Gentlemen—I have much pleasure in mentioning to you the benefits received from your Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets and can cheerfully recommend them. I simply had confirmed dyspepsia with all its wretched symptoms, and tried about all the advertised cures with no success. You have in Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets the best curative agent I could find. It is now such a pleasure to enjoy meals with their consequent nourishment that I want to mention this for the benefit of others."

The fact that a lot of prescriptions or so-called "cures" have failed to help you is no sign that you have got to go on suffering. Try Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets and see how quickly this sterling remedy will give you relief and start your stomach working properly. If it doesn't help you, you get your money back. 50c a box at your druggist's. Compounded by the National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 144

LADIES! SECRET TO DARKEN GREY HAIR

Bring Back Its Colour and Lustre With Grandma's Sage Tea Recipe

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur ad alcohol added, will turn grey, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

Thin wispy, grey faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all grey hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

VANISHED MOUNT MAZAMA.

It Was One of the Loftiest Peaks in the United States.

The highest mountain in Oregon is Mount Hood, 11,225 feet above the sea level. Compared with Mount Whitney, to the south in California, and Mount Rainier, to the north in Washington, each rising well above 14,000 feet, Mount Hood does not appear as a skyscraper. However, according to the geologists of the United States geological survey and other authorities, Oregon had at one time, probably before the dawn of life upon the earth, a great volcano which towered as far above Mount Hood as does Mount Rainier, possibly even several thousand feet higher. This was the great Mount Mazama. But thousands of years ago the mountain disappeared into the bowels of the earth, and all that is left today is the huge rim around Crater lake.

Crater lake is the caldera of this extinct and collapsed volcano and is nearly six miles in diameter. The inside walls of the rim of the ancient mountain are in places nearly 4,000 feet high and almost perpendicular. The lake itself is in places 2,000 feet deep, and parts of the wall rise above its water another 2,000 feet. A restoration of the mountain in fancy, using as a basis the angles of the lower slopes, which still remain, shows that the apex could not have been far from 15,000 feet in height, so that Mount Mazama was one of the most lofty and majestic peaks in the United States.—United States Geological Survey.

There's A Big Reason Why

Paragon Typewriter Ribbons are the best

WE realized years ago, when we first started to make Paragon Ribbons, that they had to be the best—at whatever cost.

There was a special reason —the Remington Typewriter.

We make the Remington and we make the ribbon. We started to make the ribbon for the Remington. No writing machine can do better work than its ribbon, therefore none but the best ribbon is good enough for the Remington Typewriter.

So you see that Paragon Ribbons had to be the best—not only for their own sake but for the machine's sake. This double incentive has produced the best ribbon—the ribbon that outsells them all.

Of course there are other reasons for Paragon Ribbon leadership. We are the oldest typewriter ribbon manufacturers, with the longest experience, the best facilities, and the most complete knowledge of the qualities in a ribbon that typewriter users want and how to produce what they want. But all of these reasons have followed from the first. It was Remington leadership which demanded and produced Paragon leadership.

But do not think that the Paragon Ribbon is simply a Remington affair. What the Paragon Ribbon has done for the Remington, it has done, incidentally, for every other writing machine. Paragon Ribbons, of absolutely uniform quality, are made for all makes of typewriters.

Interference.

In a boarding house for bachelors Amanda, a typical "mammy," looked after the guests' comfort in true southern style, so well that one of the men thought he would take her away with him in the summer in the capacity of housekeeper. Toward spring he waylaid her in the hall one day and said:

"Mandy, do you like the country?"

Mandy reckoned she did.

"Would you like to go away with me this summer and keep house for me?"

Mandy was sure she would.

"Suppose I get a bungalow. Do you think you could take care of it nicely by yourself?"

Mandy gasped and rolled her eyes.

"'Deed, no, massa! Reckon you all better get somebody else; I don't know nothin' about takin' care of any animals."—Harper's Magazine.

Antiquity of Nagging.

No, if you are nagged you are not alone in your experience. Nor are the nagged persons of this age the only nagged persons of any age. Nagging is an old custom. They tell us that Adam, Job, Socrates, Aesop, Leonidas, Machiavelli and many more distinguished historical personages were victims of nagging. This proves the antiquity but not the wisdom or the respectability of nagging. And if it is as old as it is claimed to be let it crawl away somewhere to die. For, come to think of it, nagging is just as hurtful to the nagger as it is to the nagged. So why injure ourselves for the purpose of injuring some one else? Samson did that, you know, when he pulled down the temple of Gaza and broke his own back. Rather a poor example to follow, eh?—Detroit Free Press.

CABLES FLASH ITEMS OF INTEREST FROM LONDON AND BERLIN

United States Ambassador Is Warmly Greeted on His Arrival in German Capital

Dinner Given in Berlin for Mr. James W. Gerard by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clark Grew Attended by the British Ambassador and Danish Minister.

AMERICAN NAVAL ATTACHE ALSO ENTERTAINS

(Special Dispatch.)
BERLIN, Oct. 25.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH CLARK GREW were the hosts at the first official dinner given for the United States Ambassador, Mr. James W. Gerard. Among the guests were the Under Secretary of State, Herr Zimmermann; the British Ambassador, Sir Edward Goschen; the Danish Minister and Countess Moltke and Baroness Speck von Sternberg.

The party was augmented later in the evening by a number of guests who came in for dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Grew left for London on a short leave of absence to meet their children, who are returning from America.

The United States Ambassador was the guest this week also of Lieutenant Commander Walter R. Gherardi, the United States naval attaché, who entertained at the Royal Automobile Club at déjeuner the Ambassador and his staff. The Ambassador in his address before the American Luncheon Club pronounced it the most delightful and brilliant entertainment he had ever found awaiting him.

MERCHANTS GREET AMBASSADOR.

Officers and directors of the American Association of Commerce and Trade went yesterday in a body to the embassy to pay their official respects to the new Ambassador. The party was composed of Mr. I. Wolf, Jr.; Mr. W. A. Derrick, Mr. W. C. McCann, Mr. Hans Schlamelffeng, Mr. Richard Siering, Mr. George S. Atwood, Mr. Simon L. Bernheimer, Mr. W. E. Kugemann, Mr. A. L. Peters, Mr. John G. Simon, Mr. A. C. Wilkie, Mr. Henry E. Schmidt, Dr. Schneider, Mr. J. M. Daffron, Mr. Paul Koning and Dr. George A. Kubler.

Mr. and Mrs. John Selmes, of New York, who are stopping at the Hotel Esplanade, entertained at dinner the Consul General and Mrs. Thackara. The American Ambassador was among the guests, as also were Mrs. Harry James Luce and Miss Margaret Ludee, of New York. Mrs. Thackara received a call this week from Mrs. Charles Bartlett, of Worcester, Mass.

Miss Helen McFadden gave a tea dansant for young women of the Willard School, and the other hostesses of the week in American circles were Dr. Alice Dice, who is receiving for the first time since returning from a summer sojourn in America, and Mrs. Cleves Symmes and Mrs. Arthur Fickenscher, of San Francisco, who had among their guests many well known musicians.

MUSIC AND ART.

The German-American Society in large numbers responded to the invitation of Herr Fischer Areuburg to participate in a musicale and view the collection of his paintings. The host, who is well known in tennis and sporting circles, belongs to the team of the Berlin Hockey Club, which at present holds the European championship. He has also achieved much distinction as a painter and his canvases have revealed a particular facility for landscapes and interiors.

Among the guests was Prince Friedrich Carl of Prussia, who has just returned from Leipsig, where he participated in the riding tournament.

Others noticed viewing the pictures were Mrs. A. M. Thackara, who had with her Mr. and Mrs. John Selmes, of New York, and Mrs Eginton Willing Spencer; Mrs. Stephen S. McFadden, with Mrs. George J. Bultman and Mrs. H. V. Fisher; the American Consul General in Dresden, Mr. T. St. John Gaffney; Mme. Sela Beeth, Mr. Lamer Winslow, Dr. K. O Bertiling, Herr Leo Frobenius, the African explorer, and Colonel von Dewitz, prominent in German aviation circles.

UNIVERSITY RECTOR INDUCTED.

On Wednesday the ceremony of handing over the title and insignia of rector magnificus of Berlin University to the new incumbent of the office took place in the large auditorium. This is a rotating and elective office and now passes from Count Bandissin, of the theological faculty, who is well known in the American educational world.

Professor Archibald Cary Coolidge, the newly arrived exchange professor from Harvard at Berlin University, was among those present.

Much interest has been caused here by the announcement issued by the American Institute that Herr Carl Diem, general secretary of the sixth Olympian games, will speak next week on impressions received during his recent trip to America as one of a commission appointed to study athletic sports there.

Many well known persons attended the wedding of Fraulein Irma von Luttwitz to Herr Gustav Braun von Stumm in Stamburg. Baroness von Stumm, widow of the famous German steel king, Baron von Stumm-Halberg, and the grandmother of the bride elect were present, as were Count and Countess Adalbert von Sierstorpff, Frau von Eckbertt, Mrs. H. K. Devereux and Miss Aileen Devereux, of Cleveland; Baron and Baroness von Gallmeyrin, who was Miss Clinton Paine, of Baltimore, and Mr. W. J. Cleaton, of Boston, Mass.

The bridesmaids are all well known younger set. Court and society Princess Daisy Hohenlohe, Frau von Marwitz, who was one of the ladies in waiting at the wedding of Princess Victoria Luise; Fräulein von Heimburg, Baroness Esther von Luttwitz, a cousin of the bride; Fräulein Ida von Schubert and Fräulein von Lucius.

They were dressed in pink and wore pink tulle veils, thus reproducing the color scheme used at the wedding of the bride's mother, who was Miss Mary Cary, of Cleveland, prior to her marriage to Colonel Baron von Luttwitz, commander of the so-called Hamburg regiment. The newly married couple left immediately for an automobile trip through Southern France.

Frau von Gontard has returned from Langenschwalbach, whither she was called by the death of her father, Adolphus Busch.

DR. ALLEN'S ART LECTURES.

Dr. George H. Allen, director of the Berlin branch of the Bureau of University Travels, commenced his course of lectures on the Berlin museums. As in previous years, these art talks are attracting a large number of Americans who are preparing for spring tours in Italy and Greece.

Mrs. Eginton, who, with her daughter, Mrs. Henry Charles Whitehead, has been passing some months in Weimar and Dresden, is at the Hotel Adlon.

Mme. Alice Akte, the Finnish diva, who will be the drawing card in the third programme of the series of élite concerts being given this season in the music room of the Hotel Esplanade, has arrived here.

Miss Lucy Brown has left for America to see her sister, Mrs. John Morrison, of Beaver, Mass., and Mrs. W. J. McCronkey, at East Orange, N. J.

Signor Enrico Caruso, who is to sing at a number of performances at the Berlin Royal Opera, is stopping at the Hotel Bristol, where also are registered Mr. and Mrs. Le Grand Burton, of Chicago; Mr. R. L. Bacon, of Chicago; Mrs. T. B. Wright, of San Francisco, and Mr. T. L. Dickinson, of Brooklyn.

CHANNEL TUNNEL HAS AN ADDED IMPETUS

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Oct. 25.

STRONG indorsement of the Channel tunnel scheme was heard at a meeting of the United Wards Club of London before a large attendance in the pillar hall of the Cannon Street Hotel. Mr. H. S. A. Foy, treasurer of the "Entente Cordiale" and formerly president of the club, emphasized the advantages of the tunnel, and the debate that followed showed that his ideas had made a profound impression.

After summarizing previous efforts to promote the tunnel project, extending as far back as 1802, when a French engineer named Mathieu brought it to the attention of Napoleon, Mr. Foy showed the fallacy of the old objections to the tunnel based on military grounds. Then he emphasized the commercial and social advantages to both France and Great Britain.

The total expense would be less than $60,000,000, he said, and the time of construction between six and seven years. The commerce of England and France and of the entire world, he thought, would be greatly benefited and a tremendous increase in imports and exports would be facilitated.

Mr. Foy said that the number of passengers now crossing the channel was number of travellers from England to France and vice versa would increase sixfold with the completion of the tunnel. He added that he did not believe the channel steamship lines would suffer, but argued for the advantages of tunnel travel in bad weather, or when time was a prime consideration. The trip from Paris to London would take approximately five hours, via the tunnel route. The proposal is for forty to fifty passenger trains to run through the tunnel daily, with another train schedule for merchandise.

Fragile merchandise and perishable products, such as fruit, would greatly benefit by the tunnel route, Mr. Foy continued, as there would be no necessity for shifts and unloading from train to steamship.

POOR NAT! A DOG HAS NO PRIVILEGES TO-DAY

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Oct. 25.

A DIRTY looking, uncombed, wire haired terrier got himself into trouble the other day for knocking a box of eggs off a stall in a shop and attempting to make a meal of them, and went off howling from a kick in the ribs. The unknown dog is now believed to be Nat, who disappeared from his home at Lancaster Gate Gardens some weeks ago.

Why Nat should have taken it into his head to leave a comfortable home and risk the prison cell by stealing eggs is more than his owners can comprehend. Nat's fondness for raw eggs is inherent, not acquired, and the fact that he, presuming, of course, that it should be he, should be obliged to steal them, points to his being in a very sorry plight.

Nat's description has been circulated, but he has not yet been found.

Royal Bridal Couple Centre of Interest as They Begin Their Happy Honeymoon

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Oct. 25.

THE royal wedding is having a far reaching effect on the autumn season, as it has brought in a way nothing else would have done many persons back to town much earlier than is customary, the assemblage of royal personages being responsible. There will be a certain amount of official entertaining of the royal personages during the autumn, and these also will be the guests at several private entertainments, and themselves in turn will give dinners and luncheons during their stay in London. It is customary for the foreign guests of a sovereign to remain for a time in a private capacity when the State functions end, and their retirement to private life always is the signal for a round of gayeties, though the presence of the English royal family has no permanent prospect.

Meanwhile on the breezy, wind swept links of Sandwich Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught have been passing the first part of their honeymoon at West Harrow, Mr. Waldorf Astor's lodge overlooking the bay.

The royal couple have made themselves immediately popular with the villagers, showing not the least concern at the small crowds, mainly women, coming around the grounds to catch a glimpse of them. Short automobile trips and golf practice have made up their days, with rests in the garden, where there is not much privacy. Thereby are seen the Prince enjoying his briar pipe and the Princess occasionally accompanying her husband by smoking a cigarette by his side.

A charming incident was one when the royal couple's automobile passed the gates of the lodge and an aged woman, who never had seen one of the royal family since Queen Victoria, came all the way from Ramsgate and waited patiently for four hours, standing on the edge of the road and the old fashioned curtsey, saying "God bless you." The Prince and Princess heard the exclamation and turned, and the Princess gave a pretty bow and a winning smile, while the Prince raised his cap in acknowledgment, to the great joy of the woman.

Now that the Prince has been promoted to the rank of major it is considered highly probable that he will be called soon to leave his regiment, the Royal Scots Greys, to take up a staff appointment in the War Office. This will be a source of regret to the Prince, but will mean his constant presence in London, which will please everybody. Also it will mean that the bridal couple will not require a house leased on the outskirts of York. With considerable regret the Scots Greys will part with the soldier Prince, who has made himself exceedingly popular in all ranks of the regiment.

The return of the Prince and his bride to London will be the occasion of much entertaining. The royal couple will take a beautiful house in Mount street, where they will begin housekeeping. The Princess Royal may be counted on to do something to entertain them, and the establishment in town of the newly married couple will add greatly to the zest of the little season.

The Princess of Pless, the beautiful daughter of Colonel Cornwallis-West, who returned to London in time for the wedding from the rest cure at Buenos Ayres with her sister, the Duchess of Westminster, said to your correspondent:—

"I am remaining in London a fortnight before going to my home in Silesia. Perhaps you can tell me," said the Princess, "why it is the newspaper photographers insist on snapshotting persons getting on and off steamships whether they want to be photographed or not. Really it is hardly fair, for you get the most atrocious photographs, and they are circulated as an extra likeness. When I saw the cameras aimed to snapshot me I put up my arm for protection, but not a bit of it. The photographs came out more ridiculous than ever, and no one understood why I was walking with my arm up in such an absurd fashion."

There is a surprise, the Princess said, waiting for competitors in this year's deer stalking exposition in Berlin. The German Emperor killed one of the largest stags ever known in Germany on the grounds adjoining the Prince of Pless' castle in Silesia. The Emperor is confident of winning first prize, as this stag's head has twenty-six points. It took three days to get the stag, and it was on the third day, after attending church, that the Kaiser continued his pursuit and killed the stag. If he had gone to church on the first day he might not have had such exciting sport.

Though less of the American language is now heard around the hotels and though business so far as Americans are concerned has slackened a bit, the season has been the busiest and most lucrative to the London hotels ever known. It began earlier than usual and also closed earlier; at any rate, great numbers were carried off on the latest westward voyages of the Atlantic giantesses. The Imperator, the Lusitania, the Mauretania and the Olympic made a big gap, which even the numerous arrivals from the Continent have not nearly filled. Mr. Hein, managing director of the Piccadilly Hotel, said:—

"It certainly has been a remarkable season, though the last week has seen a sudden change. American travellers are considerable, as our accommodation proves, and there were several occasions when we had to turn away as many as fifty or sixty arriving from steamships and who had not taken the precaution to engage rooms in advance. During July and August it is always advisable to write or cable for accommodations and then we do our best, for it is unpleasant to tell weary passengers arriving in the middle of the night that there is no room."

Mr. Kramer, manager of the Carlton Hotel, said:—

"The season has been busier than even in coronation year. Americans came early and entertained lavishly."

Mr. Kroedl, of the Ritz Hotel, said:—

"There has been no dull month this summer. August, which was expected to be quiet, was one of the busiest months ever known."

"This was easily a record season," said Mr. Kaiser, manager of the Cecil.

King George Has Rival for Royal Shooting Honors in an Archduke

Empress Marie of Russia Expects to Pass Remainder of Her Life in England with Her Sister, the Queen Mother —Prince of Wales at Oxford.

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Oct. 25.

THE King, who, as every one knows, is one of the keenest of sportsmen, and a remarkably good shot, will welcome at Windsor in November the Archduke Franz Ferdinand, the Austro-Hungarian heir-apparent, who is regarded on the Continent as the best all-round shot anywhere.

If the Archduke proves the cleverer exponent he will deserve all the credit in view of King George's very high reputation as a shot, and by reason of the fact that he will himself be shooting under entirely novel conditions.

The Archduke has visited England before, but it is very difficult to trace whether he has ever shot pheasants before, and he certainly has never done so with King George.

As a rifle shot, the Archduke Franz Ferdinand is probably much better than King George, not, perhaps, through natural aptitude, but because he has unrestricted opportunities of practice. The King, on the other hand, is limited to a little deer stalking and an occasional shoot on a Colonial or Indian visit. But when it comes to the use of the shotgun, King George probably starts with a few points in his favor.

Pheasant shooting at Windsor will prove to be very different from what it is in Austria. In Austria it is not the custom, as a rule, to hold big drives with stationed guns awaiting the swift and powerful birds as they sweep across a clearing or over the end of a wood.

It is understood in Court circles that the Empress Marie of Russia, at the earnest wish of her sister Queen Alexandra, has definitely decided to pass practically the whole of her time in the future in England. Special suites of apartments for her accommodation are being provided at both Marlborough House and Sandringham. She purposes to dispose of her magnificent castle at Gatchina, some thirty miles from St. Petersburg, where she has passed much of her time during her widowhood. This royal residence is filled with art and other treasures of very considerable value, and it is the present intention of the Empress to transfer the bulk of these to England during the next few months. She is to present her country estate, near Swadia, in the Crimea, to her only surviving brother, Prince Waldemar of Denmark, who will represent the Danish Court at the forthcoming royal wedding.

If rumor is to be believed, half the royalties in Europe will be visiting London this winter. The latest addition to their number, according to court gossip, is the Dowager Queen of Denmark, widow of King Frederick VII., who will be entertained here by Queen Alexandra in October or November. King Christian's mother is a remarkable woman in many ways. She is certainly the tallest European queen, for she stands well over six feet, and is said to be the wealthiest.

When she married King Frederick, at the age of eighteen, she was the greatest royal heiress of her time. Her fortune at that period was estimated at $15,000,000, and since then she has increased it to $25,000,000 by careful management and judicious investment.

Many are aware that Prince Albert, in addition to being an enthusiastic sailor, is a very keen engineer. Indeed, his bent is all toward mechanics. During his holidays at Balmoral the Prince amused himself by fitting up an almost complete workshop. In every way he is a handy man, and he delights in fixing up the broken thing, in doctoring the fractured engine. Now that he has returned to the Colingwood it is expected that he will devote himself chiefly to the engineering branch of the navy. Among his friends on board the vessel he has been nicknamed "The Lobster," owing to his vivid complexion under the rays of the sun.

The Prince of Wales intends to do much footballing this season and has just selected his sporting attire. Among this is a variety of shirts with soft turndown collars. But it is only for such sport that this class of shirt is ever worn by members of the royal family. Even when shooting at Balmoral it is never used by the King or his sons.

There is high authority for stating that Prince Arthur of Connaught will ultimately succeed his father as Governor General of Canada. Indeed, this is one of the reasons for his marriage being hurried forward, since it was made a condition when the appointment was first mentioned to him that he must be married before he took it over.

The Duke of Connaught also has decided, so it is understood, when he relinquishes his appointment in Canada next September, to bring his lengthy public career to an end. The suggestion was made to him some time ago that he might ultimately become Viceroy of India, but the Duke declined to consider it, as he has done the proposal that he should become the King's representative in Ireland under the Home Rule regime. He proposes to pass most of his leisure at Bagshot Park, where he is ambitious to establish a stud farm where he can raise horses of a type likely to be of service to the army.

There seems to be some doubt whether Princess Patricia will accompany her father and mother to Canada; but if she does remain behind she will not be long in following them out. She is too devoted to her mother to remain long away from her, especially as she is still far from strong.

Princess Patricia is one of the greatest [illegible] sportswomen in Europe, though [illegible] many young members of the royal family,

ENGLISH PHYSICIAN ARRAIGNS THE WOMAN

Her Morality, He Says, Is Personal and Domestic, and He Decides Against Suffrage.

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Oct. 25.

"PRACTICALLY every man feels that there is in woman—patent or hidden away—an element of unreason which, when you come upon it, summarily puts an end to purely intellectual intercourse."

Thus, in startling, outspoken phrase, Sir Almroth Wright, the eminent physician, condemns woman in his book, "The Unexpurgated Case Against Woman Suffrage."

Speaking of "woman's disability in the matter of intellect," he says woman's mind:—

"Is ever influenced by individual instances;" "arrives at conclusions on incomplete evidence;" "has a very imperfect sense of proportion;" "accepts that congenial as true and rejects the unwelcome as false;" "takes the intuitively which is desired for reality;" "treats the undesirable reality which is out of sight as nonexistent."

Thus woman's mind, says Sir Almroth, builds up for itself in this way, "often blessed by predilections and aversions, a very unreal picture of the world."

Woman's morality, says he, is personal and domestic, not public, and while she will "rise and respond to the call of any strong human or transcendental personal affection," it is "only a very exceptional woman who would, when out to her election between the claims of a narrow and domestic and a wider or public morality, subordinate the former to the latter."

In a severe indictment of the suffrage movement, Sir Almroth says there is mental disorder evident in the programme of the militant suffragist, and immorality in her aims and methods.

"Woman," he adds, "feels no interest in and no responsibility toward any abstract moral ideal.

"If woman had to fight for her position," is another of his conclusions, "her status would be that which is assigned to her among the Kaffirs."

Marchioness Townshend, criticising Sir Almroth's indictments, says:—

"The statements made by him are astounding and almost enough to take one's breath away. Woman has been fighting her way ahead—and not without success—for a good many years. Her status is not among the Kaffirs, however. Does Sir Almroth Wright forget what brilliant successes women have achieved outside their own home? I am not rabid in my desire that women should have the vote. At the same time, I think there should be an equality of sexes."

Mrs. Luke Paget, wife of the Bishop of Stepney, says:—

"Women are different from men, and hence they have a necessary and different contribution to make to the good of the whole. We hold that this contribution should be direct and not indirect, a matter of responsible conviction, and not hidden and yet insistent influence. Indirect control has left disfiguring marks on her character. Indirect influence commonly ends in [illegible] intrigue."

Miss Ruth Rose, [illegible] the World's Students' Christian Federation says:—

"It is impossible not to recognize that the trend of things indicates increasing co-operation in public affairs between men and women. It is also clear that such co-operation is expected to justify itself by the raising of the standard of public life. Women, therefore, are on their trial. There are four points which every woman who proposes to devote either the whole or part of her life to the public service must set before her. They are (1) a just habit of mind; (2) the sense of proportion; (3) the love of truth, and (4) the ideal of fellowship."

Pictures Compared.

Washington Star:—"Of course," said the simpleton, "anything handmade is sure to be superior to what is made by machinery."

"Not always," answered the practical person. "If you start to make a machine, it generally plays something in the line of a standard composition. But when anybody sits down at the piano and makes out something by hand, the chances are that it will be ragtime."

Of Course He Did.

Judge:—"Carlie, aged six, asked at the soda water counter for a cone of ice cream. The clerk, not catching his order, asked, "Do you want two cones?"

"I want two," said Charlie, "but I've only got one nickel."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THROUGH FIRE

It Broke Her Will.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The long piazza of the boarding house showed a row of rocking chairs swaying gently to and fro. Under the spreading maples on the lawn were gay hammocks and more rocking chairs, and down on the sunny tennis court white clad forms darted after flying balls.

Old Mrs. Knight occupied the most comfortable chair. It was hers by tacit acknowledgment after many seasons' occupancy, but it was generally understood that when Mrs. Knight passed beyond the realm of summer boarding houses the chair of state would be filled by that second in rank of boarders, Mrs. Henry Tillerby. Mrs. Tillerby had grown irascible in the waiting for the chair, and nothing save her undying determination to appear younger than Flora Knight deterred her from jumping Mrs. Knight's claim, so to speak.

"COME, DARLING!" HE SHOUTED.

Mrs. Henry Tillerby, who had been to school with Flora Knight, had drawn her own chair close by her old school friend.

"Where's Mabel?" asked Mrs. Tillerby, with her little black eyes fixed on Mabel Knight's graceful form down there on the tennis court.

"In her room reading a good book," retorted Flora Knight tartly.

Mrs. Tillerby shook like a strawberry jelly.

"It's a book on lawn tennis or love," she tittered.

"I think my granddaughter is quite capable of taking care of her own affairs, Mrs. Tillerby," she said icily.

"She is old enough to, certainly," retorted Mrs. Tillerby, who had two unmarried daughters much older than pretty Mabel.

Mrs. Knight had closed her eyes by this time and was to all appearances taking a little nap. But Mrs. Tillerby, who had known Flora Knight all her life, went on talking in her deep contralto, relating bits of boarding house gossip, criticising the food and the service and otherwise acting in a way befitting the occupant of the second floor front chamber of Rose Hall.

Suddenly light feet ran up the side steps of the west piazza, where the two old ladies sat, and a musical voice called a laughing farewell to somebody in white flannels, who disappeared down the pine walk toward the adjacent estate.

"Well, granny, dear," cried Mabel, seating herself on the top step, "here I am! Now, don't pretend you are asleep, because I can see just a speck of little black eye peeping out. There, that's better!" as Mrs. Knight's eyes popped wide open and she sat up with a well simulated air of surprise.

"Have I been asleep, Ann?" she asked Mrs. Tillerby. "I declare your voice is so soothing. Just like one of Parson's Moore's sermons—it sends me off to sleep!"

Mrs. Tillerby flushed resentfully, but before her lips could frame a proper retort Mabel had remembered something.

"Oh, Mrs. Tillerby, Lucy asked me to tell you that she has just returned from a drive with Mr. Fenwick, and that she has something very important to tell you if you will go to her room."

"Ah, just as I expected! The dear girl—well, it's in the air, I do believe!" twittered Mrs. Tillerby as she rose ponderously from her chair and waddled around to the front door.

"Sit down here, Mabel," said Mrs. Knight with a sudden change of tone that the girl instantly noticed, for all the color and sparkle went out of her face, but her gray eyes were strange ly soft and luminous.

"Yes, granny?" she asked when she was seated beside the old lady.

"You have been playing tennis with that young Ashmore?"

"Why, yes, granny, dear, I told you I was going to."

"And I told you it was in direct opposition to my wishes."

"But, granny, why do you care? He—he is very nice," faltered Mabel.

"He is a nobody, only private secretary to Senator Bray. There's George Fenwick ready to jump if you only give him the opportunity."

"Do you mean that you would rather I married George Fenwick for his money than—than Dick Ashmore, because I love him?" flared Mabel.

"Love him, do you?" quavered Mrs. Knight wrathfully. "Marry him, then, and go to the poorhouse, for you will never get one penny of my money!" She arose and thumped her cane angrily on the floor.

Tears came to Mabel's lovely eyes, but she winked them away from the long, jetty lashes, and when she spoke her voice was so like that of her dead father that Flora Knight was shaken to the soul.

"Very well, grandmother, I will respect your wishes until your stay at Rose Hall is ended, but then I will leave you and go away, because I love Dick and I shall marry him."

"And leave me all alone?" demanded Mrs. Knight in an odd tone.

"You cannot miss me, granny, because you are rich, and money will make up to you for lack of love and everything. It's what you want me to throw away! Cousin Susie will be glad to come."

"I dare say she will. She's been pulling wires to that end for five years," snapped Mrs. Knight crossly. "Remember, Mabel, don't let that young man come near me. I shall certainly be rude to him!"

"I am quite sure he will not intrude, grandmother," said Mabel coldly, and she did not turn her head as the old lady pattered away toward the dining room, for the luncheon bell was sounding.

Luncheon over, the older boarders scattered to their rooms for the midday siesta, while the young people started on a long talked of tramp up East mountain. Mabel Knight did not go. She sat in her room and read and dreamed until a sharp cry echoed through the house, a woman's shrill cry of alarm.

"Fire! Fire! Fire!"

Mabel leaped to the door and found the hall filled with a thick yellow smoke. The cook was crying hysterically in the hall below, and doors were flung open, and other shrill feminine voices were added to the alarm.

Mabel went to her grandmother's room and found it empty. She was relieved, because she thought Mrs. Knight was safely out of danger on the front piazza.

So, picking up her own valuables and her grandmother's leather traveling box that contained precious belongings, Mabel hurried downstairs after knocking at the different closed doors along the hall.

Half choking and gasping for breath, she fought her way down to the piazza to find that among all the other boarders two were missing. No one had seen Mrs. Knight or Mrs. Tillerby since luncheon.

Mabel thrust her bundles into somebody's trembling hands and dashed back to the house.

"I must get grandmother!" she called back. And there was no one to stop her going, for the only man left on the place had gone to ring the village fire alarm, and Mrs. Brownlee had gone over to Brookedge station to meet some expected guests.

Smoke was pouring from the rear of the big white house, and every door and window belched forth yellow clouds.

Mabel groped her way into the hall, crept upstairs on her hands and knees and so along to Mrs. Knight's room. Here she found the valiant old lady holding a wet towel before her face while she sought frantically through drawers and closets for something.

"Come, granny; come! I will carry you down!" cried Mabel, tugging at her arm.

"Go away, do!" grumbled Mrs. Knight from her muffled lips. "I'm trying to find Winkie's leash. The poor darling is frightened to death!" Mabel saw that Granny's pet Pomeranian was shivering under her arm.

"Oh, granny; take him as he is. Don't wait. Why, you will be burned to death!" begged the girl.

"Go yourself. Nobody cares if I do burn up!" retorted granny obstinately, but she caught her breath sharply.

A big form dashed into the room and gathered granny in his strong arms, Winkie and all.

"Come, darling!" he shouted, and he wasn't talking to granny, either. Mabel followed, only pausing to help poor Mrs. Tillerby down the stairs.

An hour afterward it was all over. The fire was confined to the kitchen, and the boarders gathered on the grass and voted to camp out there under the maples until the house should be free from smoke once more.

Dick Ashmore, who had carried off granny against her strong wishes, continued to go to and fro, bringing various comforts from their room, until Mrs. Knight laid a trembling hand on his sooty shirt sleeve.

"Do stop this running about, Mr.—er, Dick," she said sharply. "You remind me so much of Mabel's father." She hesitated and coughed. "Mabel's been telling me some things, and somehow I'd rather like to have a masterful man about, and, well, Mabel, you need not hug me to death, and I declare, Dick Ashmore, I do believe you kissed me, sir! Everybody's looking on too. Well, I suppose we might as well announce the engagement that way!"

And strong willed granny stroked Winkie and rocked contentedly in her own chair, which Dick had brought from the piazza.

Noblesse Oblige

Rank imposes obligations—
or—as the French put it—"Noblesse Oblige."

It is a very natural and right principle that those who by their position in life command the respect of others should deserve it and be worthy of maintaining their position. "Much is expected of those in high station."

But this principle is not confined to persons of noble birth—it has a hundred applications. It applies, for example, to those manufacturers of reputation and prestige who make goods of high quality and who advertise them constantly in the newspapers of the land.

By their advertising they have attained an eminence where the very best in quality and good service is expected of them. They have set a standard and their very business life depends on the constant maintenance of it.

So that when you buy advertised articles you rest assured that you are getting the best value that money can buy.

Well may you place your faith in advertised goods. Well may you give them preference over articles which you can only hope may prove satisfactory.

For the principle of "Noblesse Oblige" is your guarantee of excellence in Advertised Goods.

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.
If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 324, Lumsden Building, Toronto.

Three Castes in Bolivia.

Bolivian society is composed of three strata. Firstly, we have the "gente decenta," or white people who show no trace of Indian blood. This class is small, but necessarily influential; indeed, all the government of the country is in their hands. Next comes the "cholos"—those of mixed Spanish and Indian blood—and lastly the pure Indians, who form an immense submerged class—superstitious, ignorant, downtrodden, yet splendid workmen and one of the chief sources of national wealth. It is estimated that of the 3,000,000 people who comprise the Bolivian nation only about 200,000 can read and write. The great mass of these literate people belong to the "gente decente," while the "cholo" and Indian classes are almost totally submerged in ignorance.—Christian Herald.

Wellington as a Shot.

"The hero of Waterloo," says Lady Frances Shelley in her "Diary," "was a very wild shot," and goes on to tell what happened once at Maresfield, where he was visiting her:

"After wounding a retriever early in the day and later on peppering the keeper's gaiters he inadvertently sprinkled the bare arms of an old woman who chanced to be washing clothes at her cottage window.

"I was attracted by her screams, . . . took in the situation at a glance and went to the cottage door.

"'I'm wounded, my lady!' she cried.

"'My good woman,' said I, 'this ought to be the proudest moment of your life! You have had the distinction of being shot by the great duke.'"

SWALLOWED A BULLET

And Came Out of Kitchener's Jaw While Eating

Lord Kitchener once had as narrow escape of his life as ever befell a soldier. It was in the course of the prolonged and fiercely fought campaign in the Soudan in the 'eighties, in the first year of that decade, in fact.

There was a lively skirmish going on at a place named Handoub, just outside Suakim, when Kitchener, who was then a rising young officer of engineers, was shot at by one of the mahdi's negro soldiers. The bullet found its mark in the side of Kitchener's face at the back of the cheek. It was a Remington bullet, and inflicted a really dreadful wound, splintering the bone at the base of the jaw. It took a long time to get the splinters of bone out, and the doctors were unable to operate, as the bullet and fragments of bone were too close to the jugular vein. The ball could not be located, and the doctors pronounced his case as hopeless. They said the patient could not live and his wife, accordingly, was sent for from England.

The future warrior of the Soudan, however, differed from the surgeons, and steadily refused to believe in their gloomy prognostications. His case, and, though he had to endure a journey down the Nile to the hospital at Cairo, confined in a small cabin in sweltering heat, the fine muscular physique and iron will power kept the dreaded fever at bay. The hospital doctors also failed to find the bullet, and came to the conclusion that it had worked its way out during the voyage down the Nile. Kitchener himself was of the opinion that the bullet had, by some means, come out, unnoticed by the surgeons or himself, and gradually the terrible wound healed, and Kitchener returned to duty.

A year or two after this incident, at Khartoum, Kitchener one day sat down to dine off a beefsteak which had been served up by Sergt. Bilton, of the hospital staff. Suddenly Kitchener clapped his hand to his jaw. "Bilton," he said, "what's the matter with that steak?"

"No, sir," replied the sergeant, "There that bullet were in my jaw after all," said Kitchener, "and I've swallowed it, for I felt it go down!"

That proved to be the case, and the great soldier recovered the fatal [illegible]

WESTERN PIONEERS

Men of the Eighties Who Persevered In the Face of Difficulty

There is little left of the Winnipeg of the early eighties. Each year sees a diminution of the links which bind the days when Winnipeg was the stepping-off place, to the present, in which Winnipeg sets the part of the gateway to prosperity and affluence to all who seek diligently and perseveringly. Each year, one or more of those who formed the little band of pioneers who exhibited that diligence and perseverance in the face of almost insuperable obstacles, who stuck to the town of their adoption in spite of hard times, through all the vicissitudes of the growth of Winnipeg from trading post to metropolis, steadfast in their faith in its future, pass to their long rest having seen their judgment justified, their dreams of the city that was to be come true. The city of Winnipeg, and indeed, the whole of Western Canada, joins in paying tribute to the worth of these pioneer citizens of the prairies, whose unbounded optimism it was which made possible the Winnipeg of to-day, and whose prophetic vision outlined, in spite of the struggles in which they were involved, the glorious future of the west, which to-day is just beginning to be realised. The story of their careers is an object lesson to all in display of sterling character, of business integrity, and a wealth of human kindness.—The Saturday Post.

Cured Diseases Of The Kidneys

And is Depended On to Right Stomach and Liver Disorders.

Once Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are introduced into the family and their efficiency becomes known they are usually found too valuable to do without. For everyday ills arising from liver and bowel disorders they bring relief promptly, and when complicated diseases of the kidneys and liver develop they often prove a successful cure after doctors have failed. As an illustration, you may read the following, which was received a few days ago.

Mrs. John Wright, 85 McGee Street, Toronto, Ont., states: "We have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for ten years, and would not be without them. My husband suffered from kidney trouble, and after taking treatment from several doctors without receiving any benefit, tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which worked a complete cure. Since that time we have used them for all stomach and liver disorders."

"All is Well That Ends Well"

Along with dyspepsia comes nervousness, sleeplessness and general ill health. Why? Because a disordered stomach does not permit the food to be assimilated and carried to the blood. On the other hand, the blood is charged with poisons which come from this disordered digestion. In turn, the nerves are not fed on good, red blood and we get those symptoms of nervous breakdown. It is not head work that does it, but poor stomach work. With poor thin blood the body is not protected against the attack of germs of grip—bronchitis—consumption. Fortify the body now with

Lloyd George The Chief Hope

Examiner Special:

LONDON, ENG., Oct. 25.—(Special cable.)— That Lloyd George is again the chief hope of the Liberal party of Britain is well manifested to-day as a result of his speeches and outlining of the new policies lately. The little Welsh Chancellor of the Exchequer and his schemes are again on top, and no matter what side of politics his critics take they cannot but admire his resourcefulness and brainy elucidation of the great problems. Even the Socialists and Labour men, whose attitude to the Liberal leaders has usually isolated them, have joined in acclaiming his proposals. Meantime the new campaign adds interest and importance to the pending bye-elections. From the Government standpoint it is unfortunate that the elevation of Sir Rufus Isaacs to the bench should make a vacancy in such an unpromising constituency as Reading. Isaacs held Reading by a majority of 99 as a result of his own personal popularity. Any other Liberal candidate may lose it.

Irish Diplomacy.

A number of offenders had been disposed of by the magistrate when there was brought before him a son of the old sod.

"Phwat name?" snapped the magistrate as he looked at the prisoner.

"Patrick Casey, sor."

"Hov ye ever been befure me befure?"

"No, your honor'r. Oi've seen but wan face that looked like yourn, an' that was the picture of an Oirish king."

"Discharged!" announced his honor. "Call the next case!"

WHAT'S INDIGESTION? WHO CARES? LISTEN!

"Pape's Diapepsin" Makes Sick, Sour, Gassy Stomachs surely feel fine in five minutes

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, blasting, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest and most certain indigestion remedy in the whole world, and besides it is harmless.

Millions of men and women now eat their favourite foods without fear — they know Pape's Diapepsin will save them from any stomach misery.

Please, for your sake, get a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store and put your stomach right. Don't keep on being miserable—life is too short—you are not here long, so make your stay agreeable. Eat what you like and digest it; enjoy it, without dread of rebellion in the stomach.

Pape's Diapepsin belongs in your home anyway. Should one of the family eat something which don't agree with them, or in case of an attack of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis or stomach derangement at daytime or during the night, it is handy to give the quickest, surest relief known.

Spanish Cabinet Resigns.

MADRID, Oct. 27.—At the opening of the Spanish Parliament yesterday, a vote of confidence in the Government was rejected, 196 to 100. A number of the Deputies abstained from voting. Marquis Manuel Garcia Prieto and other dissentient Liberals refused to support Premier Romanones. The Cabinet, as a result, tendered their resignations to King Alfonso.

AGAINST FERMENTED WINE.

W.C.T.U. Ask That Grape Juice Be Used at Anglican Sacrament.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The convention of the World's Women's Christian Temperance Union adopted a resolution Saturday requesting the house of bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church to "consider the propriety" of using unfermented wine at the communion sacrament in place of fermented wine, "which contains the narcotic poison alcohol."

The resolution was a substitute for one originally offered setting forth that fermented wine "could not truly represent the blood of Christ."

This phrase was objected to by English delegates, who declared that it would antagonize the Church of England. The English delegates also objected to an amendment declaring that Jesus commanded unfermented wine in the holy communion."

Accused Tried To End Life.

MONTREAL, Oct. 27. — Charles Paul, C.E., 59 years old, charged with misappropriation of money entrusted to him by foreigners, attempted suicide by cutting his throat yesterday while en route to police headquarters under arrest. Paul was treated at a hospital and later locked up.

Laborers employed on the Transcontinental Railway allege that Paul was given money to forward to Italy. The money never reached its destination, they claim.

Extra Prizes For Poultry.

GUELPH, Oct. 27.—One thousand dollars was the amount of cash for special prizes to supplement the general list of poultry prizes, announced at the meeting of the poultry committee of the Winter Fair, on Saturday. Besides this, there are many cups, medals and championship ribbons, etc., from the fanciers' clubs.

FIREMEN KILLED.

Seven Dead and Twenty-Four Injured In Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 27.—Seven dead firemen and 24 injured were taken from the store of the Goodyear Rubber Co. here last night in a fire which caused a loss of $500,000. It is believed there are several more bodies in the ruins.

The flames broke out on the second floor and while the firemen were fighting the blaze from the front and rear an explosion sent the walls crashing down on fifty firemen. Windows for blocks around were smashed and the flames spread to adjoining buildings.

Rescuers were sent into the blazing ruins and the bodies of the dead and injured were taken out.

Practically the entire fire-fighting apparatus of the city was called to the scene, which is in the heart of the business section of the city.

OLD LADY IS SLAIN.

Mrs. Chevalier of St. Hilaire, Quebec, Found Murdered.

ST. HILAIRE, Que., Oct. 27.—Lying in a pool of blood with her throat slashed and her skull crushed in from a blow behind the ear, Mrs. Chevalier, a defenceless old lady who lived alone, was found dead Saturday afternoon in the outskirts of St. Hilaire, in the parish of St. Jean Baptiste, Rouville. Mrs. Chevalier had been dead at least twelve hours when her body was discovered.

Robbery is the supposed motive of the deed. The house was completely ransacked. Mrs. Chevalier's clothing was badly torn, showing that there was a struggle before she was felled to the floor, probably by a piece of iron pipe which lay near the body. In the kitchen, a table knife, covered with blood, was found.

Yeggmen Hold Up Aldermans.

OTTAWA, Oct. 27.—Ald. J. B. La Rose of Hull was held up at the point of a revolver by two men whom he discovered early yesterday morning attempting to burglarize his bakery on Montcalm street. They made a clean getaway after intimidating the aldermans. It was discovered that the men, who are believed to be experienced yeggmen, had drilled the combination knob off the safe in the office of the bakery.

REVOLVER WENT OFF.

Young Torontonian Is Killed at Target Practice.

TORONTO, Oct. 27.—Laying down an automatic 22-calibre rifle with which he had been shooting, Cecil Seal, aged 19, 193 Leslie street, accidentally touched the trigger and shot his companion, Samuel Robb, aged 18, of 244 River street, in the back, inflicting a wound of such a serious nature that Robb expired a few minutes later.

The fatality occurred about 5.30 Saturday afternoon at Seal's residence, where Seal had invited Robb for supper and some shooting practice. The boys had been shooting for some minutes when Robb ran towards the target to see where the bullet went. Seal started to lay down the rifle and follow him, when another cartridge exploded, the bullet entering Robb's left shoulder and lodging in the chest.

The chief coroner announced last night that as the occurrence was undoubtedly accidental no inquest will be held.

Seal is under arrest and will appear in the police court to-day.

Carbolic Acid For Medicine.

DESERONTO, Oct. 27.—Little Aileen Gamble, the two-year-old granddaughter of Capt. and Mrs. Gowan of this place, died early Saturday morning from the effects of a dose of carbolic acid given in mistake for medicine. The babe had been ailing for some time, and the doctor was called in and had left the necessary medicine. On Thursday, towards dusk, the child was given a dose and instantly became ill. Investigation showed that carbolic acid had been given instead of the medicine.

Fired Explosives by Rays.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Naval authorities at Portsmouth have just carried out important experiments in firing explosives at a distance by means of concerted electrical rays. A mine charged with explosives was secured to the hull of the cruiser Terpsichore several feet below the waterline, and from a distance said to have been eight miles, was exploded by means of concerted rays. The ship's bottom was so badly damaged that the ship was only saved from sinking by prompt action of five tugs.

Cargo on Fire.

HALIFAX, N.S., Oct. 27.—The British freight steamer Sowwell, bound from Savannah for Havre, France, put in here yesterday with her cargo of cotton on fire. On Friday morning, when 380 miles southeast of Halifax, fire was discovered in the forehold. The fire had gained such headway that the deck was almost at white heat, but the engineers succeeded in cutting holes through which steam pipes were inserted.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

COURT OF REVISION

Will Meet on Friday Next—Twenty-six Appeals Have Been Entered

THE LIST IS SMALL

The Court of Revision will be held in the City Council Chamber on Friday next. The Court will meet to consider appeals respecting the assessment returns made during the current year. A total of twenty-six appeals have been entered, four of which are requests for a change involving a question of ownership. The total number of appeals is small, when it is considered that there was an increase in the assessment of over one million dollars. Last year the increase amounted to approximately half a million dollars, and about the same number of appeals were entered.

One man, whose name appears in the appended list, claims to have been wrongly charged for a dog, while the Toronto Savings and Loan Company have entered a blanket apeapl which may cover a number of properties owned by the company.

The list comprises the following:

B. F. Ackerman, Sori & Co., overcharged on land.

J. A. Aylmer, overcharged on income.

W. C. Barrie, wrongly charged for increase.

Calcutt Brewing and Malting Co., overcharged on land and wrongly rated for schools.

J. H. Calendar, change asked.

J. J. Clancy, change asked.

Mrs. M .B. Curry, overcharged on land.

F. A. Dalton, overcharged on land.

D. Desautel, wrongly assessed.

George Evans, change asked.

T. H. Girvan, wrongly rated for schools.

W. F. Johnston, overcharged on land.

F. E. Kerr, wrongly charged for income.

Napo Laplante, overcharged on land.

London Life Insurance Co., overcharged.

Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Co., overcharged on land.

George Pollard, wrongly charged for a dog.

R. Starr, overcharged on land.

James Sutherland, overcharged on land.

Toronto General Trusts Corporation, change asked.

Cut With Pea-Shooter

Two-year-old Son of Detective Meagher Painfully Injured

Oswald, the two-year-old son of Detective Meagher, of the Peterborough Police Department, was the victim of a particularly painful and nasty accident this morning. While playing with a tin pea-shooter in his mouth, the little fellow fell and the sharp tin edge badly cut the inside of his mouth and throat. Two doctors were called in to dress the injury.

EMILY MAN CHOKED TO DEATH AT SUPPER

Piece of Meat Lodged in His Throat While Eating in a Lindsay Hotel

LINDSAY, Oct. 27.—John O'Connor of the Township of Emily, aged forty-five, and unmarried, choked to death at the supper table in the King Edward Hotel here Saturday evening.

O'Connor was seated at the table with Mr. Martin Carroll and others, and while he was eating some meat a piece lodged in his throat. Those at the table, seeing his struggles, came to his assistance and carried him to an upstairs room. Dr. Blanchard was summoned, but before he arrived the man had expired. The body was removed to Tanney's undertaking parlours and afterwards to his home in Emily Township.

CHARGE WAS DISMISSED

Magistrate Held There Was No Evidence to Show That Prisoner Had Stolen Watch or Money

TO-DAY'S POLICE COURT

Fred Eastland appeared in police court this morning, charged with stealing a sum of money and silver watch and chain from Thos. McKinley.

Crown Attorney Wood conducted the prosecution and Mr. G. N. Gordon the defence.

Thos. McKinley the plaintiff, was the first witness. Examined by Mr. Wood, he said he was a labourer and came to the City last Thursday. When he came to the City he had $65 in bills. On Friday he spent $20 or more for clothes at Grafton's. On Monday, the day the theft was supposed to have been committed, McKinley said that he got very drunk. He stayed at Long's hotel Monday night, and in the morning he found his watch was gone, and the money he had left in his his pocket. He had $20 left, which he had kept safely by putting it in his inside vest pocket. He couldn't say how much money he lost or whether he lost any. He didn't remember seeing prisoner Monday night. He had known prisoner for some time. They were good friends.

Alex. Walker was the next witness. He came into Long's hotel Monday night and saw Eastland with his hands in McKinley's pocket. McKinley was very drunk. He went back to Eastland and told him that that was not a very manly thing to do. Eastland told him to mind his own business and swore at him. Walker then went into the bar and told the head bartender what was going on.

Jas. LeBar, the bartender at Long's hotel, was the next witness. He said that on Monday night Walker told him there was a fellow outside with his hands in McKinley's pockets. He didn't think it was any business of his and didn't do anything.

Magistrate Dumble—I am ashamed to hear any white man say that. A man of your morals would commit any crime yourself.

Detective Meagher was the next witness. He arrested prisoner on Tuesday afternoon, and foundon him $6 in bills, and McKinly's watch and chain.

Mr. George Lenton of the Dickson Lumber Company, was the next witness. He had paid Eastland $14 on Thanksgiving Day afternoon.

Eastland was the only witness for the defence. He said that he was drinking with McKinley on Monday night. McKinley was very drunk and was swinging his watch around. Eastland offered to keep it for him and McKinley agreed. Eastland was arrested that night for rbeing drunk, and did not get out of police court till ten o'clock. Before he could find McKinley to return the watch, he was arrested by Meager for theft.

The Magistrate dismissed the case against Eastland on the grounds that no evidence was offered to prove he had stolen either the money or the watch from McKinley.

Robert Carney was fined $2 and costs, $4.60 in all, for using abusive language to Albert Legros. Robert attempted to explain it by saying that they had "a little ulceration,' but it didn't work.

Jas. Wallace was charged with stealing $1 (one dollar) from Robert L. Anderson of Otonabee. Robert, who is on the blacklist, swore that he gave James $1 to buy some whiskey for him. James, he said, went away with the dollar and never came back. James swore that Robert never gave him a dollar, so the case was dismissed.

WILL PREACH AT THE ANNIVERSARY

One of Most Prominent Priests in Canada at Church of the Sacred Heart

Rev. Father Doyle, S.J., of Guelph, will preach at the Church of the Sacred Heart on Sunday, November 16, in connection with anniversary services, in the morning and evening of that day. Bishop O'Brien will sing pontifical high mass and the occasion will in other respects be an important one for the South End Parish.

At the next meeting of the T. A. S. a debate on the woman's suffrage question will be held, the affirmative being taken by Messrs. A. Doris and H. Donovan, and the negative by Messrs. W. Grady and D. M. Minnicola.

THE MARJORY BROWN SINKING—In the storm last week, the four-masted Schooner Marjory Brown, commanded by Captain James T. Walker, came to grief 200 miles east of Sandy Hook. The steamer Berlin of the North German Lloyd which arrived in quarantine from the Mediterranean, rescued all hands from the Marjory Brown just before the schooner sank near the Nantucket shoals. Captain Walker of the schooner and his five men sat in a yawl made fast to the sinking craft as the Berlin opportunely steamed into view. It was all they could do to pull from the wreck to the steamer's side. The accompanying photograph shows the schooner diving toward ocean bottom just as the crew pulled away from her.

ASQUITH'S SPEECH HARD TO UNDERSTAND

Much Difference of Opinion as to the Interpretation of His Remarks in Regard to Home Rule

PRESS COMMENTS

Special Cable to The Examiner.

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 27.—While there is much difference of opinion as to the interpretation of Asquith's Home Rule speech it is generally considered as an offer to consider a plan for the temporary exclusion of Ulster from the administrative area of the proposed Dublin Parliament, if the Unionists will co-operate to secure a general settlement by consent. In some quarters it is said this is King George's suggestion of compromise. However the Daily Chronicle, which has always lead the campaign against exclusion of compromise of any kind, says this morning that Asquith intends no exclusion. The Times, this morning, condemns Asquith for obscurity of utterance on such an important matter. There is a growing conviction in the minds of independent critics that the ultimate solution of the problem will be found at the eleventh hour in the temporary exclusion of the north east provinces.

FOUND DEAD IN HIS BARN

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 27.—Alonzo G. Howse, aged 49, Vice-President of the Dominion Carriage Co., was found dead in the barn at his country home at Lambeth last evening, due to heart failure. His wife survives him. Interment will take place at Woodland Cemetery to-morrow. He was one of the most prominent Masons and commercial travellers in Ontario. Besides his parents, who reside at Aylmer, he leaves three brothers—Derwin and George of Aylmer, Fred of St. Thomas, and two sisters, Mrs. Bagnell of Copenhagen, Ont., and Mrs. J. E. Day of Guelph.

A TWILIGHT MUSICALE

The first of the Twilight Musicales under the auspices of the Woman's Art Association will be held at the Conservatory Music Hall on Saturday afternoon next at four o'clock. These musicales, held each month during the fall and winter last year, were greatly enjoyed by a large number of people and many are looking forward with not a little pleasure to the first of the series this year.

ACCIDENT TO LOCAL MAN IN THE WEST

Mr. Archie Burrison Seriously Injured as the Result of an Explosion

CAME FROM ROSENEATH

Word was received here Saturday of an accident to Mr. Archie Burrison, formerly of Roseneath. The unfortunate affair occurred near Elbow, in Saskatchewan, where Mr. Burrison was engaged as engineer with a threshing gang. The gasoline engine which he was running, exploded, resulting in serious injuries to Mr. Burrison, the exact nature of which is not yet known. Mrs. John Burrison, of Roseneath, mother of the young man, left at once, on receipt of the telegram, for the West.

Mr. Robertson Said Farewell

A very large congregation was present in the Murray Street Church yesterday morning, when Mr. H. D. Robertson delivered a powerful sermon on "The Chinese Life."

Mr. Robertson, who returned from China, where he was a missionary, about two years ago, leaves again for the Chinese Mission field this afternoon. He will sail on the Empress of Asia for China to continue the work which he was proceeding with in that country before his return home two years ago. His many friends in this City will wish him and Mrs. Robertson every success in the work of evangelization which they are taking up again.

Yesterday morning Mr. Robertson spoke of the customs, habits and beliefs, the Chinese would have to get rid of before they could Christianized and civilized to the same extent as the western countries.

His sermon included a brilliant description of the condition of the Chinese before the entrance of missionaries and of the progress that was being made by the representatives of the Christian Church in China.

THE PRICE OF MILK

Despite rumours to the contrary there is no immediate prospects of an increase in the price of milk. The prevailing prices are six and seven cents respectively. The minimum price is for private householders and the maximum for public institutions, hotels, etc. The closing of the cheese factories throughout the country will have the effect of precipitating a large quantity of milk into the market. One prominent milk dealer is authority for the statement that the present prices will prevail all winter, while others are of the opinion that an increase will become imperative after Christmas.

As a whole, the dealers are satisfied with the present prices, and unless some unforeseen circumstance arises, no attempt will be made to increase the rates.

HUMAN BONES UNEARTHED IN EAST CITY

Six Skulls Uncovered Near the Vermont Marble Company's Plant —Supposed to be of Indian Origin

BURIED A LONG TIME

A quantity of human bones was unearthed this morning on the property of the Vermont Marble Company, East City. The gruesome find was made by James Conroy while excavating on the east side of the company's building. The bones which are supposed to be of Indian origin comprise six skulls and a quantity of bones that go to make up the human body.

The bones were found in a heap three feet below the surface. They were removed and placed in a crate. The spot where the skeletons were found is situated a short distance from the lake. It is supposed that the locality was once the camping place of a band of redskins. How the bodies came to be interred at that particular spot is only a matter of conjecture. The excavation was being made for the purpose of securing a quantity of sand for use in the marble works, when the bones were uncovered. They were in a badly shattered condition and bore evidences of having been in the ground for a long period.

Harvest Festival At Park St. Church

Special Harvest Festival services at the Park Street Baptist Church on Sunday were largely attended. In the morning the pastor, Rev. Mr. Conners spoke on "Thinkfulness and Thankfulness." The church was appropriately decorated by the ladies and was decidedly reminiscent of the harvest season. An eloquent sermon in the evening was delivered by Rev. W. Carey Sage, late of Wheatley, Ont., whose text was from Isaiah 8-20. Special music was rendered by the choir under the leadership of Mr. Harry Hill. "Praise the Lord Oh Jerusalem" and "While the Earth Remaineth" were the anthems which were well sung by the choir.

Mr. Jones sang very effectively "Jesus Lover of My Soul." The offerings for the building fund were unusually large. This evening the annual harvest supper will be held in the basement of the church from 6 to 8 o'clock. Afterwards a good programme will be presented with addresses by Rev. W. W. Lowe, of Norwood; Rev. W. J. Gregory, of Lakefield; Rev. R. J. McLaren, of Gilmour Church, and Rev. W. Carey Sage.

PLANT IN OPERATION

Vermont Marble Company Will Commence Manufacturing Operations This Week

MACHINERY INSTALLED

The Vermont Marble Company expect to commence manufacturing operations this week. The work of installing the machinery is nearing completion and in a few days the ring of the gang saws will reverberate throughout the building. One car load of marble has already arrived and several more are on the road. The Examiner was privileged to make a trip through the plant which presents more activity inside than the exterior would indicate. Four large gang saws mounted on movable trucks are located at the eastern end of the building. Two sand pumps work in conjunction with the saws. Sand and water are essential compositions in connection with the operation of cutting the marble blocks into the required size. Three rubbing beds of twelve andf ourteen foot dimensions constitute a part of the equipment.

The final process in the manufacture of the marble is the finishing operation which is accomplished with the aid of four finishing machines. The marble is polished with three different kinds of buffing surface, after which it passes to the coping and moulding machines.

Pneumatic tools are used throughout the plant in the various processes through which the marble passes. Air for their operation, is furnished by an air compressor.

A large force of men will be employed at the works when the plant is completed. The travelling crane used to transfer the marble from the cars to the building will arrive in a few days.

Mr. T. M. Howard, Jr., is manager of the plant, and Mr. Holden, superinteudent.

MISS LONEGRAN TO PLAY AT RECITAL

Chosen by Toronto College of Music for Important Musical Event

Miss Mary Lonergan, A.T.C.M., of this City, has been signally honoured in being chosen by the Toronto College of Music to take part in their annual concert which will be held tomorrow evening in Massey Hall, Toronto, under the direction of Dr. F. H. Torrington, Principal of the College.

These concerts have acquired a national reputation from the fact that those taking part are prominent graduates from the colleges throughout Canada. Miss Lonergan will play Beethoven's Concerto in C minor with full orchestral accompaniment.

PROGRESS MADE

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The Peterborough Co-operative Society Limited will this week issue their second quarterly balance sheet, and this report will show to the public and the shareholders that we have made considerable progress all along the line.

Earl Grey says there is no happiness so great as that which is found in the support of a great ideal, and there was no greater ideal before the people today that the co-operative ideal. When the promoters of this ideal movement in our City see their efforts rewarded by loyal support, they have every reason to be happy and pleased.

While not financially connected with the bakery business, we claim that we have helped towards keeping down the price of bread by concentrating our trade. The directors are greatly encouraged by the manner in which the shareholders have helped to overcome all difficulties in the bread line by their patience and willingness to put up with some inconvenience.

Our coal trade is booming in fact this move has given the society considerable of a boost, because we have the best coal on the market at the most reasonable price; it is free from slate and clinkers, gives more heat and lasts as long, if not longer, than any other coal. We expect in the near future, to have an unlimited supply.

Never in the short history of our society were we in a more healthy condition than at present. We buy and sell for cash. Therefore, we have nothing on our books and no outstanding accounts to meet.

Yours truly,
JOSEPH BEGLEY,
President.

RIVER IS AT ITS LOWEST

Water Supply Is Unusually Low and Seymour Power Company Has Had Heavy Demand

HAVE SUPPLIED 1875 H. P.

The water in the river is exceptionally low and to meet the City's power requirements the Seymour Power Company has been far some time bringing in energy as high as 1815 h.p. The peak load is felt in the evenings generally about eight or nine o'clock, and at this hour the local electric plants have faltered under the demands placed upon them. The Seymour Power Company, with its generating plants at Trenton, Campbellford, Fenelon Falls, Frankfort, Belleville and other points, easily coped with the situation by falling back upon the rest of their plant when the local supply was unable to carry the load placed upon it.

The rest of their plant and Peterborough manufacturers have been given an uninterrupted service. Even the consumers of power in the persons of householders have been given a continuously satisfactory service, and from this end would not have been aware of the fact that the Otonabee is reduced to such puny proportions that on Saturday night one local plant developed scarcely 100 h.p. It is stated by an authority, whether it is the true explanation or not, that the failure in the water supply is due to injudicious regulation.

HIGEWAYS COMMISSION

Special to the "Examiner."

TORONTO, Oct. 27.—The Provincial Highways Commission leave tonight for Ottawa, from which point they will spend several weeks inspecting roads and hearing deputations of municipal authorities from the counties of middle and eastern Ontario.

Large Number Attend Recital

There was a good attendance at the recital at the Greene Music Company's establishment, Charlotte Street, on Saturday afternoon. This is the first concert of he season, and will be continued for several weeks. The programme was an excellent one and elicited favourable comment from those who were fortunate enough to be present. The popularity of these recitals was established last season, and there is every reason to believe that the present season will prove equally as successful.

LET THE PEOPLE KNOW WHAT THE PAVING CONTRACT CALLS FOR

Let the People know
To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In justice to the taxpayers of this City, I think the agreement entered into between the company or individuals who are at present paving the streets, and the City, should be made public. The people will then be able to judge, to some extent at any rate, whether the company are living up to the agreement and specifications or not.

I notice that the concrete foundation laid along George Street consists of a mixture made up of four wheelbarrows of rounded water-stone and sand to one bag of cement. This is about a fifteen to one mixture, and is laid on the street about three inches in thickness, where it is allowed to set without any protection whatever from the weather.

If this is the kind of paving foundation the people are paying for, perhaps it would be just as well for them to know it.

Yours truly,
One of Those Interested.

ST. JOHN'S YOUNG PEOPLE'S ASSOCIATION.

A Hallowe'en party is to be given by the Young People's Association next Friday evening, Oct. 31, 1913, at 8:15 in the schoolroom of St. John's Church.

The party will take the form of a reception, at which the Association will endeavour to provide a good deal of fun and laughter, and also present a few suggestions regarding the movements of the Society during the coming season.

STRAINING AT A GNAT.

The aldermanic mind is a mystery in the erratic character of its manifestations. In Brantford an alderman, chairman of the Fire and Light committee, though apparently convinced of the utility of the pulmotor as a means of saving life, declines to purchase one for the Fire Department because the price is fifty dollars more than he thinks he should be. It has been demonstrated that the pulmoter has effected wonderful restorations to active life in cases where vitality has been reduced to the lowest point, by drowning or asphyxiation by gas or smoke. That it is an invaluable adjunct to a fire department, in view of its efficiency and of the danger of suffocation to which firemen are subjected in the discharge of their duty, goes without saying. Yet this economical alderman in Brantford balks at fifty dollars—weighing that amount against human life. Yet, again, if he is like the average alderman, he would hold up both hands for some junketting trip, which would cost many times fifty dollars, and perhaps be of little advantage; while two hundred dollars spent in a life-saving pulmoter might save a human life upon whose value the most calculating alderman would not dare to place a figure. We can now apreciate the force of our Lord's saying, 'strain at a gnat and swallow a camel."

A WANING CAUSE.

Conservative workers have reason to be disappointed with the outcome in East Middlesex which resulted in the reduction of the Conservative majority as compared with the elections of 1911. True, they scored a victory, but a few such victories—a similar general reduction of majorities throughout Canada would deprive them of a majority in Parliament. Every effort had been put forward by the Conservatives to make a good showing. Not only did several Cabinet Ministers join in the campaign, but also a number of less public workers of the "gum shoe" brigade. On the other hand the riding had been conceded by the Liberals, and the contest had not been made with the vigour that marked several by-elections. In the face of this Mr. Glass, the Government candidate, only secured a majority of 308 as against 661 secured by Mr. Elson at the last election. With all the prestige and other influences of the Government behind him he fell 293 behind the Conservative majority there in 1911. The Conservatives boasted that they had turned over 90 votes in Chateauguay. This time there is a turn-over against them of 147 in response to the Toronto Mail and Empire's demand for a majority of 1,000 to support the Borden contribution plan. Such an answer from the heart of Onario Toryism shows that the real Canadian spirit is still alive there as it is elsewhere in Canada.

CHATEAUGUAY THEN AND NOW.

Chateauguay, Quebec, has two contrasting claims to distinction. It has made a very bright and a very dark mark in Canadian history. One on October 26th, 1812, and one on Oct. 16th, 1913. On the first occasion Chateauguay was the scene of the patriotic heroism that saved Quebec to the British Crown; the other was the scene of a disgracefully unpatriotic strife that lost the good name of Quebec and Canada to the annals of Canada. The real saviour of Canada during the war of aggression and hoped-for but disappointed conquest, —of 1812, was Lieutenant-Colonel de Salaberry, who deserves all the credit of the defeat of the United States forces at Chateauguay. On that occasion the highest type of chivalric patriotism was shown by the French Canadians. Then all these Canadians were British to the heart and in no way second in the matter of loyalty and devotion to British connection to those born under the flag. These points were brought out admirably in an address of Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, before the Canadian Club of Montreal. The closing sentences of his address are worthy repetition. They were:

A century has now passed. Since then we have had eventful days. What will our relations be with the United States henceforth? Canadians and Americans are common heirs to British traditions; they are the common repository of the splendid achievements of the race. We are common workers for the social betterment and the moral progress of the world. But whilst we recognise these common origins and these common ideals no one dreams of a political union. Having obtained our political institutions from the mother country, we, as Canadians, are proud of our place in the British Empire. The fiscal policy of Washington has ceased to be the nightmare of Canada. For years the tariff has laid heavily upon our shoulders. The teaching of our adversity has been the faith of our prosperity. There is no immigration from Canada to the United States. For many long years our young men, lured by American glamour, left us for the great cities, the busy factories, the long trails of the western prairies of the United States. The drain was a heavy one but now the tide has changed, and the people of the United States are now coming to Caanda. Here we are engaged in an all-absorbing process of building up our young country. We are rearing up cities on the western plains, sending railways over hills and passes, across great stretches of virgin land. A growing commerce is passing out of our seaports, and the St. Lawrence is fast becoming the great highway of the North American continent. The British Empire and the American Commonwealth are the two greatest factors for peace and civilization, with Canada, the oldest and largest of the young nations acting as a link between the two. "If to-day an uncertain state of things arose there would be the same loyalty in the defence of the crown."

These great results of the victory of Chateauguay and the accompanying victory for British interests and institutions on the greater half of this continent could be no more loyally and elegantly and heartily expressed by a Briton "to the manner born," than by a distinguished French Canadian. In the light of such words; in the light of the evidence of history and other evidence we can have no doubt of the loyalty of the mass of our French-Canadian fellow citizens to the British Crown and British institutions. There is, unfortunately a mis-guided section of that portion of our citizenship that sings in another key and is practically encouraged by a section of English-speaking Caandians who are loudest in their professions of loyalty, and have been loudest in their denunciation of the French-Canadians as disloyal and untrustworthy; but are the first to take to their hearts and make party associates and Ministers of the Crown of a disloyal French-Canadian faction which would "shoot holes through the flag," and have "no use for England and the English." How will history appraise the relative loyalty and devotion of Canadians of Chateauguay a century ago and of the Caandians of to-day, who have made Chateauguay in this twentieth century the fighting ground of factionism, for the triumph of an unholy political alliance by methods as corrupt and un-British as the alliance, whose success was as dearly and darkly bought in money as was the success of 1812 with blood and courage.

WHERE IS THAT EMERGENCY?

Winston Churchill recently proposed to the Kaiser that if Germany would postpone naval building for a year Great Britain would do likewise. Germany has declined. And for what reason? Because, as pointed out in the cable despatches, she declares the proposal is not an honest one, while Churchill is expecting three ships from Borden. So the effect of the Borden conbribution is to prevent a friendly alliance between England and Germany.

NEITHER SCAPEGOAT NOR MASOOT.

The Government of Canada stands or falls togethr. The very essence of responsible government makes the Prime Minister and his Cabinet as a whole responsible for the failures, errors, and crimes of each member. No one member can be made a scapegoat, on whose disgraced head may be confessed the sins of the Government, and who may be sent away into the wilderness of political oblivion. Neither forgiveness nor relief can come that way. And so, too, is it folly for the Government and its supporters to magnify one of its discredited members into the mascot of the party, whose presence or whose influence may be counted on to bring luck in elections. Neither scapegoat nor mascot will atone for the Government's betrayal of public trust or blind the people to the Government's denial of its own promises.

It may be that the mishandling of the situations with which the Minister of Labour has had to deal will lead to the retirement of Hon. T. W. Crothers and his appointment to be a Judge, as is currently and persistenly reported. But if so, that scapegoat will carry from the Government to the oblivion of the Bench none of the offences for which the whole Cohinet, by the very obligations of Cabinet rule, must be held fully responsible. Not only did the Cabinet sanction the actions of Mr. Crothers and sustain him in his blundering, but Mr. Borden, had he the qualifications for Premiership, must have appreciated beforehand Mr. Crothers' capacity for bungling so large a problem. The scapegoat may go, but accountability for the wrong-doing remains.

It would now appear that the machinations of Hon. Robert Rogers for the real leadership of the Government, made manifest in Parliament, especially during last session, have been successful. Despite his tainted and utterly damaged political reputation he is openly accepted as the mascot of the party. His cynical bravado has triumphed. When straightly charged with political chicanery and electoral corruption, such as no honourable member ever faced without indigation or shame, his characteristic answer was: "I know how to win elections." That "luck" in winning elections, as Macdonald was won, has made him the mascot of the party. When the Premier was allowed to go from the banquet damned with faint cheers, the mascot was carried shoulders high.

But it ought to be unthinkable that a man of his type, coarse, vulgar, hopelessly compromised, should be given a place of prominence in any group of selfrespecting politicians in Canada. It ought to be beyond belief that gentlemen with the honourable pretensions of Mr. Borden, Mr. White, Mr. Perley, Mr. Burrell, would accept as a colleague men of the Rogers ilk. And yet with his Manitoba record, ugly and soiled, exposed and known in all political circles throughout Canada, he was chosen by Mr. Borden or he compelled the choice. Responsibility for that choice cannot be thrown aside. The Premier and every decent member is compromised and corrupted by their recognition of men like Mr. Rogers. The mascot is as damaging as the scapegoat.—The Globe.

Programme Of Lloyd George
The Peaceful Revolutionist

Four years ago the "little Welshman," who was then and is now British Chancellor of the Exchequer, startled not only his own country, but the world by the introduction of a new scheme of taxation, the avowed object of which was to compel large property owners to pay their fair share of taxation. It was a revolutionary budget inasmuch as it indicated that a change had taken place in Britain in the composition of what is generally known as the "governing class." It marked the arrival of the time when the power of legislating for themselves first and for the masses second, would be taken out of the hands of the large landed property owners. It was an important step in a revolution as great as the revolution which had preceded it by a century in France, but happily without the bloodshed that places the French episode among the historical horrors. The famous Lloyd George budget was passed after a bitter fight at the polls, it became effective, and in its operation it has been as beneficial as its inventor predicted.

The second step in the peaceful revolution was the passage by the British Parliament, under the leadership of the Asquith government, of a mass of social legislation that has been far reaching in improving the conditions under which those of limited income live and in protecting the workers from the selfish greed of some of their employers.

Th third step has been announced this week by the same "little Welshman" who was responsible for the initiation of the peaceful revolution.

Political parties in England, in the United States, and in other countries have obtained or retained power by their war policies. The Asquith government retained its position in 1910 and again in 1911 by a new kind of war policy. Instead of exploiting the barbarian instinct, the blood-letting proclivities of the people, it appealed to their sense of justice. Its battlecry "the People vs. the Peers" swept everything before it. All the efforts of the able men on the other side could not stay the flood that had set in toward Liberaliam.

The time draws near when the Asquith government will have to make another appeal to the electors. There are doubts as to how the country will divide on the Irish Home Rule Bill; there is much feeling against the State Insurance Act due to the newness of the machinery which operates it. But Lloyd George once more steps to the front with a policy that threatens to sweep aside all other issues and make certain for the Asquith government a new lease of life.

Chester, in his special cables to The Free Press, says that all England has been left "breathless" at the legislation which Mr. Lloyd George now announces the Asquith government is unanimously determined to place on the statute books. The Lloyd George land proposals are the natural corollary of the Lloyd George budget. The surprise with which they have been received is due to the stupendousness of the scheme and its daring. Yet despite the magnitude and the far-reaching effect of his proposals, this wonderful man has presented them at the very outset in such a way as to electrify the people affected by the proposed legislation, as well as the students of political economy the world over.

To appreciate the giant task which Lloyd George has set himself one must have a proper realization of the enormous power of the "vested interest" in England. Lloyd George's reliance in his fight against this monster is his personal ability to rally to his standard a power mightier than even the "vested interest"—the power of the masses armed with the franchise No one know abetter than these men who have laid down the issue how difficult it is to control the power of the people and how easily it can be divided into ineffective sections.

A perusal of Lloyd George's preliminary speech at Bedford in which he outlined generaly the aims and objects of the land legislation which he was about to introduce, indicates that this campaign will be conducted on almost identical lines with that in which he forced the Peers to accept his bitter-pill budget. With the old fire he presents his case, with the old magic touch he draws a picture of the present situation with the old graphic language he describes the new England which he believes will appear after the application of his remeides:

Landlordism is the greatest of all monopolies, he declares, and it is the least controlled of all. Landlordism can and does, by legal process, not merely ordain wildernesses, but it can and does maintain them. It can destroy cottages and drive the peasantry away into exile. It can do more than a foreign enemy. No better country than England for farming can be found in the world yet the total of farmers and farm labourers is but 1,500,000. The labourers are paid less than it would cost the State to maintain them on workhouse fare. Their wages are less today than they were in proportion to the purchasing capacity in the reign of Henry VII. Can it be wondered at that young labourers are fiving by thousands out of the country? There is no country in the world where cultivated, and highly cultivated land, is so overrun and so continuously damaged by game. The number of game keepers in England has increased in sixty years from 9,000 to 23,000, and in the same period the number of labourers on the land has been reduced by 600,000! The country has to choose between the power of the landlord and the prosperity of the labourer. The first things to be done are to "deal firmly, thoroughly, drastically with the land monopoly."

That is the situation in brief which Lloyd George describes in the most picturesque and readily understandable language. One can see great audiences, both in town and country, rising to their feet to acclaim their champion. One can see the Peers refusing to adopt the Lloyd George remedies and later being compelled by the people to accept them.

* * *

Lloyd George proposes to place the land question in the hands of a new Minister of the Crown who shall have power through commissioners, to remove impediments, whether legal or otherwise, to the cultivation of the land; to acquire at a reasonable price all waste derelict, and neglected tracts of land and to drain and reclaim them for cultivation or plant them with forests; to purchase even cultivated lands where required for the people; to adjudicate on the rentals of small farms; to enable small holdings; to prescribe minimum wages for farm labourers, and to insist upon sanitary dwellings with garden plots for them; to revise the game laws so that the cultivator may not be subject to their tyranny; to improve and cheapen he facilities for bringing farm produce to market.

Here is a policy that will appeal not only to the agricultural opulation, but to millions in the cities and towns. Bearing in mind that in no part of England are there agricultural lands removed more than what we would regard as a step from some town or city, and that all are within easy reach of railways, one can understand the force of the Scriptural imagery which Lloyd George used in his prophetic peroration.

Where you now see rush, thorn and bramble and covert for game, you will have luxuriant crops feeding the hungry. You will have contented men happy women, and merry children, care anxiety hunger driven forever from their faces by the sunshine of the new hope that will have dawned on their native land. Then it can be said of this rich, fertile, beautiful land, as was said of another country where Jubilee protected the home of the peasantry:—

"Thou visitest the earth and makest it very plenteous.

Thou crownest the year with Thy goodness and Thy clouds drop fatness.

"They shall drop upon the dewllings of the wilderness and the little hills shall rejoice on every side.

"The folds shall be full of sheep, the valleys also shall stand so thick with corn that they shall laugh and sing."

Liberalsim is proud of Lloyd George; in him the people of the British Isles have a champion; in him the inhabitants of the Dominions find an exemplar; in him is an object lesson for the world.—Ottawa Free Press.

Postponement Of Offical Plans

Owing to lateness of season I have decided to delay conveyance plans until Spring. I have however made careful measurements and a fairly correct sketch showing location and sizes of lots, streets, lanes etc. From this intending purchasers may select at once, and this should be done without delay by a large number of people who want to save a little of what they earn, who may prefer having a home of their own with a nice garden in Spring, or who may desire a special garden block to make money for them while they sleep. Low prices, easy terms, assistance to build. Every lot will grow and make money by increasing values as city grows. Call for particulars.

PETERBORO' COLLEGIATE TEAM WIN HARD GAME FROM LINDSAY STUDENTS BY 3 TO 1

Garnet and Grey Fourteen Victorious in a Tight Battle Marked by the Prettiest Rugby of the Season---Peterborough Team Were Outweighed But Had the Speed and Tackled Better Than the Visitors---An Exciting Climax.

In one of the hardest fought and most evenly contested Rugby games seen here in some time the Peterborough Collegiate fourteen defeated the Lindsay Collegiate at Nicholls Oval, on Saturday, by the narrow margin of 3 points to 1.

The figures indicate the closeness of the play, neither team being able to carry the ball over its opponents' line for a touch down.

It was a battle royal with the local students winning the decision after as game a fight as the most ardent fan would wish to see.

Outweighed on an average by fifteen pounds per man the odds were certainly against the Garnet and Grey, and when the teams lined up for the initial kick-off it was an optimistic enthusiast who prophesied a Peterborough win. However, the local youngsters played with a snap and vim that neutralized the superior bulk of their opponets, and by their speed, grand tackling, and clean handling of the ball had the edge on the visitors throughout, although all their good playing nearly came to nought in the dying moments of the game.

With Peterborough in possession at their own thirty yard line, leading by 6 to 1, with about five minutes to play, the Garnet and Grey team made the mistake of not kicking on their third down, and had to hand over the ball to the visitors. The error in judgment was nearly fatal, as on Lindsay's second down Carewe broke through the middle of the Peterborough line and got clear away.

It looked as if the locals were beaten then and there, but Long brought Carewe dow nwith a neat tackle a yard out from the line.

Even then it seemed as if nothing could stop the heavy Lindsay team from bucking over for the five points that would have meant victory.

Fighting in the last ditch, however the Central Park youngsters showed their gameness.

Lindsay hurled a buck at the line but the man with the ball was dragged down after gaining only a foot.

Bang! came another mass play, the lines snapped together and piled up and for a moment it looked as if the attack had been successful. However when Referee Dr. McPherson had delved to the bottom of the struggling heap the ball was found to be six inches outside the line.

Once more the Lindsay stalwarts threw all their weight into forcing the pigskin the necessary half a foot to victory, but the lighter Petes braced themselves and held like a stone wall.

The two teams struggled for a moment exactly on the touch line and then Eastwood, grabbing the ball from the Lindsay bucker, tore out to the five-yard line, and the game was saved.

The Petes bucked twice and then Long kicked well down the field, relieving the pressure. A fumble, a moment after, gave Peterborough the ball at their forty-yard line, and they held Lindsay safely to the final whistle.

It was a thrilling climax to a great game.

Every youngster on the Peterborough team had his share in the win.

The wing line tackled beautifully, grassing their men with neat, low grapples that broke up nearly all of Lindsay's running plays. They followed up splendidly and often nailed the Lindsay backs in their tracks after they had caught a punt, and they did fine work as well in stopping bucks on the line.

The flying brigade—Eastwood at flying wing, Macdonald and Horsfield, the two outsides, and Smith and Stratton, who came up on the line when Lindsay had the ball, did some splendid tackling, killing off most of Lindsay's end runs and long passes, while the middle wings, Jobbitt and Knox, and the inside guards Stevenson and Cannift, did great work, both on the attack and on the defence. The scrimmagers more than held their own with Lindsay's heavy trio and several times uncorked a scrimmage buck that gained ground.

The Collegiate played only two men back when Lindsay had the ball, Long and Rogers patrolling the back field in great style. They handled the Lindsay kicks accurately, ran the ball back well and both hit the line hard, or smashed round the end for gains. Long kicked splendidly, his high twisters being hard to handle, while they gave the Petes' wings ample time to get down the field. Stratton, at quarter, handled the ball so effectively that there was not a fumble throughout the afternoon in carrying out a play from scrimmage. Not once did Peterborough lose possession on a bad pass or a mis-cue in getting the ball out.

Lindsay showed up with a heavy, capable-looking team. They have a fine kicking half in Williamson, although he made the mistake of kicking low and far, giving his wings little chance to get down on the Peterborough backs. Weeks, a big, fast back-field man, showed fine speed, and got away several times for good gains, although he was generally nailed before he could get going. He would be very effective if he were taught the advantage of using a straight aim in eluding tackles. On the wing line Carewe and Stewart were the most effective. They both hit the line hard and required some stopping when they have the ball. The outside wings did not tackle nearly so effectively as the Peterborough pair.

The chief weaknss in the Lindsay play was their tendency to fumble. Their backs were not sure in handling the Peterborough kicks, and in addition, the Lindsay students lost possessiona half-dozen times by dropping the ball in hitting the line or when tackled.

The teams were as follows:

Lindsay C. I.—Flying wing, Thorburn; halves, Coombs, Williamson, G. Weeks; quarter, Tolmie; Scrimmag, Dougan, Bigelow, Burgess; inside wings, Carew, Flavelle; middle wings, Stewart, Weeks; outside wings, Edwards, Sutcliffe.

Peterborough C. I.—Flying wing, Eastwood; halves, Rogers, (Capt.), Long, Smith; quarter, Stratton; scrimmage, Cann, Huycke, Carruthers; inside wings, Cannift, Stevenson; middle wings, Knox, Jobbitt; outside wings, Horsfield, Macdonald.

Referee—Dr. McPherson.

Umpire—W. Gibson.

Kicking with the wind, in the first quarter, Peterborough forced the play and soon were in possession on Lindsay's twenty-yard line. On the third down Long kicked to the dead line, but Lindsay were off-side on the kick and the ball was brought back and given to Peterborough on Lindsay's ten-yard line. A buck failed to gain and Long kicked over the dead line for the first point of the game. Play was in mid-field for the balance of the quarter.

With the wind in their favour, Lindsay opened out a kicking game in the second quarter, but Long and Rogers handled Williamson's kicks well and the "light Petes showed unexpected ability to buck Lindsay's line. A wing buck was used very effectively, mixed with end runs, and Peterborough kept the visitors from being dangerous. Finally, when Williamson fumbled one of Long's kicks, Macdonald nailed the loose ball three yards out from Lindsay's line. A score seemed certain, but Lindsay held Peterborough for three downs and saved the situation, the score remaining 1 to 0 at half time.

The third quarter was just as evenly fought. Peterborough kicked frequently with the wind behind them, but could not score, althougr they had the ball in Lindsay territory the greater part of the time.

At the beginning of the fourth quarter Long booted a high one over the Lindsay line for a rouge. Peterborough kept forcing the play and Smith, taking an onside kick from Long, got away for a nice run, being nailed ten yards out. Long kicked over the line and Macdonald and Horsfield dragged Williamson down for a rouge before he could get outside, putting the Petes ahead, 3 to 0. Lindsay rallied then and forced the play. A Peterborough offside gave them an opening and from the thirty-yard line Williamson tried to drop a goal from the field, his kick going wide. A few minutes later he kicked into touch-in-goal for Lindsay's first and only point. Williamson continued to kick and finally came the sensational finish as described above.

It was the best game of the season, locally, and incidentally the first victory for a Peterborough team this year.

IS A MARVEL

Connie Mack, of the Athletics, is a marvel in more ways than one. He can handle more ball players with less friction than any manager in the business. It is strange, but true, one never hears of a "hold-out' on the Mack team, yet it is generally understood that the players in the Philadelphia American League Baseball Club are the poorest paid in the world. All the talk you hear about that $100,000 infield is meant in value only. The opinion is general that among that all-star aggregation not a single man draws down $5,000 a year. The great Collins, the marvellous Baker, the wonderful McInnis, the superb Barry—each and every one of them, it is said, receives only a nominal salary and are pleased and content in their own way. The outfield, too, it is said, gets only regular workingmen's wages, and the pitchers and the catchers draw down what the good Mr. Mack thinks they are worth. And Connie owns half of the stock in the club, besides managing it. More than that he has scouts all over the country, and none are under pay. There must be something in his personality.

TWO NEW CITIES FOR CANADIAN LEAGUE CIRCUIT

Berlin and Guelph Are to Be Replaced by Cities Who Will Patronize Baseball Better--Directors Will Meet in Toronto Next Week.

The next meeting of the Canadian League directors will be held in Toronto the first week in November.

The reason of the delay up to this time has been attributed to the fact that President Fitzgerald has been devoting much time securing a suitable location for the placing of one or two franchises. Every precaution is being taken to provide two new cities for the two weak franchises of the circuit and when completed it is thought will comprise the best eight cities, forming a much stronger league.

It can be taken from this that it is the President's intention to move the clubs in Berlin and Guelph to other points. Just how this will affect the cities mentioned remains to be seen, and when the directors hold their next meeting the whole matter will be disposed of.

The new cities must look a great deal better as baseball propositions, as both Berlin and Guelph enjoyed their best years in the Canadian League in the season just closed and cautious steps on the part of the League will be required to be taken in their new venture as it might be a case of jumping from the frying pan into the fire.

Baseball at its best was more or less an experiment in the two cities from which it has been proposed to remove the clubs for 1914. Gradually the fans are being educated in Berlin and Guelph and undoubtedly will prove to be stronger each year.

On th other hand it is costing the better clubs money to carry these weaker cities, when they could be making more out of having two stronger baseball cities introduced next year.

In short the Canadian League faces a problem of just what is the best to do under the circumstances.

The coming year, it is understood, will see a baseball statistican in charge of the averages to be compiled and published in many Canadian and American dailies every two weeks. This will eliminate the recurrence of having the figurs published only at the end of the season as has been the case in the past.

HUDDERSFIELD FURNISHED THE BIG SURPRISE OF THE DAY

Defeated Birmingham by the Overwhelming Score of 7 to 0 ---Another Feature Was Kilmarnock's 5 to 2 Victory Over Hamilton in the Scottish League--The League Tables.

The surprise of the day in British soccer circles was the defeat of Birmingham at Hudersfield by the overwhelming score of 7 to 0. Though I expected Hudersfield to win, I did not think they would be able to get more than one or two goals. It looks more like a Rugby score than soccer. Leeds City came back strong and beat Barnsley on their own ground. The "Peacocks" are gradually creeping up the table. Seven goals were scored in the Stockport-Leicester game at Leicester five going to the visitors and two to the home team. Bury still held on to their lead of the second division by beating Bristol City at Bury.

Blackburn Still Undefeated.

Blackburn Rovers held the "Spurs" to a 3—3 tie at Tottenham, and maintained their unbeaten record. The first five places in the league standing remained unchanged after to-day's battles. Preston North End broke their duck egg at the expense of Burnley. Every team in the first and second division has now won at least one game.

Swindon's Superb Record.

Swindon are still marching on with an unblemished record. By their victory over Norwich City to-day they hold 18 points out of a possible 18. They have now won nine consecutive games. Reading fell to third place in the table through being defeated by Plymouth, and Crystal Palace jumped into their place by their victory over West Ham on the United's grounds.

Kilmarnock Trounce Hamilton.

Kilmarnock handed a severe defeat to Hamilton, beating them by a score of 5 to 2. Hearts could only manage to get one point out of the Third Lanark boys and are now only one point ahead of Celtic. Rangers fell before Celtic and were relegated to third place. The following are the results with league standings, including to-day's games:

Pasteurization of milk has suffered for many years unjust criticism by its apponents only for selfish reasons, but after careful investigation one is compelled to admit that the heating of milk by Scientific Methods gives to the Public a greater degree of safety. In fact Pasteurization is the only positive guarantee against disease through milk.

McCaffery Has Option On The Kofts

Toronto President to Take Two-Third Interest in Hamilton Ball Club

TORONTO, Oct. 27.—James J. McCafery, president of the Toronto Baseball club of the International league, has secured an option on the interest in the Hamilton Baseball club of the Canadian league, held by John Burns and George Lee, of Toronto. The Toronto magnate has been negotiating for an interest in the Hamilton franchise for some time, and took the option on the shares held by Burns and Lee on Wednesday on condition that Mr. M. M. Robinson, the Hamilton man, who owns the other third interest in the club, would agree to remain in the club and would pool his interest with that which will be purchased by McCaffery. The latter thinks the Hamilton club is one of the best minor league propositions in America, and has had his eye on it ever since the first signs of trouble among the present owners. McCaffery is very friendly to Robinson, and a year ago, when the latter was prepared to sell his interest in the club, was, along with President Fitzgerald, of the Canadian league, most active in convincing the Hamilton chap that he should hold his interest.

The above dispatch is substantially correct, adds the Hamilton Spectator. McCaffery and Robinson have been in close touch with each other for some time on the matter of the deal for the Hamilton club. Robinson expressed a willingness to retain his interest in the club, with McCaffery holding the other two-thirds' interest, having every confidence in the proposition under new management. The deal will mean the elimination of Knotty Lee from Hamilton baseball matters and the placing of the club on a good, sound basis, especially as it will be backed up by the Toronto club, a big point to be considered. President McCaffery is expected in Hamilton today, when matters will be closed up and a start made on the programme for next year. Hamilton fans, who have been eager for a fresh deal in local baseball affairs, will be pleased with the above announcement.

Bramble Is Drafted By Fort Wayne

BERLIN, Oct. 27. — President Kalbfleisch of the Berlin Canadian League team received notice from Secretary Farrell of the National Baseball Association, that Fred Bramble, the pitcher, has been drafted by Fort Wayne, of the Central League. The notice of draft was accompanied by a check for $300. The directors are reluctant in accepting $300 for the big pitcher and will claim $500 for him. President Fitzgerald of the Canadian League, has been communicated with in the matter. It is understood that Fort Wayne has drafted Bramble for Manager Shaughnessy of the Ottawa Senators.

PRESERVE THE BIRDS

State of Oregon Interests School Lads —They Build Pretty Houses

Exhibits of bird houses, built by boys of the schools in Portland, Ore., have attracted much attention and aroused no little rivalry among the boys themselves as to design and execution. They constructed charming little bungalows of rustic strips of bark; quaint reproductions of old-world thatched farm cottages; log cabins, and tiny homes wrought of silvery birch-bark and bits of moss on sloping roofs. Through the co-operation of the Oregon Audubon Society and the State superintendent of Public Schools a widespread movement for systematic bird study and bird protection was inaugurated over a year ago in the Portland schools. Each schoolboy in the intermediate grades constructed at least one bird house during the year. These were placed in public parks, residence grounds, and along the highways. This was the beginning of a State-wide plan to bring the children of the schools into closer relationship with their bird neighbors. William L. Finley, State game warden of Oregon, has done much to have the economic value of birds taught to school children. The crow and the kingfisher both have unnecessarily bad reputations, it is pointed out. To determine the economic status of the crow the department of agriculture examined nearly a thousand of them taken in every month of the year all over the country, and it was found that most of the corn eaten by these birds was waste corn, and the part destroyed while growing was only 2 per cent. of the total food. On the other hand the amount of harmful insects and mice eaten rendered the final verdict in favor of the crow. It was also determined that the kingfisher does not eat trout, but only fish that are of no value to man.

One Leg Cricketers

At the Cripples' Home at Alton, Hants, there is an inmates' cricket team. Many of the players have only one leg, but despite this disadvantage the team has won two matches this season. There is also a football team at the home, and although the team can only muster seventeen legs, yet of the seven matches played last season they won four and lost only one match, the other two being drawn.

THE EDICT OF MILAN GAVE LIBERTY TO CHRISTIANS

Rev. Father Galvin's Sermon a Review of the First Bright Days of Christianity

A MIRACULOUS MESSAGE

In a sermon at the Church of the Sacred Heart on Sunday night, Rev. Father Galvin, dealing with the edict of Milan, told of the official recognition of Christianity as a religion in the Roman Empire. He reviewed the political, social and religious conditions of the age previous to and contemporanious with the reign of Constantine, and told of the miraculous message which impelled him to grant freedom of worship to the Christians.

As an example of the religious corruption of the age, Caligula, in the first century of the Christian era, ordered the decapitation of all the statues of the gods and placing his own likeness upon them, ordered the people to adore them. During a long period, forty-three personages had themselves deified in this manner, and of the number, thirteen were females, favourites of the emperors or of their friends.

The Christians suffered ten general persecutions, the last being under the direction of Diocletian, who held the imperium from 285 to 305. The last was the severest and most terrible of the series. In the year 312, the Emperor Constantine was on his way to meet Maxentius, one of his rivals, when a message was flashed to him in the heavens. It was in the form of a cross, with the inscription, "in this conquer." The historical incident also relates that God appeared to Constantine and promised him victory if he would accept the cross as his standard. The Emperor adopted it for his army and in the engagements that followed, Maxentius was defeated.

Thus was fulfilled the text upon which Rev. Father Galvin based his subject. "These things I have spoken unto you, that in Me you might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."

In the following year, Constantine held a conference with Licinius, who had charge of the eastern section of the Empire, and the famous edict of Milan was issued. General liberty was offered Christians to worship God according to their religion. Christianity was placed on an equality with the Paganism of Rome. This, Rev. Father Galvin stated, was all the Church demanded, and it was all she required to carry out the work of Christ.

It was remarkable that a pagan should have signed the edict. Constantine and his father were pagan. His mother, St. Helena, was, however, a Christian. The Emperor saw the threatening disintegration of the Empire and felt that if it could possibly be saved, Christianity alone could accomplish that end. The Catholic Church, the speaker said, is regarded as the only force capable of combating race suicide, divorce and Socialism. In the United States, divorce is eating into the vitals of the nation, and the Catholic Church alone refuses to countenance it, just as reeognizing the rights of the individual to the fruits of his labour and to property she stands against the swelling tide of Socialism.

In conclusion, Rev. Father Galvin urged the members of the congregation to participate in the jubilee of Constantine, which is being celebrated this year and terminates on December 8th.

THE HUMAN SLAUGHTER HOUSE

Official Germany has been shocked and annoyed, while thinking Germany has been stirred up by a little book, "The Human Slaughter-House," recently written. The author, Wilhelm Lamasus, a schoolmaster, gives what he calls a few "scenes from the war which is sure to come." It is sure to come unless the mad program of the militarists of Europe is stopped by a resolute public opinion. There is no doubt that if the people realised what war means nowadays they would refuse to be stampeded into war by a subsidised, scare-mongering press, or to be led into it by bungling diplomats. Poets have woven around the wars of earlier times a certain glamor, and however brutal and disgusting the business of killing has always been, the personal encounters of former wars lent an air of dash and heroism.

But where is the glory and glamor in a modern war? Regiments are fed to the artillery of the enemy as sheaves of grain are fed into the threshing machine. Set the machine-gun going and it shoots out 240 bullets a minute, sweeping the horison for many miles wherever directed. This is the age of specialised machinery. Instead of laboriously making pins or buttons one at a time, by hand, thousands are being turned out by machinery. So, instead of the hand-to-hand encounter of early times, or the short range fighting of the past generation, modern war has become wholesale butchery by machinery. Lyddite, cordite, powerful chemicals and deadly machine guns have turned the "field of honor" and those much-lauded scenes of romance and glory into a human slaughter house.

CLOTHES DRYING RACK

When ironing our weekly wash it is very essential to have some good rack on which to place the articles that they may become thoroughly dried and aired before putting away. Then too on stormy days in winter when we have to bring the clothes into the house to finish drying, a good rack is a great convenience.

A description of a rack that recently came to our notice and appealed to us as being a good idea, is one six feet long and three feet wide, and attached to the kitchen or laundry ceiling. This rack is lowered and raised by means of pulleys. When the garments are to be hung on the rack it is lowered to a convenient height and then raised when filled. This carries the clothes to the top of the room where they are not only out of the way, but where the air is warmer and drier and where they dry more thoroughly and more rapidly.

Even when in use this rack is not an encumbrance, and at other times is scarcely noticeable.

"THE QUAKER GIRL"

One Year in New York, Two Years in London

With all the pomp and magnificence which characterized its run of one entire year at the Park Theatre, New York, and two years at the Adelphi Theatre, London, John P. Slocum, offers the English musical success, "The Quaker Girl" at the Grand Opera House next Saturday, November 1st, for two performances.

It is the No. 1 and only organization presenting the piece and practically no changes of importance have been made in the cast. Victor Morley will again be seen as the featured comedian in the part of "Tony Chute." This announcement, in itself, is enough to assure theatre patrons of a high-class and delightful performance. Other prominent members are Harry Short, Dixie Gerard, Bernice McCabe, William Blaisdell, Mlle. Corday, Phil. J. Moore, Connie Mack, Murray Stephen and Carol Parson.

"The Quaker Girl" is the collaborated effort of James Tanner, Adrian Ross and Percy Greenbank, with music by Lionel Monckton, a quartette of authors and composers who have written a large share of recent musical comedy successes. Two love stories are ingulved in the plot with an American naval attache of the embassy in Paris and the Quaker Girl as the parties of the first part, and with an exiled Bonapartist princess and a King's messenger as the other couple. The matrimonial and pre-matrimonial obstacles that beset the two couples provide a sufficient diversity of action, and the scenes are an English country village where the couples are first seen and then a dressmaking establishment in Paris and the Pre Catalan there, to which localities the entire company finds excuse for going. The numerous songs and dances that are introduced come naturally in continuing the story and there is no attempt at effect so much in vogue in musical comedy in this country.

The presenting company is one of the largest ever seen here, and includes a stunning chorus and ballet. Taken as a whole, "The Quaker Girl" promises to be the real musical gem of the season's bookings.

QUIRKS ON POULTRY MANAGEMENT

I usually have about 200 laying hens in my charge, and have them divided into pens, each pen accommodating about 13 hens. These pens are 12 feet square and six feet 10 inches high. The roost board is 12 by three and a half feet.

Three feet at one end is taken off for the use of clucking hens. These clucking houses are not meant for setting hens, but are used to put the hens in when they are not required for setting. Two sticks or scantlings nine feet long running lengthwise of the roost board and one foot up from it serve as perches. A place made underneath this roost board at the opposite side from the clucking apartment, accommodates the nests, which resemble a drawer, and are made 15 inches wide and 14 inches high, the length being divided into four nests. The door on the front comes down on hinges, and it is fastened back into place again with a hook and eye. The hens enter the nest from the back, which is open.

A water basin is placed in the partition 12 inches from the floor. One basin supplies two pens. The front of the pens have a door and two windows, with an outside run 96 feet long and 12 feet wide.

All floors are cement. When winter sets in, we scatter a couple of wheelbarrows of sand over the floors, and about a foot of straw on top of the sand.

FEEDING

In summer time I feed my hens grain in the morning, raw vegetables at noon and a mash consisting of bran, oat chop, corn meal and shorts, mixed with cold, scured separator milk. I also add a quantity of ground bone to this mixture. I always make sure to have these mashes thick and well mixed together.

I make a practice of having the male birds separated from hens during winter. I place them in the pens again six weeks before I start to collect eggs for hatching. In most cases when male birds are placed in a pen they will fight. To prevent this I cut down their spurs. When I am putting the male birds back with the hens, I always put young male birds with old hens and old male birds with young pullets, having 13 hens to a male bird.

—Farm and Dairy.

POULTRY KEEPING FOR EGG PRODUCTION

My flock of hens, averaging between 250 and 300 birds, are principally White Leghorns, although I have a number of Spanish Anconas, White Minorcas, and a few not so well bred. For several years I have got eggs from my flock every day. One year for a number of weeks I gathered between 98 and 98 dozen a week.

After gathering the eggs, I take considerable care in making them look as attractive as possible. I put them in a pan and wash them, using baking soda to remove any stains that will not come off with water. Then I have another pan of water ready, and after the second washing the eggs are placed on a platter on which a cloth has been laid, and they are left there to dry. I wrap each egg in tissue paper, put them in sections, and send to Montreal. In this way there is no middleman's profit.

I feed my poultry wheat, turnips, cabbage, mangels, pumpkins, decayed apples, apple skins, potato skins, meat—in fact, all the refuse I have from the house. They also get all the milk and clean water they can drink. I find that the more milk my hens get the more eggs they lay. The drinking vessels are cleaned every day.

I have tried feeding the hens buckwheat with very little milling wheat, but did not get as many eggs. I would not advise anyone desirous of getting eggs to feed either buckwheat or oats. I feed my flock a pail and a half of wheat a day, morning and evening.

In the winter and spring the hens get all the coal ashes, and in the fall a load of gravel is placed within easy access. Whenever I have trouble with the hens eating eggs. I feed them egg shells that I keep in a bag for the purpose, and that seems to stop the habit. They have access to a box of them all the time.

For several years I have sent to the States for eggs for hatching. In this way I have got some fine chickens, although many of the eggs are infertile. I consider that buying American eggs is profitable, however, as the hens seem to be better bred and are grand layers.

I usually use an incubator to raise chickens. I do not think much of breeding pens, and believe the eggs do not hatch as well as if the hens are allowed to ramble.

When I wish to dispose of fowl, I usually sell them to butchers, but it is not very profitable. If I were raising fowl to sell, I would ship them myself and would have the middleman's profit. Taking everything into consideration, however, I have found poultry keeping a profitable business.

EGGED OFF.

A certain Broadway star, at a luncheon in New York, said of a bad actor:

"He's had hints enough to quit the stage, dear knows. He's had more hints than Phatt.

"Phatt, after a brief experience on the road as Hamlet, returned to his old job on Canal street.

"How did you come to leave the stage?" I asked him one night.

"I had hints that I wasn't suited to it,' he replied.

Thinking he meant the critics, I said:

"Aha, the little birds told you, eh?"

"Well," said he, "they'd have become birds, I suppose, if they'd been allowed to hatch."

CANADIAN CATTLE WIN PRIZES

Mr. R. R. Ness, of Howick, Que., whose well-known herd of Ayrshire cattle has carried off a majority of the prizes this year, not only at the Western Canadian Fairs, but at Toronto and Ottawa as well, won some noted additional honors last week at the Brockton, Mass. exhibition. This exhibition is probably the chief exhibition of the New England States.

There was strong competition in the Ayrshire classes. Among the competitors were the herds of Mr. Chisholm of Port Chester, N. Y., comprising some 30 animals, the Converse herd of Woodville, N. Y., the Salidina herd, of New Hampshire, and several others. In all there were five full herds and a number of smaller ones. Most of these herds had been sweeping all before them at previous exhibitions and met at the Brockton exhibition for the first time. The interest taken in the competition may be judged from the fact that one exhibitor showed five females, each one of which had cost him over $1,000. One animal that was shown had been sold for $1,800.

In face of this strong competition Mr. Ness won every first on bulls except that for the two-year-olds in which class his entry was second. His animals also won the championship and grand championship. In a class of 17 aged cows in milk he won first, second and third. In the four-year-old cow class he stood first and second. The third prize animal in this class was one that Mr. Ness had imported and sold to the States. The fourth prize animal had cost its owner $1,000. Mr. Ness' stock also won first in the three-year-old class, second and fourth on two-year-olds, first on yearlings and second and fourth on heifer calves. In the class for the best cow and two of her progeny in the Advanced Registry, Mr. Ness won first and also first on the aged herd and second on the junior herd. Mr. Ness' herd comprised 22 animals.

The Women's Coats Which Have Just Come In

One is at once struck by the smart effect of the fashionable trimmings ofCivet Cat.

And while of course, these trimmings at the collar and cuffs are not of real Civet Fur, which Barrie's say comes from China, yet they are wonderfully good imitation in a woollen fabric, and lack very little of the soft smoothness of the real pelt, especially where the surface has been sheared.

The body of the Coats are made of a number of different, seasonable materials, Chinchillas and Diagonals showing a slight preference.

One in particular is of a thick, cosy, white and black Diagonal, having a collar which protects the throat by a fairly close cut, and is covered with Civet, in mottled shadings of Black, White and Grey.

The trimming consists of black velvet piping, forming at the back a laced effect which is very pretty.

Seven eighths is the length of the coat, and it has a lining of grey satin, the large buttons being self covered and edged with velvet. The cuffs are like the collar and are also lined with grey satin. This is $25.00.

In long haired Black Zibeline there is a luxurious looking Coat in three quarter length, lined with green satin and boasting a collar and cuffs of black velvet. The cuffs look very smart with a narrow touch of the same green satin that forms the lining, very few models being able to claim a richer appearance than this one. It is priced $38.00.

And there are a host of others, some costing little, some costing much; yet whatever one cares to pay, there is behind the price, the fabric, the modish design and the man tailoring which proves a satisfactory exchange for one's money. These Coats are on the Second Floor.

Miss Sullivan Made Fine Impression

Musical Abilities Recognized by Toronto Critic

TORONTO, Oct. 27.—On Friday afternoon last a graduation piano recital was given by Miss Aileen Sullivan, daughter of Mr. J. C. Sullivan, in the concert hall of the Toronto College of Music. Miss Sullivan is a pupil of Dr. F. H. Torrington, the musical director of the college, who is well and favourably known in Peterborough. The most unfavourable weather had an effect upon the attendance, but those who were present were delighted with the programme given and the excellent work done by the young lady. Upon the platform were a number of handsome floral tributes received by Miss Sullivan from her friends. She shows in her playing decided musical ability and a keen sense of interpretation. Miss Sullivan possesses the ability to play with true artistic taste and with the spirit of a musician, and Peterborough is to be congratulated upon having so clever a musician in their midst. We predict a brilliant future for her. Miss Evelyn Hall, a vocal pupil of Dr. Torrington, assisted on the programme, giving two numbers, "Somewhere a Voice is Calling" (Tate), and "Regneva nel silenzio" (Lucia) Donizetti. Both these number were greatly appreciated by those resent. At the conclusion of the recital Miss Sullivan was the recipient of hearty congratulations upon her success, in which her friends most heartily join.

WESTERN CURLERS TO COME EAST

Examiner Special:

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 27.—If the plans at present under consideration mature, various Ontario curling centres will have an opportunity to see crack Winnipeg rinks in action shortly. President Mac Rochon is trying to make arrangements to take strong rinks to Ontario during the coming season.

WHITNEY HAS NOTHING TO SAY

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Oct. 27.—"I have nothing to say," was the answer given by Sir James Whitney this morning, when questioned concerning the Separate School situation here. Hon. I. B. Lucas was no less laconic in his discussion of the matter. The Ottawa Free Press publishes this afternoon a report to the effect that Henri Bourassa and Armand Lavergne, the Nationalist leaders of Quebec, have offered to run as candidates in the Ontario constituencies for the Ontario Legislature to fight for the interests of French Canadians and bilingualism in Ontario.

Lord and Lady Edward Seymour—Lord Edward Seymour and Lady Seymour, formerly Miss Elfrida Adelaide de Trafford, of the manor of Croston, Lancashire, landed on October 26th, at Quebec, on the Canadian Northern liner Royal Edward, and proceeded to the old Wilson farm at Erindale which Lord Seymour purchased a year ago, and which is being converted into a beautiful estate. Erindale society is puzzled just how to meet the bride, but they plan to give her a hearty welcome to her Canadian home. They will likely tour Canada from Halifax to Victoria.

Immigration Statistics

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Oct. 27.—Figures issued to-day by the Superintendent of Immigration stated that the total immigration to Canada during the first six months of April to September of the current fiscal year was 307,267, of new arrivals 121,204 were British, 72,899 American, and 113,183 from other countries. During the same period last year the total number was 273,649.

Changes Made Since The Death Of H. Miller

Gloves Supplied by Light and Power Department Were Not Fit to Work With

HOW DEATH OCCURRED

The Winnipeg Free Press gives the following report of the inquest into the death of the late Herbert Miller:

A strong recommendation for five-fingered rubber gloves in place of the two-fingered ones generally in use by the linemen employed by the Winnipeg civic light and power department was included in the finding of the jury under Foreman R. S. Bardal, in the Herbert Miller inquest, at the police court last night. A book of rules governing the work of linemen was also recommended.

That the wearig of five-fingered rubber gloves might have saved Miller's life was the evidence of Jack Macdonald who was working on the same pole as Miller. Macdonald said that the gloves supplied by the light and power department were not fit to work with. They had only two fingers. The two-fingered gloves did not allow one to grip the handle of the pincers with the result that the men could not use them. The two-fingered gloves had also a seam running between the fingers which hurt the hand. In his evidence it was also brought to light that in other cities linemen working on high voltage wires always had another lineman beside them to watch their work and see that they did not make any mistakes. Immediately following the accident Macdonald was given a pair of rubber gloves.

Had Not Been Warned

Matthew Jenkins, foreman of the gang in which Miller worked, said that he had not warned either Miller or Macdonald to wear rubber gloves. When questioned he admitted that if Miller had refused to do the work on the plea that it could not be done with a two-fingered glove he would have dismissed him.

Story of Accident

The story of the accident as given in the evidence was that Herbert Miller and Jack Macdonald had gone up a pole near the corner of Roslyn Road and Osborne Street to cut in short circuits on two wires carrying 2,200 volts. Both of them were wearing leather gloves but Miller in some way touched both ends of the wire which he had cut in order to put in the short circuit and the current passed through his body. The first that Macdonald knew of the accident was when he saw Miller hanging by his belt. He fastened a rope about his shoulders and lowered him to the ground. Dr. R. I. Mattice, who was passing at the time, rendered first aid, assisted by Constable Badgely, but the doctor said that Miller was dead before he reached the ground.

Corporation Counsel Hunt appeared for the civil light and power department, and G. F. O'Grady for the relatives of the deceased.

Report On The Labour Situation

Building Trades Were Active in Peterboro' During the Past Month

The following report on labour conditions as they exist in Peterborough was taken from the October issue of the Labour Gazette:

Last month was a busy month in labour circles, both for skilled and unskilled workers. The building trades continued very busy and civic work kept a large number of men steadily employed. The construction of the factory of the Henry Hope & Son is being pushed forward as fast as possible. The work was delayed for several weeks waiting for steel, but it will be completed this fall. The De Laval Dairy Supply Company have about completed their building operations, and the machinery is being intsalled in the new buildings. They have also completed building a huge chimney 115 feet high. The Vermont Marble Company buildings are nearly complete, and the machinery is being installed. They will commence operations about the first of next month. The Bonner Worth Company are installing the machinery in the new addition just completed. The Peterborough planing mill has been sold to Harry Baker, contractor. They have had a very busy season, and the outlook gives abundant promise for a good long fall season's work. The Company who have the contract for paving the principal streets in this City have about seventy-five men employed on the work. The Radial Railway are replacing the old rails with new and heavy rails that weigh eighty lbs. These are being put down while the road is being torn up for the pavement. At a meeting of the Milk Vendors' Association, it was decided that all milk sold on credit will in future be charged one cent per quart in advance of the prevailing price.

Farmers were very busy, as is usual at this season of the year. From enquiries among the farmers of this district as to the potato crop, the report is generally good. The potatoes are smaller than last year but they are in better condition. Apples will be a small crop and high prices are ruling. There is also a great scarcity of turkeys. This is said to be owing to the cold wet spring. Lumbering operations have already begun. The lumber companies are sending men to the North country to begin the season's work. All the factories are working full time with full complement of hands.

A TRULY INTERESTING EPISTLE

To the Editor of The Examiner:
Peterborough.

Sir,—I have just read an editorial from the Globe calling attention to a letter from J. H. Burnham, M.P., for West Peterborough; and that the electors of the City of Peterborough, and the other portions of the West Riding may be fortunate enough to read this letter. I take the liberty through the medium of The Examiner, of drawing their attention to this truly interesting epistle. It should be a pleasure and profit to read anything from the pen of a gentleman of such marked eurdition, and it would be well for readers to clip this letter from the Globe covering as it does such important statements anent the Naval Defence of Canada. We find the startling information that owing to the action of the Opposition Canada is no longer a portion of the "British Empire," that the Borden policy of contribution is a brave and patriotic policy, while that of the Opposition for a Canadian navy built, owned, controlled, and manned, by Canada, is unpatriotic and cowardly and leading to National degeneracy. It is not necessary to quote further, the letter will speak for itself, it is truly a remarkable if not a valuable addition, to all that has been said and written on a very important subject.

Yours, etc.,
J. F. LILLICRAP,
44 Kenneth Ave.
Toronto, 25th Oct., 1913.

Note.—The Examiner will print on this page to-morrow the letter referred to by our correspondent and the Globe's comments thereon. Mr. Lillicrap's letter furnishes the apparently necessary excuse.

MRS. EATON TESTIFIES

Special to The Examiner:

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Oct. 27.—In the witness box at the trial of herself for the murder of her husband, Mrs. Eaton to-day steadfastly claimed that she was being poisoned by Admiral Eaton when death overtook him. She showed an abrasion on her lip which she said was caused by Eaton trying to inject poison while she was asleep.

Mrs. Eaton strengthened her defence by saying that she knew the Admiral's income stopped with his death and she married him to save his life when he was drinking himself to death.

A HARD THING TO DO

By RUTH CAMERON

Once upon a time an artist and a short story writer were discussing a short story which had appeared in one of the last month's magazines.

Said the short story writer, "What bully illustrations! I wish I could get the man who illustrates my work to do something like that. And the story is so punk that it's scarcely worth printing. That's just some people's luck.

Said the artist, "Well I'm glad you like those illustrations. I call them rotten. No technique and no imagination. But I like the story. Thought it was one of the best I had read in a dog's age."

Queer, isn't it, how much easier it is to forgive merit and success in any line but our own?

I know a pretty girl who is always talking about how clever and how talented this or that feminine friend is. Indeed she is so generously ready to concede all such virtues to her friends that she has the reputation of having a singularly sweet disposition. But try to make her admit that any given girl is pretty and you will certainly find yourself up against it. Not that she will be disagreeable about it. No indeed! She is far too canny for that. She will probably take particular care to profess her liking for the beauty candidate, but she wil most regretfully point out to you some perfectly good reason why the latter just misses being pretty.

On the other hand, I know a clever newspaper woman, with no pretence to prettiness, who is always enthusing about some pretty girl she has met. But if you can make her admit that one of her sisters in the profession is a clever newspaper woman I will give you a five dollar gold piece.

And so it runs. The swimmer willingly admires the good tennis player, but he is likely to depreciate the performance of the best of swimmers. The musician is most generous in his admiration of the artist or writer, but a brother musician, especially in his own particular line, must be wonderful indeed to win anything but grudging admiration from him. The woman who has a genius for stylish gowning will concede any virtue or ability under the sun to her sisters, but she must continue to wonder why they dress with so little taste.

You remind me that there are some people big enough to be above such pettiness. Yet I know that's true, and I'm glad to be reminded of it. Sometimes when one sees too many of the other kind of people one forgets.

There are such fine people, and I sincerely hope you and I belong to that class. And yet I suspect that even we occasionally slip over into the other type.

Ruth Cameron.

Premier Murray Is Chairman

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Oct. 27.—Hon. Geo. H. Murray, who has been Liberal Premier of Nova Scotia since 1896, was named Chairman of the third interprovincial conference which opened this morning at 11.30 in the railway committee room of the Senate. The delegates this morning unanimously agreed that on this occasion the honour should go to one of the provinces down by the sea. Mr. Murray made a short speech, thanking the delegates. Bremier Borden extended a hearty welcome to the delegates, and assured them that the recommendations furnished by them would be carefully considered. No important announcement was made at the morning sitting, which was largely devoted to organization and preliminary survey of topics to be discussed.

OBITUARY

MRS. LONERGAN.

The death occurred Saturday afternoon at the House of Providence, at the age of 88 years, of Mrs. Lonergan. She had been a resident of the House of Providence for some years.

He body has been taken to her daughter's, Mrs. Maurice O'Brien, Douro, from whose residence the funeral took place at 9 o'clock this morning.

MR. JOHN FOLEY.

John Foley, 73 years of age, passed away at the House of Providence on Saturday evening. He was born in Ireland, but came to this City two years ago from Parry Sound. The funeral was held this morning to St. Peter's Church and Cemetery.

MRS. P. DELAIRE.

The death occurred this afternoon, shortly after one o'clock, of Delima Archambeault, wife of Mr. P. Delaire, at her home, 174 Park street, after a lingering illness of two years.

The late Mrs. Delaire was 48 years of age, and was born in Lower Canada. Most of her life was spent in this City, where she was widely known. She leaves many friends who will be very sorry to learn of her death. She was a faithful member of St. Peter's Church.

She is survived by five daughters, Josephine, Agnes, Corine, Lydia and Geraldine, as well as one son, Alfons, of Rochester.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday morning to St. Peter's Church and Cemetery.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE HERBERT MILLER

The funeral of the late Herbert Miller, son of Mr. F. W. Miller, Water Street, was held this afternoon from the latter's residence. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. J. R. Webb of the Murray Stret Baptist Church, and was under the auspices of the local branch of the Woodmen of the World. The following Woodmen were pall bearers: Messrs. A. Heard, H. Way, E. Williamson, R. Primeau, E. L. Barr and H. Cooper.

Avery large number of the friends of the deceased were present at the service and a large cortege followed the body to the grave. If any further testimony could be given of the high regard in which the late Herbert Miller was held, it was evidenced at the funeral service to-day.

A SUCCESSFUL DANCE

The dance given the Foresters' Hall on Friday evening last, under the auspices of Eddie Turner's Orchestra, proved quite a success. Splendid music was provided by a nine-piece orchestra and was all that could be desired. Between sixty and seventy people were in attendance, and everybody claimed it to be one of the best dances of the season. T. H. Hooper supplied refreshments in his usual good style, Mr. A. Moore and Mr. F. Wainwright acted effectively as floor managers. The dance terminated about 2 a.m.

Maritime Provinces Want Original Forty Members

PREMIERS IN CONFERENCE

OTTAWA, Oct. 28. — Representation from the Maritime Provinces in the Federal House was discussed by the Provincial Premiers in conference here yesterday, behind closed doors. No conclusion was reached in regard to the arguments put forth by the delegates from Nova Scotia New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

Premier Flemming of New Brunswick moved, seconded by Premier Mathieson of Prince Edward Island, asking adoption of the following resolution:

"That in the opinion of this conference the representation granted to the Maritime Provinces at the time of the Confederation be restored and made irreducible."

Arguments were advanced setting forth the facts in the case; that the Maritime Provinces had forty members at Confederation, while now they only have thirty-five. It was claimed that a hardship was being worked in the provinces affected which was not intended, whatever the constitutional clause governing the case might state.

It is understood that the arguments failed to get the support expected, although sympathy was expressed by other representatives.

To-day the question of provincial subsidies will be discussed.

The delegates present were: Prince Edward Island, Premier Mathieson and Hon. Messrs. Arsenault and Stewart; Nova Scotia, Premier Murray and Attorney-General Daniels; New Brunswick, Premier Flemming and Attorney-General Grimmer; Ontario, Sir James Whitney, Hon. Messrs. Lucas and Foy; Quebec, Sir Lomer Gouin, Hon. Messrs. Taschereau, MacKenzie and Caron; Manitoba, Sir Rodmond Roblin and Hon. Mr. Howden; Saskatchewan, Premier Scott and Hon. Mr. Calder; Alberta, Premier Sifton; British Columbia, Sir Richard McBride. Premier Murray of Nova Scotia was chosen chairman.

A special executive committee sat last evening to figure out the provincial proportions regarding the increased subsidy which will be under consideration to-day.

Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden will entertain the provincial delegates to dinner this evening and their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess will dine the provincial leaders at Rideau Hall on Wednesday evening.

CANDIDATES NAMED.

A. H. Milner and J. R. Fallis Are Nominated In Peel.

BRAMPTON, Oct. 28.—There was a large attendance at the official nomination meeting yesterday for the coming bye-election in Peel County to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Sam Charters, M.P.P.

Both candidates, J. R. Fallis, Conservative, and A. H. Milner, Liberal, were given an hour each.

Mr. Fallis, in a ten minutes' speech, referred to his dealings in business with Peel County people, and promised that he would observe the same standards of conduct in his political life. He was in thorough accord with the policies of the Whitney Government, referring specially to the improvements which had been carried out in educational and agricultural affairs.

Mr. Milner criticized the Government's temperance policy and claimed that much of the increased revenue in late years was derived from measures inaugurated by the Ross Government. He said he stood for the total abolition of the bar as the only means of eradicating the evils of treating and other pernicious effects of the liquor traffic.

Hon. W. H. Hearst and J. C. Elliott also spoke.

Seven Guards Captured.

TRINIDAD, Col., Oct. 28.—Strikers captured seven guards yesterday at Chicosa Junction, eight miles north of Trinidad. It was also reported that they captured a Colorado & Southeastern engine.

For half an hour yesterday more than 125 strikers battled at a mile range with several steel carloads of mine guards who were traveling over the Colorado & Southern Railway tracks ostensibly on their way to the Hastings Mine. The strikers at the Ludlow camp had been led to believe that the guards were entraining to attack the tent colony and consequently set about to defend their temporary homes.

BRINGS IN POLITICS.

Premier McBride Talks Navy at Ottawa Canadian Club.

OTTAWA, Oct. 28.—Sir Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia, who was the guest of the Canadian Club at luncheon yesterday, created rather a furore when he launched into the naval question in his speech.

It is a cardinal rule of the club that nothing of a political or controversial nature shall be introduced in the speeches at the luncheons, but Sir Richard came out in no uncertain tone.

"I am not going to say anything controversial," said Sir Richard, in beginning his address, "but in a few modest words, not to give a message —that were a dangerous thing to attempt—but to tell of western feeling on a certain question which was closely associated with that section of the Empire. First, I wish to speak of the navy and what Canada should do towards her share of empire responsibility. If my voice from British Columbia be of value to this assembly, I would like to say with all the emphasis I may command how deeply we regret and deplore the inability of Canada to do her share towards Canadian, towards Imperial defence, in failing to vote the $35,000,000, as was proposed a few months ago for the assistance of a program of the British Admiralty.

"I can't believe it is impossible to discuss this matter on other than a controversial basis, one that will bring up political discord. The theme of national defence should occupy a plane higher than the political wardroom, the hustings, or even the national forum. If we have to introduce political differences into such a question we will drift and drift till we are so seriously involved that we cannot extricate ourselves without sacrificing our dignity and self-respect. We in British Columbia feel that we have come to the point when, in manly fashion, we should do our share in the defence, not of only British Columbia, Canada, but of the Empire as well."

Aside from the utterances of the British Columbia Premier, the feature of the luncheon was the kind words of welcome to his Royal Highness and expressions of good will to her Royal Highness, and the gracious reply.

BOMBAY FACES CRISIS.

Pearl Merchant Fails With Heavy Losses—Banks In Peril.

BOMBAY, Oct. 28.—There is an alarming crisis in Bombay. Failure followed failure after the recent bank suspensions, and the rush of depositors to withdraw their money has strained the resources even of sound Indian banks. The crisis then spread to a share market. A broker doing a big business who tried to bear the market in mill shares with the assistance of certain banks collapsed. His liabilities were nearly half a million pounds. Several other failures followed in quick succession. The Stock Exchange was paralyzed. Business was suspended.

While this crisis was in progress a fresh shock came yesterday in the form of the failure of an Arab pearl merchant doing a big trade, and known in the market as "The Lion." His liabilities are said to be over $300,000. Many other failures quickly followed. Several banks which were advancing money on pearls are deeply involved. Further bank failures are feared.

Twice Proven Cure for Nerves

Irritable, Hysterical, Sleepless, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Restores Health.

There is a message in this letter for thousands of women who are suffering from broken-down nervous systems. Sleepless night, much irritability over little things, spells of dizziness and nervous sick headaches are among the symptoms.

You may not realize the nature of your ailment until nervous prostration comes upon you. But, in whatever stage you find yourself, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is ready to help you.

Mrs. W. J. May, 88 Annette Street, Toronto, writes: "Some years ago I suffered from nervous trouble, and took Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which completely cured me. About six months ago I received a shock which again shattered my nervous system to such an extent that I was irritable and hysterical, and could not sleep nights. I began to use the Nerve Food again and was not disappointed. Improvement was apparent from the first box, and now I am entirely well."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers.

Farmers Will Send Strong Deputation to Ottawa

CO-OPERATIVE LEGISLATION

REGINA, Sask., Oct. 28.—At a meeting of the Canadian Council of Agriculture, at which representatives of the Saskatchewan and Manitoba Grain Growers' Associations and the United Farmers of Alberta were present, it was unanimously decided to take steps for a deputation representing the organized farmers of Canada to proceed to Ottawa before or near the opening of the next session of Parliament to lay before the Government representations embodied in a series of resolutions dealing with the tariff, co-operative legislation and a sample market.

A resolution dealing with the tariff follows:

"1. That we urge the Parliament of Canada to increase, at its first session, the British preference to at least 50 per cent. and to provide for a gradual increase from year to year until we have free trade with Great Britain in five years.

"2. That Parliament accept the offer of the United States of a free interchange of all agricultural and animal products between Canada and the United States.

"3. That all foodstuffs not provided for in the above offer of the United States be transferred to the free list.

"4. That agricultural implements, lumber, and cement be transferred to the free list.

"5. That pending the passage of legislation asked for herein, any duties now imposed under Canadian customs tariff which are the means of countervailing duties being imposed against any food products of the country by any foreign country be immediately removed.

"6. That any tariff or trade concession granted to any other country be immediately extended to Great Britain."

Other resolutions ask for legislation to permit co-operative societies of all kinds, whether for credit or trade, and for the inspection of all scales in grain elevators and warehouses, to be placed in the jurisdiction of the board of grain commissioners.

A resolution was also passed against the establishment of a sample market until such time as the grain growers are agreed that the same can be operated to their benefit.

Wanted In Montreal.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Gordon Salisbury, who was arrested Saturday at the request of Chicago officers on charges of larceny amounting to $600, was held in $8,000 bail yesterday when the court was informed that he was wanted in Montreal, Springfield and Hartford for evasion of bail bonds. The case was continued until Friday.

As Prof. Whiting and as Charles Derubach, the prisoner is alleged to have stolen money in Chicago within the past year.

TEUTONIC IN DANGER.

Big Liner Has a Narrow Escape From Hitting Iceberg.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The White Star liner Teutonic, which arrived in the Mersey yesterday from Montreal with nearly 400 second and third class passengers, had a somewhat exciting experience. When about 172 miles east of Belle Isle on Wednesday morning the Teutonic encountered a thick fog. During the evening an enormous iceberg was sighted right ahead, almost on top of the vessel. The captain promptly put the helm hard aport, and the engine full-speed astern, and then the liner swung slowly to starboard, just in the nick of time—and the iceberg passed silently along the portside within a few yards of the stern.

Declares Farmers Will "Go Bust."

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—That the farmer who attempts to carry out all requirements advocated by health officials will land in bankruptcy courts was the statement made here yesterday at the opening session of the convention of the International Milk Dealers' Association by Prof. H. A. Harding of the University of Illinois.

KILL DANDRUFF MAKE HAIR GROW

For dandruff, falling hair, or prematurely grey hair use this formula: Bay Rum 6 ounces; Lavona de Composee, 2 ounces, and Menthol Crystals, ½ drachm. If you desire, add 1 drachm of your favourite perfume. Mix the tonic yourself or have your druggist mix it. Apply night and morning with fingers. Lavona contains a powerful drug that stimulates the activity of the hair-growing follicles and is believed to give renewed action to the pigment-forming cells so as to actually restore natural colour to prematurely grey hair without the use of dye.

U. S. Will Endeavour to Formulate Policy Regarding Mexico

ELECTORS WERE SCARED

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 28.—No change has been made in the Government's policy toward the Mexican situation as a result of Sunday's abortive elections. With Gen. Huerta still at the head of Mexican affairs and likely to remain there for some time to come, this Government will decline to accord formal recognition to the Huerta Administration. It will continue, however, to do business with the de facto Federal authority in the City of Mexico, but will be careful to make it clear that this is done merely for practical business reasons and it not intended even as an implied recognition of the Mexican Government. It is realized here, however, that this condition of affairs cannot go on indefinitely. But as far as can be ascertained the Washington authorities have no specific solution to offer.

Announcement from the London Foreign Office yesterday that no action concerning Mexico will be taken by the British Government without consultation with the United States is regarded here as the most encouraging sign yet given of the prospect of a general agreement among foreign nations to recognize the predominating interests of the United States in Mexico. It was a relief also to some officials to learn that the Foreign Office is authority for the statement that Great Britain's recognition of the Huerta Government was merely provisional pending the outcome of Sunday's elections.

There have been indications that European nations were dissatisfied with the menace to the lives and property of their citizens or subjects by the disorders in the perturbed republic, and it is expected that very shortly some formal communication of inquiry will be addressed to the United States on the subject.

Election Valid, Says Minister.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 28.—The Mexican Minister of the Interior, Manuel Garza Aldape, was asked yesterday if the few votes cast in the Presidential election on Sunday in the City of Mexico light be taken as an indication of how much voting had been done elsewhere in the republic and if it looked, in view of the small number of votes cast, as though the elections would be declared null by Congress. The Minister replied that the question which will decide the legality of the election, apart from the absence of fraud, will not be whether a majority of the voters in each electoral district casts a vote; it being immaterial for instance, if only 10,000 people in the capital voted.

Reluctance to go to the polls on Sunday was genuine. Besides a lack of experience in such affairs there was said to be generally felt a fear that some evil consequences would follow should the voter choose a losing candidate.

Constitutionalists claim that when the Piedras Negras polls closed Sunday the vote stood about 95 for Diaz to 1,200 for Huerta, and that hundreds of votes were added to the polls Sunday night. In scores of cases, it is asserted, a single soldier voted in the names of a dozen different persons.

Interview Officially Denied.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—"The British Minister to Mexico did see some journalists but in the course of the interview he made no reference of any sort or kind to the intentions or the policy of the United States in regard to Mexico."

The foregoing is an authorized statement issued yesterday at the British Foreign Office where the officials have heard at length from Sir Lionel Carden, the British Minister at Mexico City, on the subject of the divergent reports relative to the contents of his recent interview.

COLLEGIANS IN TROUBLE.

Winnipeg Students Must Show That Freshies Weren't Hazed.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 28.—"Freshies" of the United Colleges were "optionally" initiated Saturday night by upper classmen to appease the faculty who had prohibited forcible initiation. Freshmen, 110 in number, were dropped through a hole in the floor, tossed from floor to floor in blankets; put in an "electric chair," and carefully rolled in lampblack, eggs and flour.

Rules in both colleges are very strict against hazing, the penalty being expulsion. Whether the upper classmen will be able to make the college authorities clearly distinguish a difference between hazing and initiation depends the fate of a large number.

Woman's Aigrettes Seized.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The largest single seizure the customs inspectors have made since the new regulations prohibiting the importations of aigrettes went into effect is on record at the customs house to-day as that of plumes valued at $600, taken from Miss Edna McLaughlin, daughter of a former police inspector here, who arrived yesterday from Europe.

Will Dethrone Mad King.

MUNICH, Oct. 28.—The Senate yesterday voted to support a measure providing for the dethronement of the mad King Otto of Bavaria and the enthronement of the regent, Prince Ludwig. The Ministerial council afterwards met and decided to present such a measure to the diet. A majority of both Houses is assured.

MORALITY THE GUIDE.

Doctrine of Expediency Has Enslaved Latin America Says Wilson.

MOBILE, Ala., Oct. 28.—While avoiding any mention specifically of Mexico, or any European influence connected with the Mexican situation, President Wilson delivered a speech here yesterday which appeared to be freighted with significance, and which served to point with further directness the policy of the United States not only toward Mexico, but toward all Central and Southern American Republics.

Mr. Wilson spoke before the Southern Commercial Congress, and the big audience which heard him constantly was swept with cheers and applause.

In the course of his address he said:—

"I want to take this occasion to say that the United States will never again seek one additional foot of territory by conquest. She will devote herself to showing that she knows how to make honorable and fruitful use of the territory she has. And she must regard it as one of the duties of friendship to see that from no quarter are material interests made superior to human liberty and national opportunity."

Material interests—a phrase much in use internationally of late in characterizing the attitude of foreign nations toward Mexico — frequently was employed by the President. He declared the American Republics had suffered long from hard bargains forced upon them by concessionires seeking "material interests" in the countries affected. The President declared that through motives of "morality and not expediency" the United States desired to help the Latin-American republics to "an emancipation from the subordination which has been inevitable to foreign enterprises."

Another Train Dynamited.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 28.—A troop train was dynamited yesterday by rebels near San Salvador, in the state of Zacatecas, on the National Railway, 115 being killed, according to a despatch from Saltillo. No details have been received here.

IF You had a sore place, and had to choose between two remedies, one of which went to the sore spot direct, and the other by a roundabout way, and might never get there at all, which would you prefer?

When you have a cold, asthma, a sore chest, catarrh, or any lung trouble, you can select between two remedies—Peps, which go to the sore spot direct, and any of the ordinary cough mixtures, cough drops, and doses, which go—not to the lungs and breathing passages, but to the stomach; which is not ailing at all.

Don't ruin your stomach in an attempt to heal your throat and lungs. Peps go direct to the throat and lungs. Peps are tiny tablets containing certain medicinal ingredients, which when placed upon the tongue immediately turn into vapour, and are breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the capillaries and tiny air cells in the lungs, thus ending asthma, catarrh, bronchitis, colds, etc.

In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Peps fumes get there direct, and at once commence their work of healing.

Once you try them you will never use any other remedy but Peps for colds, coughs, sore throat, catarrh, tightness across the chest, "that night cough," and all breathing and lung troubles.

Have you tried this famous remedy? If not cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Peps Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. box.

Lish told her in his direct fashion that the reason was because there was a sick woman who needed assistance. This was an after argument, and yet he flattered himself on his adroitness when she abruptly asserted that she would go to the hotel and work her hands off in such a cause, and he wondered why, as he departed, she looked at him and said, "May the Lord bless your big, fat heart! There was but one better, and that was Mike Callahan. It's a shame that most good men can't hold more than a quart!"

Lish walked down the street with a highly troubled look on his face, and grumbling.

"Talk about peace," he declared. "I'm always a-gettin' my cinches twisted! Now I reckon I'll have to spend the rest of my life tryin' to find them Cassady's Saints!"

He plunged into the hotel and up to the desk.

"You're the boss, ain't you?" he demanded of the man he had previously supposed to be the clerk. On receiving an assurance that this was the case, the prospector drew a deeper breath and said: "Well, I don't suppose you know that Maggie is goin' to take a layoff, and that so's the house wont' stop, the Widder Callahan is goin' to help out till Maggie gets back?"

The proprietors mouth hung open as if he had lost muscular power.

"Say, you're Henley, aren't you?" he asked.

"David Elisha Henley."

"Well, youre a-feelin right, are you? Nothin' the matter with your head? Sun ain't been too hot, or anything like that, has it?" There was actual anxiety in his tone.

Lish leaned across the counter and grew confidential as he repeated his tale of the sick woman back in the hills with none around her but men to minister to her wants.

The hotel man appeared sympathetic. 'Have you talked to Maggie and the widder?" he asked. "Because if you ain't, you'll have to. I ain't got the nerve. That's a man's job, that is!"

Lish assured him that he had. "All you got to do," he said, "is to let the widder think she's gettin' five a day. I'll pay the difference between her and Maggie's wages. Then you stick around the dinin'-room, and if anybody kicks about the way the widder dishes it out, call 'em down. If you need help, put a man on a cayuse and send him up to me. Does it go?

The proprietor of the hotel shoved his hand across and grasped the prospector's.

"Say," he said, "I began to suspect you were a sort of a man when you first showed up here in Peaceful, and now I'm just beginnin' to be sure. Of course it goes. Go and tell the women it's all right.

Lish was more embarrassed at this open praise than he had been the whole day, and was glad to go to the kitchen and explain it to Maggie, which he did in a direct way.

"Get what duds you need rolled up," he said, "so's we can hit the trail as soon as I can get my hoss and go down and tell the widder. That boss of your'n ain't such a slob, after all. He's like most folks—get on the right side of 'em and they'll do the right thing. Get on the wrong side, and there's old hob to pay. Get a hustle now, Maggie!"

He brought the word that the widow would appear at the hotel as soon as the rest of the wash was hung out on the line, and the children had returned from school, and, with Maggie by his side, drove to the doctor's office, where she was duly instructed. He breathed his first full breath after the camp was left behind them, and then remarked: "They call this camp Peaceful Hill ;but there's more kinds of trouble to walk out and meet a man here than in any place I've ever been in, outside of an Apache war camp, and yet they do say that even the Apaches get quiet and straightened out after a while. That's because they was such peaceful men shootin' at 'em'"

CHAPTER XIV.

On Keeping a Close Mouth.

Lish wondered, as he drove along, why there were so many men on the road that morning, for in the weeks that he had been up on the Divide he had never seen so many, and all of them were going in the direction of the Canada Hill Mine. They embarrassed him somewhat, and disappointed him, too, because he had hoped, now that the immediate worry over the case of Mrs. Higgins was relieved, to enjoy this ride with Maggie, even though he sat in an unusual silence as they journeyed. He tried to make conversation.

"Bet you don't know what kind of a bird that is up there," he would say, pointing at an ordinary jay. "You don't, eh? Well, he eats insects off'n the tres. I've laid and watched 'em by the hour when they was right busy getin' their grub. They're the ones that whistle like this!"

He pursed his lips and astonished her by an exact imitation of the bird's song. He was delighted at getting an answer from some bird back in the forest. "This is the way they call when they're matin'," he went on, with the same simplicity, and again trilled and whistled his plaintive note. "But 'tain't half so fine as that of the oriole. He goes this way, and then she answers him like this."

She had not suspected him of being an ornithologist, and, knowing but little of birdly habits, was interested as he told in homely phraseology of what he had learned. He endowed them with almost human intelligence, with griefs, with joys, with playfulness, and with humour as he spoke of them. He told of the flowers that grew in climes the birds frequented and again his crudely poetic soul gave to the verdue itself that magic touch of familiar love.

More than ever she was puzzled over the character that she could but half-understand. It seemed to her, as she listened to him, that there were many beauties of life which she had missed; songs that she had not heard, colours that she had not seen, scents that had blown past her unheeded. She had laughed at his crudities and bluntness in those time she had met him, and was rather ashamed of that slight, secret scorn she had entertained, now that a new reverence, wondering, had been awakened.

"We're here," he said, as they came in sight of the red buildings of the mine. "I've talked so much that the way didn't seem very long, Maggie. Sometimes I think I've lived alone in the hills and deserts so much, that all the talk I wanted to turn loose had sort of kept pilin' up, like water behind a dam, until now, when I get a chance, I just naturally gabble like a plain darned fool. Maybe you'd have liked to tell me all about the dinin'-room, down at the hotel. Most people like to talk about their own business, and then everyone else yawns and says, 'What a bore that man is! Talked all the time about his work, when I wanted to talk about mine!'"

Murdock came out and met them with a grateful smile. He, too, looked at the prospector with a different appraisement. That this man could go to the camp and arrange for an attendance that the doctor declared beyond his limitations, and all from a queer humanitarian motive, made him worth while. He sustained a certain added respect for him. He refused to permit Lish to walk back across the two miles, and himself got into the buckboard and handled the reins for the return. The prospector seemed to have lost his desire to talk when it came to riding with someone other than the waitress, although Murdock tried to induce him to conversation.

"I'm powerful thankful to you, Murdock," he said, when they came to the trail. "It certainly does a man good once in a while to meet a feller that's willin' to give him a lift."

"Give you a lift? Heavens, man! It's you that did something for me. I want to thank you for making that trip to the camp."

"Oh, I didn't do it for you," Lish stated with distressing frankness. "I wa'n't thinkin' about you at all. It was for Mrs. Marthy Higgins. So long."

He turned off into the trail, and then, after he had gone some distance, frowned and stooped over to look at it closely. For several paces he travelled carefully, scrutinizing places where there was dust, and looking at occasional patches of twisted verdure.

"Looks to me as if there'd been a heap of walkin' done over this in the last few hours!" he exclaimed. "It looks like a procession made by a tribe of Piutes on ration day. Wonder what's up?"

He quickened his steps, although the frown did not leave his face, and he trotted here and there in his eagerness to cover ground, until, at last, he came in sight of Channel's claim, where nothin unusual could be seen. He shouted as he passed the patriarch's cabin, but, getting no response, hastened on around the bend. "Great junipin' Junipers!" he exclaimed, stopping involuntarily on the hillside when he emerged from the woods.

Down below him were at least a score of men arguing and holding a heated controversy. He walked slowly down toward them. They saw him coming, and faced in his direction as if waiting for him to approcah..

"What's up?" he asked decisively, staring at them.

They looked from one to the other as if waiting for a spokesman to advance himself, and, as is invariably the case, one did. It was Channel Smith.

"Why, these-here fellers comes a-lopin' up here, and starts in to stakin' ground," quavered the veteran, with indignation. "They're a-gobblin' every foot of ground in the gulch! So they be."

"What on earth for?" demanded Lish, looking blankly at the faces around him.

Someone in front laughed with hoarse ridicule.

"What for" the man reiterated. "What do supose for? What does a man usually stake ground for? You didn't supose we were lookin' for a cheese mine, did you? It's ground carryin' pay, in gold."

Lish craned his neck and sighted the speaker out. He looked at him with a dangerously pleasant look.

"Never can tell," he answered amiably. "Every man to his taste. A cheese mine mightn't be a bad proposition. Funny I never thought of lookin' for me. A feller can learn somethin' every minute of the day, can't be? They's always somebody around smart enough to teach him."

He smiled so placidly that the sting was taken from his words, but the man who had done the talking carried it farther.

"This gulch ain't been worked much," he declared, "and as far as we can sabe there hasn't been many claims taken that were recorded. So we're goin' in to straighten it all up. There ain't any use in our fightin' over it, is there, boys?"

He addressed the others impartially, and they seemed glad to agree.

"That's right!" heartily joined in Lish, who had been ignored in that agreement. "That's just what I sort of expected from men livin' in a camp named Peaceful. No use in fightin' over anything that I ever found, barrin' womenfolks, and they sure do kick up an awful muss sometimes that you really can't tell whose fault it was. Fix her all up, fellers; but don't quarrel."

He turned and walked through the crowd with his long, swinging steps, and made his way to his tent that was not more than fifty feet distant. He untied the latches with steady hands, and disappeared inside. The spokesman of the crowd began his arguments.

"Now I guess most of this ground is open," he declared, "and there's — how many are here?"

He counted them aloud.

"Twenty-one men," he declared. "Everybody's staked, some of 'em three or four feet on a claim. It strikes me the best way is for a hat pool with numbers in it. Then, bein' as there is about seven claims on this here gulch, not countin' Channel's, which we've agreed to leave out on account of him workin' it all the time and bein' the discoverer, that makes just three owners on each one. How does that strike you?"

They began instantly to murmur but were cut short by an incisive voice from the rear. They turned. Standing in the tent fly was the prospector.

"Hold on," he drawled. "Sorry, bein' as it don't seem none of my business, to have been overhearin' all you was sayin.' You've made a sort of mistake in your count, you fellers have."

He walked toward them, and stopped when but a bare ten feet distant. Apparently he did so for a purpose.

"I sort of heard, dribbin' through my tent, that there was seven claims on this gulch. Does that take in the one below Channel's? The one that belongs to John Martin?"

ONTARIO WOMAN'S FORTUNE

Freed From That Weak, Languid, Always Tired Feeling, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Thessalon, Ont.—"I cannot speak too highly of your medicine. When my appetite is poor and I have that weak, languid, always tired feeling, I get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it builds me up, gives me strength, and restores me to perfect health again. It is truly a blessing to women, and I cannot speak highly enough of it. I take pleasure in recommending it to others."—Mrs. Annie Cameron, Thessalon, Ont.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

There are probably hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over 30 years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering. If you are sick and need such a medicine, why don't you try it?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

INSTINCT AND INTELLECT.

The Broad Difference Between the Acts of the Two Powers.

For many years it has been the custom to think of instinct and intelligence as set over against each other. The former represents the inherited reactions of the animal; the latter signifies those acts which the animal learns in the course of its individual life and its power to learn in this fashion.

Instinctive acts are "perfect the very first time," while intelligent acts are slowly acquired. In so far as an animal is dependent on its instincts, it is the victim of its ancestry and of its immediate environment. In so far as it is intelligent, it can adapt its environment to itself, can rise above its immediate surroundings and act in the light of a distant end to be accomplished.

Instinct is blind as to the outcome of its action. Intelligence foresees and modifies its behavior in the light of its foresight. The supreme example of instinct has been the wasp going through an elaborate course of action to provide food for its yet unhatched offspring, seeking out a particular species of caterpillar, stinging every segment just enough to stun the animal, but not kill it, and then depositing the worm at the bottom of the newly made nest where it has laid its egg, covering up the cell and then leaving, never to see the larvae nor to live to do the same act another season. The supremely intelligent animal is man, possessing the earth by the genius of his intellect.—M. E. Haggerty in Atlantic Monthly.

BROKEN ENGLISH.

Wrestling Match a Frenchman Had With One Little Verb.

He was a hard working and intelligent Frenchman, but the verbs still troubled him.

"Ah, yes, m'sieur, I saw Mrs. Brown the other day," he said to an English friend, "and she telled—I mean, told—me that her school was soon to break down."

"Break up, surely?"

"Ah, yes, break up! Your verbs do trouble me so yet! Break up—that was it!"

"Why was she going to let her school break up so early?"

"Because influenza had broken down in it."

"Broken out. It is a bit puzzling, isn't it?"

"Broken out—ah, yes! And she is going to leave the house in charge of a caretaker, as she fears it might be broken— How do I say that, please?"

"Broken into, I expect."

"That is it. Broken into—by the burglars."

"Is her son married yet?"

"No; the engagement is broken in."

"Broken off. Oh, I hadn't heard of that! Is she worried about it?"

"He only broke up the news to her last week. Is that right?"

"No; you should say just 'broke' there."

"Ah, well; I think I am nearly broke myself by those verbs of yours!"

And he went sadly on his way.—Pearson's Weekly.

Food and its Flavor.

In a plea for better food in America—really pure food, better cooked—the Journal of the American Medical Association calls on doctors and nurses to make the subject "of serious national import." "We cook food for at least four reasons," says the Journal, "to sterilize it, to make it nutritious, to render it more easily digestible and to improve or vary its flavor. The last of these is at least as important as any of the others. When the gustatory nerves tingle in response to the stimulus of some rare condiment or aroma the saliva flows in joyous excitement, and the digestive juices, by whose benign influences food is transformed into nourishment, respond in salutary and fullest measure. The simple and pleasant way to bring this about is to pay proper attention to the flavor of food."

A Rhythmical Criticism.

Professor Brander Matthews was talking of certain past participles that have fallen into disuse, reports the Washington Star.

The past participle "gotten" has gone out in England, although it still lingers on with us. In England gotten is almost as obsolete as "putten." In some parts of Cumberland the villagers still use gotten and putten, and a teacher once told me of a lesson on the past participles wherein she gave her pupils an exercise to write on the blackboard.

In the midst of the exercise an urchin began to laugh. She asked him why he was laughing, and he answered:

"Joe's put putten where he should have putten put."

Both Sides of It.

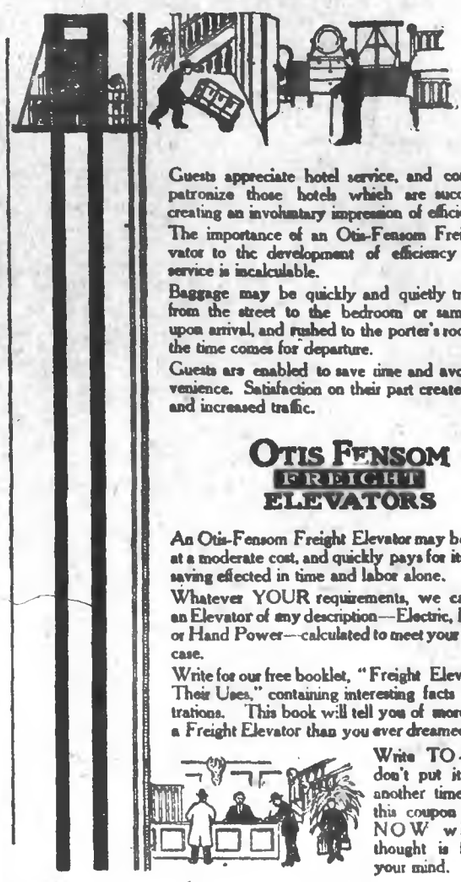
Johnny—What does it mean to say "seeing the humorous side of things," dad? Father—Well, let us take an example. How many sides has a banana skin, for instance? Johnny — Two. Father—Exactly. And when some other man steps on the banana skin he sees the serious side of it, and you see the humorous side.—London Answers.

Wrote in Bed.

Mark Twain wrote nearly all his later books in bed. So persistent a "sluggard" was he that he had a specially contrived bed desk fitted up so that he could write without trouble or exertion while propped luxuriously among his pillows. He used to aver that most of his best thoughts came to him in bed and that the trouble and worry of getting up, shaving and dressing dispersed them all and left him in no mood for commencing his literary labors. He was of opinion that bed was the very best place for the author, and he acted upon his belief.

Guests Appreciate Efficiency

HOTEL Service is not merely a matter of courtesy. The smooth-running machinery, which produces in the guests that feeling of restfulness and security from noise and inconvenience, is a vital factor in the success of every hotel worthy of the name.



Guests appreciate hotel service, and continue to patronize those hotels which are successful in creating an involuntary impression of efficiency.

The importance of an Otis-Fensom Freight Elevator to the development of efficiency in hotel service is incalculable.

Baggage may be quickly and quietly transferred from the street to the bedroom or sample room upon arrival, and rushed to the porter's room when the time comes for departure.

Guests are enabled to save time and avoid inconvenience. Satisfaction on their part creates prestige and increased traffic.

OTIS FENSOM FREIGHT ELEVATORS

An Otis-Fensom Freight Elevator may be installed at a moderate cost, and quickly pays for itself in the saving effected in time and labor alone.

Whatever YOUR requirements, we can supply an Elevator of any description—Electric, Hydraulic or Hand Power—calculated to meet your individual case.

Signs of the Times.

True, it does sometimes seem as if the world were going to the bad, if we judge from the daily news. But we must consider the enormous increase in population, the fact that 'many are running to and fro;' that there is no corner of the earth so dark or distant that the searchlight of modern enterprise does not find it out and explore it; that human nature remains unchanged amid all these changing conditions, retaining still its weaknesses and passions as well as its grand and noble impulses.

To sum it all up:

This world is not so bad a world
As some would like to make it;
But, whether good or whether bad,
Depends on how we take it.

And, taking it from the viewpoint of one feminine mind, there was never a generation better worth living in than the generation of today.—Mrs. Mary E. Dustin in Boston Globe.

His View of Lawyers.

Lewis Cass Ledyard said at the Knickerbocker club in New York:

"The old idea about the crookedness of lawyers is dying out."

"True, true," a group of lawyers chorused heartily.

"Yes, the old idea about lawyers' crookedness, as illustrated in the Winterson anecdote, is a thing of the past," resumed Mr. Ledyard.

"A book agent, you know, sought out Winterson in his office and said:

"'I have here, sir, a book that will show you how to be your own lawyer.'

"'Humph,' sneered Winterson, 'if the book showed me how to be somebody else's lawyer I might take it. But what's the good of teaching me how to bleed myself?'"—Detroit Free Press

Careless.

Man's Love For Woman.

"Would you marry a man who has the reputation of being not more than half witted?"

"No, but I'll be a sister to you."—Houston Post.

"DURHAM PIE"

This Unique Pastry the Seventh Wonder of Durham?

The City of Durham, in England, is said to be built on seven hills, to have seven churches and to be famous for seven things. Regarding these seven things for which celebrity is claimed, while there is no doubt about six of them, the seventh is somewhat uncertain. The six are wood and water, law and gospel, old maids and mustard. In quite recent times, however, mustard "has gone." The old maids are still with them.

Coming across an old manuscript cookery book, one could perceive among the receipts a very unique one which was termed the "Durham pie." This is a compound of so many good things that if it is not named among the seven things for which the good old city is famous it certainly should be. The recipe is as follows:

Take seven pounds flour, one-quarter pound of suet, two pounds of butter; form into a paste, mold it to fancy, so as to make a handsome ornamental crust, and bake in a slow oven. Then take a goose, a turkey, a grouse, a woodcock, a pheasant, part of a hare, a partridge, one and a half pounds of bullock's tongue. Cut these in small pieces, stew slightly, and then place in the centre of a crust with the gravy and some cooked ham or beef, season to taste and bake in a slow oven. Of course, the top is covered with paste, ornamented, with feet of birds in a central crown, and foliage, etc., around them.

BRITISH INFLUENCE IN SOUTH AFRICA

Intermarriage Lessens Hate—English Literature Over-runs the Country

Mr. B. Ryan, of East London, South Africa reports that a great deal of intermarrying is taking place between Briton and Boers, that the country is being over-run by light literature all of which is published in English and the children become absolutely English. While the Dutch do not like the other race at the present time the country is surely becoming British in spite of Boer prejudice and customs.

Mr. Ryan then explained why South Africa was bound to be British to the end. Although the Government had spent a million and a half pounds on a magnificent Parliament building at Pretoria, evidently with the object of keeping it in the old Transvaal capital, Johannesburg with her 300,000 people and the Rand with its gold production of $300,000,000 per annum., will be in connection with the British influence in Cape Colony the ever-growing predominating power in the South African Confederation.

FOREST RESERVES

Thirty-five Thousand Eight Hundred Square Miles of Reservation

Over ten thousand five hundred square miles were added recently to the existing area of Dominion Forest Reserves, making a total of over thirty-five thousand eight hundred square miles of reserved forest land in the Western Provinces under Dominion jurisdiction. Of this reserved area, three thousand seven hundred and eighty-two square miles are found in Alberta, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two square miles in Saskatchewan and four thousand one hundred and eight square miles in Manitoba. Over two-thirds of the total area is found in Alberta, owing to the fact that practically all the eastern slope of the Rockies has been set apart as a forest reserve, not only to perpetuate the supply of timber, but to preserve and equalise the flow of the large prairie rivers which have their source in this reserved area.

These western reserves are created by the Dominion Government as cited in the Act "for the maintenance, protection and reproduction of the timber growing thereon, or which may hereafter grow thereon, for the conservation of the minerals and the protection of the animals, birds, and fish therein, and for the maintenance of conditions favorable to a continuous water supply." To accomplish these ends the reserves must first be protected from fire, and under the direction of technical foresters and supervisors, fire-lines are being cut of ploughed, trails are being cut, telephone lines and lookout stations installed, "caches" of tools distributed in accessible places throughout the reserves, and efficient patrols established in accessible places throughout the reserves, and efficient patrols established.

Nor is the timber so protected allowed to die of old age. The foresters determine at what diameter in each section the maximum production is attained and when the trees reach this size, they are granted free or for a nominal sum to homesteaders who apply to the forest officials for cutting permits. Care is taken not to allow over-cutting, for it is the forester's aim to crop the forest perpetually and at the same time increase its producing capacity by proper methods of management. Thus, by this policy of forest reservation, instead of denuded hillsides, drifting sand and barren rocks and muskegs, these areas will in time be covered with great tracts of forest owned by the people and supplying their wants, not only now but to all future time, when countries with less foresight will be in the throes of a timber famine.

THE NEW WELLAND

Twenty-five Miles Long With a Fall of 328 Feet

As finally located the enlarged Welland ship canal will conform closely to the route of the present canal from Lake Erie to Allanburg, a point about midway between Lakes Erie and Ontario. From Allanburg an entirely new location will be followed. This will cross the present canal twice, finally reaching Lake Ontario at the foot of Ten Mile Creek—three miles east of the present terminus at Port Dalhousie. The total length will be 25 miles. The fall of 325½ feet will be accomplished by seven locks, each having a lift of 46½ feet. Each lock will be 800 feet long and 80 feet wide, with a minimum depth of water over sister sills of 30 feet. The canal will be 200 feet wide at the bottom, designed for a depth of 30 feet, but excavated for only 25 feet for the present. This will permit dredging out the remaining 5 feet at any future time. At Port Colborne, the Lake Erie terminus, a new breakwater will be built on the west side of the entrance to insure quiet water in the harbor during storms, the present breakwater being insufficient for the purpose. The new breakwater will consist of an immense rubble mound of stone from the excavation north of Port Colborne, and will terminate in a timber-and-concrete headblock located some 2,000 feet farther out in the lake than the present breakwater.

Woman's World

First Lawyer of Fair Sex In Criminal Court.

MISS AMY WREN.

Miss Amy Wren, lawyer and suffragist, of New York city has the distinction of being the first woman lawyer who ever appeared in the criminal branch of the United States district court of the district of New York.

Ennui; That's Punishment.

No greater punishment than ennui? That is what Ruth Helen Davis, translator of "The Daughter of Heaven," says. She has done some very clever work in French translation and has enjoyed every minute of it. Her theory is as follows:

"Dullness is the burden of the rich. Lack of contrast is their stumbling block to enjoyment. I know no greater punishment that ennui.

"Restlessness and the constant search for novelty is a cruel master. There is nothing enviable in this world but self development, self knowledge. Its beginning and ending is concentration.

"No one ever need be dull in this world. No one need to be lastingly downcast. Just think of all the things in the world that are to be done and the different ways there are to do them.

"The simplest task can be made the beginning of a study. The most ordinary talent, if focused and concentrated, can be made a means to real achievement, which is only another name for joy and contentment.

"It is odd how blind many wealthy persons are to the fact that work is the greatest satisfier in the world.

"Happiness is cheap. Any one can have it who will concentrate. Self development, built on concentration, is the very finest game on earth.

"If those who are on the verge of something desperate would only step on a railroad train, for instance, and go to some strange place, no matter where, and follow up some work suited to their ability, however humble, there would be fewer suicides."

A Busy Street.

Wullie Dalziel, the old shepherd, had retired at last from active service after spending the whole of his life in a little cottage away at the back of the hills, a full three miles as the crow flies from the nearest road. He moved into a house near the head of the valley above Crashie Howe, situated on the side of the lonely road. But Wullie was not quite happy. He was distracted. He was worried by the traffic. He told a friend that there was no peace in this bit for an auld body. "Three bicycles and a cairt in the same day! Mon, it's a fair toon!"—Manchester Guardian.

THE KAISER'S LIBRARY

Kaiser Wilhelm's library, it is said, consists in all of only 6,000 volumes, and two-thirds of the total number have been acquired during the 25 years of the German Emperor's reign. When Kaiser Wilhelm ascended the throne he inherited a private library of a mere 3,500 volumes. Characteristically, he commenced by eliminating nearly one-half of them as being books of no present practical value.

The catalogue of the Emperor's private books is divided into twelve carefully-arranged categories. The first consists of encyclopaedias and dictionaries, the second of books on jurisprudence; the third, political economy and social sciences; the fourth, colonial; the fifth, archaeology and mythology; the sixth, universal history; the seventh, history of the Hohenzollerns; the eighth, biographies, memoirs, personal recollections and correspondence; the ninth, military science; the tenth, geography and ethnology, while the last two divisions are devoted to German literature and pictures. Each volume contains a book plate designed by the German artist, Ernest Doeppler. The design consists of the Imperial arms with the inscription, "Ex libris Wilhelm II., Imperatoris Regis."

Aged Fire Heroine

Mrs. Grace Jones, a septuagenarian, residing at Ebenezer, near Carnarvon, received two awards (one of $25.00 from the Carnegie Hero Fund) for an act of conspicuous bravery. In the middle of the night, fire broke out in the house, where the only occupants were the old lady and a lodger. Mrs. Jones endeavored to arouse the lodger, whose room was full of smoke, but the man slept so soundly that his rescuer had to drag him out of bed and take him downstairs to a place of safety.

Good Form

Good Manners at Telephone.

Among both women and men telephone manners are bad. We make little effort, in fact, to be courteous over the telephone.

"Hello—who is this?" is the insistent call that comes over our wire day after day. The courteous thing to say, of course, is this: "Hello—is this 711 Main?" and if an affirmative answer is given: "This is Mrs. Blank. Is Mrs. Brown at home?"

The method of most women—of calling the number they want on the telephone and then rudely demanding the name of the owner of the voice that answers them—is reminiscent of an experience business men sometimes have. One busy man was consulting with a very important business associate. He gave word to the office boy that he on no account could be disturbed. A man called to see him and heard the office boy's statement that Mr. X. was engaged. The caller waited five minutes and then, seeing no chance of gaining an interview in the near future, went to the switchboard, connected himself with the office of the man he wanted to see and had his conversation over the telephone.

The office boy, overcome with unaccustomed timidity at the visitor's "nerve," sat quietly by and thought of the scolding he would receive presently from his employer. He was not disappointed. The employer, righteously angry at the boy for connecting him with any telephone call, would listen to no explanations, and the boy had to suffer for the man's rudeness.

A good way to greet the insistent demand on the other end of the wire as to who you are is to say, "This is No. 711," or whatever your number may be. Maids should be taught to answer the telephone in this same way.

Or they may say, "This is Mrs. Brown's residence." But it is better not to give your name over the phone until you know who has called you up. The person who has called you has taken upon herself the responsibility of giving her name first.

The telephone invitation is so usual today that there is no use preaching against it. And indeed it is in no way harmful. It saves time, trouble and worry, and when it is given carefully and as carefully answered it is in every way good.

But somehow we do not regard telephoned invitations with the same reverence we bestow on other invitations. Few of us would fail to keep an engagement which had been suggested to us by means of an engraved invitation. Few of us would neglect a written invitation.

But many of us will say at the last minute, if we are too tired to feel enthusiastic about some social gathering to which we have been bidden by telephone, "Well, she got me on the phone; I'll just telephone her and tell her I cannot come and she can get some one else on the phone."

Of course a telephoned invitation deserves just as much consideration as one engraved on gold or a formal summons from a king.

Letter writing—love letter writing—has degenerated into a despised necessity to be made use of when one is without the zone, either geographical or financial, of the telephone, local or long distance. A fluttering "Hello!" traveling over hundreds of miles of wire now produces more ecstasy in the manly breast than did the old fashioned scented note written on pink paper and filled with pressed forgetmenots and heartsease.

And the maidenly heart, too, is stirred more quickly by the thought that someb[illegible] cared enough about her to spend $5 on a telephone call from the ends of the world than it is by the sight of a pile of letters.

There is no use bewailing this sad state of affairs. Doubtless Cupid can balance on a wire as well as he can hide in a scented envelope.

Luncheon Etiquette.

It is correct when serving a luncheon to use either a tablecloth or to serve the meal on a polished table embellished with lace or embroidered centerpiece and doilies.

At a luncheon given exclusively to ladies the hostess leads the way to the dining room, while at a mixed luncheon—that is, a luncheon composed of an equal number of gentlemen and ladies—the host leads the way to the dining room with the most distinguished lady guest or lady for whom the luncheon is given on his arm, and is followed by the guests in couples and, last of all, the hostess with the gentleman who is to sit on her right. The lady on the hostess' right should be served first and then the guests as they sit, first a lady and then a gentleman.

The servant at the door indicates the dressing rooms for both ladies and gentlemen. The ladies lay aside their wraps, but keep on their hats. The hostess awaits her guests in the drawing room, greets them cordially and introduces one to another, if this is necessary. As soon as all have arrived the waitress or butler steps to the drawing room door and announces that luncheon is served.

It is unnecessary to wait more than fifteen minutes for a guest who is ill bred or unfortunate enough to be late, for it is not fair either to the hostess or the other guests to let the meal spoil for the sake of one thoughtless individual.

On the Way.

The man who sits around waiting for somebody else to discover and develop his ability is sure sooner or later to become a wearisome grumbler.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Chiffon Blouse Still Modish.

The chiffon blouse has become perennial and in its various phases is an admirable solution of the problem which presents itself when one tries to make a blouse match a wool costume, yet be cool enough for comfort, becoming and slightly dressy. Its admirable qualities will keep it in evidence again this season, and one finds it in all degrees of elaboration, from theater, in which laces and embroideries play an important part, to the street and traveling blouses, in which the dark veiling chiffon rises quite to the base of the throat, and then a becoming sailor collar and sleeve finish of the cream lace or net which it veils.

THE NEWEST IN CHIFFON WAISTS.

One of the distinctive details of the smartest French blouses in silk is the long sleeve. But most of the domestic designers continue to divide their models into short sleeved, sheer models of more or less dressy degrees and rigidly severe shirt waists, or long sleeved, high collared tailored waists of conspicuous ugliness.

The blouse illustrated is a delightful affair carried out in flowered silk. The bishop sleeves and shoulder seams are cut in one pieces, and the high collar at the back seems to be part of this combination. A smart touch is the wide girdle sash of green and blue plaid silk.

The Coming Maude.

Maude Muller one day, eating fudge,
Looked up and saw the county judge.

Maude was a pretty girl, all right,
His honor fell in love at sight.

And when about a month had fled
Maude promised that the judge she'd wed.

Then o'er the judge's pathway came
A wealthy, proud and stately dame.

The judge then for ambition's sake
Poor little Maude resolved to shake.

An ardent suffragette was Maude,
Chairwoman of the county board.

"I'll get square," Maude said, "without fail."
So told her party her sad tale.

Judge had elected been in fall;
In spring they voted his recall.

The haughty dame refused to wed.
"You are no longer judge," she said.

This lesson sad he learned, you bet:
"Don't monkey with a suffragette!"

Notorious Sneak Thief, After Series of Daring Robberies, Decides to Reform

The rounding up of sneak thieves in the United States and Canada has been a specialty, so to speak, with the writer of this article, a detective of international reputation, who for obvious reasons does not care to divulge his name. Details of daring robberies committed by this band of "sneaks" are given herewith, and especially interesting is the interview obtained by the sleuth with a reformed criminal who, after a series of bold bank robberies, determined to "turn straight and live honest."

(Copyright, 1913, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

ONE of the most notorious sneak thieves this country ever knew, and one who figured in one of the most daring robberies ever perpetrated in this country, after serving his time in prison, emerged with the full determination to "turn straight and live honest." He is fairly well to do to-day and lives in New York city with an office within the shadow of the very bank he once looted. This reformed sneak thief told the writer that had he saved and invested the money he stole he would be worth several million dollars to-day instead of being compelled to attend to the daily routine of the little business he conducts. It was after considerable hesitation that he consented to tell of his own and the operations of his associates, many of whom have served terms representing the best years of their lives.

Among the best known of these thieves were such men as Adam Worth, alias "Little Adam," still characterised as the "King of Sneak Thieves;" "Rufe" Minor, alias "Little Rufe;" "Doc" Bliss, George Carson, alias "Little George;" "Philly" Coleman, John Larney, alias "Molly Matches;" "Big Ed" Rice, "Johnny" Price, Horace Hoven, alias "Little Horace;" Frank Buck, "Gussie" Raymond, "Little Joe" McCluskey, "Dave" Cummings, "Joe" Killoran, "Wally" O'Connor, "Johnny" Jordan, "Charlie" Woodward, alias "The Diamond Swallower;" August Sprungli, "Hod" Bacon, Chauncey Johnson, "Dutch" Heinrichs, "Jimmie" Griffin, "Boston Jim" Burns, "Billy" Flynn and "Eddie" McLean.

The foregoing are sneak thieves of the old school, while those who succeeded them and adopted more up to date methods include "Patsy" Flannigan, "Mickey" Gleason, "Charlie" Comiskey, alias "Kruse;" "Billy" Barrett, "Fritzie" Diehn, George Havill, "Matty" O'Neill, "Rob Nail" Reilly, Henry Schwendener, alias "The Swindler;" "Harry" Russell, "Sid" Yennie, "Phil" Lamble, alias "Shea," alias "Gunset;" "Nick" Moran, "Kid" O'Brien, William Gilhouley, "Billy" Miller and "Billy the Kid."

The method of the sneak thief is about as follows, according to the man now living "straight":

"An expert in our line," said this man, "always studied the habits of the clerks in the bank that he marked for robbery. We always ascertained at what hour of the day the greatest number of clerks were absent at one time. We always made our arrangements accordingly, carefully considering the number of confederates necessary to the success of the plot. These confederates were supposed to engage the attention of the clerks remaining on duty in the absence at luncheon of their co-workers. It was an easy matter for the 'master thief' to slip behind the railings, enter vault or teller's cage and corral all the money or securities that happened to be laying around loose. His exit safely made, the confederates followed at their leisure and without exciting suspicion. Sometimes the robbery would not be discovered for an hour or more after its commission. A well trained sneak thief—and I know whereof I speak—could pass within a few feet of a bank clerk and rob vault or cage under his very nose and not arouse the slightest suspicion of his presence in the bank.

"An old ruse that I worked with marked success on more than one occasion was to have my confederate drive up to the bank in an open carriage, taking due care to have him exhibit a crutch. A woman always accompanied the 'cripple,' and she would enter the bank and ask the teller or cashier to step to the carriage, as her companion was too lame to walk. In many cases this paved the way for the real thief to slip behind the railing and make a rich clean up while the busy clerk was talking a big loan or generous deposit with the cripple in the carriage. The majority of the real big sneak jobs were committed in small towns on circus days, when the town was alive with strangers and all the provincial clerks were on the qui vive of expectancy awaiting the passing of the animal cages and the like. Of course, the sneak thief had concealed himself in the bank at an earlier hour, and when the rush for the windows began he was free to work at leisure.

"Another trick that netted us many thousands of dollars was done through dropping a bank note at the feet of a customer counting a large sum of money at the teller's window. One thief would call the customer's attention to the bill he dropped while another would seize the bank roll he left unguarded on the window ledge as he stooped to recover his money. Still another and more simple method was to pose as janitor, porter or window cleaner by donning a uniform similar to those worn by the men filling such positions in the bank. Robberies netting very large sums have been made through this simple ruse.

"You might not believe it," said the old time thief as a smile flitted across his wrinkled face, "but I have used a long, specially made hook with which I raked money from a desk at which the teller was working. I have stood directly in front of my victim, and, you might say, looked him squarely in the eye as, with my especially constructed hook, I raked out packages of bank notes which dropped noiselessly into a satchel I had in front of me. And I got away with it, too."

That Rufe Minor justly earned the reputation as one of the cleverest thieves this country ever saw is attested by the vast sums he stole while at the heydey of his criminal operations. Heading a band of sneaks that descended upon the office of a banker and broker in New York some years ago, Rufe succeeded in getting away with bonds and securities valued at $100,000. This property was recovered when Minor was located at Petersburg, Va., and his trunk seized.

But there were other robberies engineered by him where the victims were not so fortunate. For instance, the Commercial National Bank of Cleveland, Ohio, where $80,000 was stolen; the Bank of Baltimore, netting $12,000; the Erie County Savings Bank, where $114,000 was stolen; $78,000 from the Middletown (Conn.) Bank; $70,000 from the Boston Safe Deposit Company, and $71,000 from the Guarantee Safety Deposit Company's vaults in Philadelphia.

Another sneak equally versatile and far more fortunate was "Joe" Killoran, alias "Joe" Howard, a picturesque character of an old and highly cultivated family of New York. He was the brains of the band he operated with, and although he invariably outlined the whole line of procedure he always acted as "the stall," or the man to engage the person marked as the victim in conversation while one of his clever confederates procured the loot. He bore all the earmarks of a well to do man of affairs, and could enter a bank cashier's office and at once interest him in one of the many schemes he propounded, with the loot, of course, as the one to finance the proposition he outlined. The rôle of cripple in a carriage was one of his most successful ruses, and following his capture here he figured in a sensational escape from the Ludlow Street Jail. Harry Russell and Charles Allen, federal prisoners at that time, also figured in this escape.

Plainfield, N. J., has just cause to remember a visit paid to it by Killoran. Accompanied by "Patsy" Flannigan and "Sid" Yennie, Killoran went to the First National Bank of the pretty little suburban city, and while he engaged the clerks in close conversation Flannigan procured $22,000 and all three fled. Captured shortly thereafter, Killoran escaped from jail and fled to Europe. In his flight he met with an accident which cost him a leg, and then for a while he had to resort to the crutch he had previously used as a blind. With an artificial limb he again became as active as ever.

Killoran stole many thousands of dollars while in Europe, and returning to this country was captured and served a term in Illinois for robbing a post office. After his release he went back to Europe, but was later arrested in Vienna for stealing $100,000 from a bank in that city. Six years was meted out to him in an Austrian prison.

A particularly brazen sneak robbery was that of the First National Bank of San Francisco. A sneak boldly entered the bank and passing behind the railing picked up a satchel containing $20,000 in gold. He as quietly left and it was not until an hour after the robbery that the loss was discovered. When the assistant cashier of the bank went out for luncheon he spied a man he had seen lurking in the bank and accosted him. The bank official seized the thief and the satchel he had tucked between his feet under the table. In the scuffle that followed the thief escaped, but the money was recovered. The bank cashier who had recovered the loot fully identified Barrett as the man he had accosted in the restaurant. But the Baltimore authorities exercised a prior claim to the prisoner, and he was taken to that city and convicted of a similar job, for which he was given a long term in the Maryland penitentiary. He has a long prison record, and while a product of Chicago, he served time in the Illinois reformatory, Joliet penitentiary and the Western penitentiary. Barrett and "Mickey" Gleason are credited with mulcting the Bank of France of $80,000. Two of the four bank's messengers had the money between them in a cab stationed in front of the bank building. They were waiting for a third messenger when Barrett and his accomplice approached and while one engaged the two messengers in conversation the other seized the satchel and fled. Neither was arrested for this robbery. "Patsy" Flannigan was a pupil of Killoran, and a very apt pupil he proved too. He was in company with "Wally" O'Connor and Charles "Kruse" Comiskey, who entered the Yonkers Savings Bank when all the clerks except the cashier was out at dinner. Comiskey and O'Connor did lookout duty while Flannigan crawled behind the railing and, getting to the paying teller's department, grabbed a bundle containing $4,500. The cashier hearing a noise behind him turned and thought he saw a dog dart under a table. With a vigorous kick he brought the intruder to a standing posture, but his second glance was into the muzzle of a revolver. Flannigan got away, but later was captured and sentenced to ten years. A pardon was forthcoming and he returned to his life of crime, but from then on he operated with yeggmen, and post offices still are his speciality. He is being vigorously pursued now, but so far he has eluded capture.

SEIZED THE BANK ROLL AS HE STOOPED TO RECOVER HIS MONEY.

Flannigan is still carrying in his body the bullets a night watchman shot into him when he was discovered robbing a bank in Montague, Texas. Although desperately wounded, he escaped and hid away until he was able to travel and shake the dust of Texas from his feet.

A bit of detective work had to do with the capture of Walter Sheridan, "Philly" Pearson and "Charlie" Hicks. As I boarded a street car in Chicago I espied the trio as fellow passengers. I trailed my quarry to the Chicago and Alton Railway station and saw them purchase tickets for Springfield, Ill. The following day the vault of the Springfield National Bank was looted of $35,000 by Pearson while Sheridan engaged the attention of the bank officials, Hicks performing outside picket duty. Hicks was soon captured, convicted and sentenced to eight years in Joliet prison. Pearson fled to Europe. Sheridan was apprehended in Toledo, Ohio, where $22,000 of the loot was recovered. Sheridan had long been identified with a successful band of counterfeiters, and federal authorities constantly trailed him.

There are many men in the financial district to-day who recall the famous "Lord bond robbery." Lord, a very wealthy man for those days, had invested $1,200,000 in United States bonds, which he deposited in a strong box stored in the vault of his Broad street office. All the bonds were of the coupon variety, made payable to bearer, and easily negotiable. A band of sneak thieves consisting of "Jimmy" Griffin, "Piano Charlie" Bullard, "Charlie" Ross and "Hod" Bacon plotted to steal the bonds. Selecting a morning when Mr. Lord was absent from his office, they entered, to find only two clerks on duty. Bullard and Ross engaged the clerks in conversation while Ennis sneaked into the vault, seized the strong box and walked out. While expert as sneak thieves, the looters were not up in the intricacies of finance, and in consequence called in George Bidwell, world famous as the Bank of England forger, to aid them in disposing of their loot. Bidwell crossed to England and soon disposed of the major portion of the bonds.

The thieves knew they were suspected and promptly fled. Ennis went to Canada. Soon afterward he was arrested and extradited and convicted. He received a long sentence for his share in the robbery. Bullard settled in Paris, but afterward returned to the United States, and, joining forces with Adam Worth, successfully committed the Boylston Bank robbery, after which both returned to Paris and opened the celebrated American bar under the Grand Hôtel, in the rue Scribe. Bullard later was seized and sentenced to a long term for complicity in a bank robbery in Belgium. He, Ennis, Ross and Worth all stole millions in their time, yet all approached old age without a dollar stowed away.

A criminal with a remarkable record attributes his downfall to excessive cigarette smoking. This is Charles O'Connor, who also stole hundreds of thousands of dollars and yet had little or nothing when he broke down physically. Two cases served to bring O'Connor to the attention of the police of the world. One was when he entered the Fifth National Bank of New York city, carrying a soap box which he set down in front of one of the tellers' windows. On this he stood as he reached over the screened partition and by means of a hook sneaked a package containing $3,000 in bank notes. All the while one of his confederates was earnestly conversing with the all absorbed teller.

Not content with such a small pittance O'Connor the same day and by the same means stole a package of $7,000 in bills from the Commercial National Bank. After a long chase extending over a period of several years he was captured and indicted. While waiting to plead guilty to the charge he walked out of the prisoners' pen in the Court of General Sessions and fled to Philadelphia, where he was captured. Following his trial and conviction he was sentenced to eighteen years in the State Prison, but later, soon after his incarceration, he was transferred to the Clinton Prison at Dannemora, from which he escaped. He was again recaptured, but two months after his recapture he escaped again, and since then has managed to elude all pursuers. He was a remarkable criminal and rather prided himself on his prowess as a jail breaker.

With such brainy men as these to direct their efforts it is little wonder that those bands of yeggmen headed by sneak thieves of the old school are reaping such a harvest in the rural districts as well as in the big cities. The one time sneak thief whose reminiscences have been quoted in the foregoing asserts that every big job of the yegg type that has been pulled off in New York city within the last years bears all the earmarks of the handiwork of sneak thieves he was once associated with.

"Of course," he said, "where safes have been blown or drilled I know either a yeggman or an expert bank burglar was at work. But the conception of these robberies and the manner in which entrance was effected, to the treasure stores all point to the master hands of men who were once past masters of sneak thievery. These men take more chance than the average yeggmen, and they all know how to cover their tracks. That is why so many of the recent robberies in New York city are still unsolved."

NEXT WEEK.

Joseph A. Faurot, the well known detective, who solved the Annaliese murder mystery and caused the arrest of Hans Schmidt, the disgruntled priest, will begin the first of a series of articles on his experiences in running down criminals.

TITLE CONFERRED UPON DIPLOMATIST, "PRINCE OF BOOSTERS"

"PRINCE OF BOOSTERS."

This is the proud title that the enterprising business men of Los Angeles and San Diego conferred upon the Peruvian Minister, Señor Federico Alfonso Pezet. This travelling diplomatist, who shuns Newport and Bar Harbor to study all strata of American life and industry, carried off the palm for publicity by his vivid and compelling word pictures of the stupendous resources and limitless opportunity of the Land of the Incas.

The boosters of the Pacific coast, supposedly the greatest of their tribe, took off their hats to the Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary who made it his business during the hot summer months to acquaint various communities along his 11,000 mile transcontinental journey with little known facts regarding one of the great republics of South America.

Señor Pezet knows his United States as few diplomatists know it. For several years he was Consul General of Peru at New York, then Secretary of Legation and Chargé d'Affaires at Washington. In 1904 he left Washington and the large circle of warm and strong friends made by himself and Señora Pezet to become Peruvian Minister to the Central American republics of Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Guatemala, Honduras and Salvador.

"My opinion is that a diplomatist properly to discharge the work intrusted to him by his government must know the people of the nation to which he is accredited," said Señor Pezet. "And this he can not do by going to the fashionable resorts. I felt that I might make Peru known to the United States by travelling. Last year the Chambers of Commerce of Peru were kind enough to designate me as their delegate to the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce, held in this country. I travelled with the other delegates, who were mostly business men, throughout New England, to Buffalo, Detroit and through the Middle West.

"Deeming myself the eyes of the business men of Peru, I looked into finance, trade and industry, inspected all kinds of factories, visited the homes of working people, and familiarized myself with the problems—economic, political and social—with which this great nation is contending. I have been in touch, therefore, with every stratum of American life.

"This year I received from my government to select a site for the Peruvian building and exhibit at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco, and I arrived in San Francisco in eight days from New York. Since early summer I have travelled more than 11,000 miles.

"The greatness of the United States is in the West. My advice is that Americans should 'see America first,' and, especially if they live east of the Mississippi, that they visit the Pacific coast. For scenery, for recreation, for business opportunity the West is a country of such resources that no American who has not seen it can say he knows his country."

At Denver, on the way West, the Minister was duly escorted up the cog railway to Pike's Peak. A certain advertisement caught his eye and challenged his "boosting" spirit.

"You have no right, you know," he remarked to the Denverites, "to advertise this as the highest railway in the world. It is, I believe, 14,120 feet above the sea level at its summit. Well, the Central Railroad of Peru attains a height of 15,900 feet above the sea level, and it is a standard gauge railroad at that."

Everywhere the Peruvian party stopped the Minister was interviewed. Sometimes the newspapers called him Ambassador, sometimes Minister, and one proclaimed him the grandson of the "King of Peru." But all of them printed much about Peru, its friendliness toward Americans, the fact that when the Panama Canal is finished Callao can be reached in eight days from New York. "Business interest" is well understood by Mr. Pezet, and thousands who read his interviews were made to feel that Peru, instead of a land of the murky and romantic past, is a next door neighbor of to-day.

Yellowstone Park and the Yosemite were sight seeing interludes. Real business began with the arrival of "the Pezets"—as the California papers usually called them—in the land of sunshine and real estate, flowers and prosperity.

"How do you like California?" found the visitors duly enthusiastic. San Francisco reporters called and, after the habit of their kind, told the Minister what a wonderful place San Francisco is, although, alas! they mourned the picturesque bohemian San Francisco that went up in the smoke of the great disaster. The Peruvian Minister apparently was not to be drawn into the usual San Francisco interview, which consists exclusively of a column of praise of San Francisco. He admired the great city but had a few things to say about Peru. For instance:—

"Peru is the El Dorado of to-morrow. A new Illinois for farmers; a land teeming with all the minerals the world needs; a country waiting to give ease and wealth to ambitious Americans." Through the medium of this and other interviews the Minister touched the imagination of Californians. Describing the mining opportunities that will open with the completion of the Southern Railroad of Peru, which will make it possible to ship electric dredgers and mining machinery to the gold country, Mr. Pezet added his customary romantic touch. Incidentally it proved that gold is there, an ever valuable consideration in selling mining stock or booming a gold country.

"The story is universally known," he said, "of the millions of dollars in gold and gold ornaments taken from the homes and temples of the Incas and shipped to Europe at the time of the conquest. It is generally conceded that the Spaniards took in excess of $30,000,000 in gold. This is startling when you remember that the natives had only the most primitive mining appliances. They sank few mines, gaining their wealth by cleaning up the overflow beds of rivers and by scooping out caverns in the river banks.

"The principal drawback to development has been the difficulty of transportation. The government of Peru has granted a concession for dredging the Inambari River and sixty of its tributaries, which carry gold from the mountains vast deposits of gold during the rainy season. But modern dredges and mining machinery in that country will be broken. I think I am safe in saying that within the next few years one of the greatest, if not the greatest, gold fields in the world will be developed in southeastern Peru."

"Peru is not in all Peru," he said impressively, "a real estate man or a department store."

Bulls in Calf Stories.

Mr. Chancellor of Hoxton (or Hagerston or some other corner of north-east London) was dilating before the committee one day on the horrors of inoculation and vivisection, writes a member of parliament in London Opinion, and harrowed the feelings of his hearers by telling them about some calves which had been inoculated and assuring the committee that two years later the calves were still suffering from the effects.

It happens that on this committee is Edward Kelly, a cultured and witty young Celt. "Kelly, from the isle of Erin," at once sprang to his feet and electrified his fellow members by saying, "Mr. Chairman—on a point of order—would the honorable member kindly explain how the calves could still be calves two years later?"

Mr. Chancellor must, I fear, be first cousin to the preacher who, discoursing on the prodigal son and the fatted calf, informed his congregation that the calf had been the cherished possession of the family "for years and years and years."

Ingenious.

"Now," said Mrs. Goodart, "if you do a little work for me, I'll give you a good meal after awhile."

"Say, lady," replied Hungry Hawkes, "you'll git off cheaper if yer gimme de meal now. Work always gives me a fierce appetite."—Exchange.

THESE FISHERMEN HAVE HARD LIFE

Men Who Work on Steam Trawlers Have Much Work and Little Recreation

There are few callings which are more monotonous and hard than that of the fishermen working on steam trawlers, who think themselves lucky if they get a week or two on land every year to spend with their families and friends.

The number of steam trawlers in England and Wales is 1,337, while Scotland owns about 290. The total number of men and boys employed in trawler fishing around the British Isles is 24,129.

The work of trawling is carried out by means of nets specially constructed for dredging the bottom of the sea, the two principal kinds being called the beam trawl, and the otter trawl, the first-named being used on sailing vessels, and the latter on steam trawlers. The net, attached to the wooden beam on the vessel using it, is shaped like a flattened cone, the upper part being fixed to a triangular iron frame by two bridle ropes, while the open, pointed end of the net is caught up by a rope which can be detached when the trawl is hoisted full of fish on to the deck.

In the case of the trawl used on the steam vessels, the beam is superseded by a rope called the head line, which permits a far larger length of opening to the net to be used. To each end of this rope are attached otter boards, and to these the trawl lines are fastened to drag along on the bottom of the sea.

When the trawl net is shot and at the sea bottom, the steamer tows it along at the rate of about fifteen miles an hour, and the pressure of the water on the otter boards keeps the net open and distended, while it forces the fish in towards the narrow part of the net.

At certain intervals during the day and night the net is hauled in, and then a scene of great activity is witnessed as each glittering catch is disclosed to view. All the crew set to work at once to sort and gut the various kinds, and pack them in ice in boxes.

Swift cutters are attached to the trawling fleets, and these vessels are speedily loaded with the boxes of fish, and thus they make their way to the nearest port. Time often means money to the fishing industry, and the first boat home may often get a better price for its merchandise than a late comer.

Needless to say, the social side of the trawler fisherman's life is a negligible quantity, but the monotony is occasionally broken by the visits of the men belonging to the vessels of the Royal National Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen, one of which is stationed with each of the four large fleets in the North Sea, as well as in other fishing grounds in various parts of the world. The skippers of the mission ships have usually some medical knowledge, and so these vessels serve as hospitals for injured men from the trawlers. On very rare occasions a service or concert will be held on the mission ship, but the work seldom permits of worship or relaxation.

Kings in Commerce

Like most really busy men, the German Emperor always seems able to find time for more work. As well as attending to the affairs of his kingdom, he conducts, in a very thorough manner, a porcelain factory of which he is the owner. The business is a prosperous one, and is run on lines laid down by the Kaiser. He designs many of the goods, and, moreover, sometimes even engages new workmen himself. Another Royal manufacturer of china is the Emperor of Austria-Hungary, who employs over a thousand skilled hands at his factory. The King of Saxony owns a similar business, though it is of a less extensive nature.

A Royal hotel-owner is the King of Wurtemberg, who owns two hotels that are said to add about $45,000 annually to his income; while the Prince of Lippe-Detmold carries on a business in butter and eggs, as well as owning a brick factory.

TEA IN ENGLAND

When This Beverage Was First Used it Was Very Expensive

The earliest record of tea being mentioned by an Englishman was probably that contained in a letter from Mr. Wickham, an agent of the East India Company, writing from Firando, in Japan, on June 27, 1615, to another officer of the company, resident at Macao, in the south of China, asking him for "a pot of the best sort of chaw." It was not until the middle of that century that the English began to use tea; they received their supplies from Java until 1686, when they were driven out by the Dutch, says the "Bulletin" of the Imperial Institute. At first the price in England ranged from $30 to $50 per pound. In the Mercurius Politicus of September, 1658, occurs an advertisement of the "China Drink called by the Chineans Teha, by other nations Tay, alias Tee," being sold in London. Thomas Garway, the first English tea-dealer, in 1659 or 1660, offered it at prices varying from $3.00 to $12.50 per pound. Not until 1677 is there a record of the East India Company having taken any steps for its importation.

Where They Live Forever

Not a single death occurred among the 2,000 villagers of Old Windsor, during a whole year. A local proverb is: "Come to Old Windsor and live forever."

THE VALUE OF THE BRITISH NAVY

The Cost of Building and Upkeep of Battleships is Something Colossal Nowadays

There are warships in the British Navy that cost over $10,000,000. Seventy years ago you could have built a fleet for the same money. All the battleships that Nelson had at Trafalgar did not cost together what is paid for one modern fighting-ship. And the upkeep is something colossal. On board a modern Dreadnought there are no fewer than three hundred and sixty-four auxiliary engines. Her dynamos are powerful enough to light a good-sized town. Roughly speaking, her upkeep for a year, including pay of crew, provisions, coal repairs, stores, and ammunition is $1,250,000.

A destroyer costs $90,000 a year; while even one little torpedo boat would tax a rich man's purse, for each means an outlay of about $26,000 a year.

As has already been pointed out, the mere construction of a vessel of the super-Dreadnought type means an expenditure of ten millions or more. What is it that costs this enormous osum? Well, the hull, with her fittings and equipment, runs into about five millions. Such a ship is protected by some five thousand tons of steel armor, which costs about $600 per ton. The boilers you may put at $1,750,000. Each barbette, with its two monstrous 13.5 guns and the complicated machinery, means an expenditure of at least $60,000. Even the small twelve-pounder guns cost $1,750 apiece.

Such a ship is provided with a number of motor and steam boats, which cost thousands of dollars, and with torpedoes at $5,000 apiece, fired from tubes which each mean an outlay of $15,000. Her magazines are filled with shells, of which the largest are valued at $850 apiece; while her bunkers are stored with best steam coal costing about $4.00 a ton. Her searchlights, of which she probably carries fourteen, and her electrical fittings entail a further expenditure of $250,000 to $300,000.

A warship's life is a very short one. Within less than twenty years she is hopelessly out of date. Indeed, modern invention moves so fast that even the fine King Edward class, which was built just before the first Dreadnought, are considered by experts to have comparatively small fighting value. If the use of oil fuel becomes universal even the Dreadnought herself may be considered useless within a few years. And an out-of-date warship is simply worth her value as scrap metal. She must be sold at a ruinous sacrifice.

A FAMOUS CHIMNEY

A Fine Piece of Architecture Was Built on a Mill

Halifax, Yorkshire, England, has a famous mill chimney built by a gentleman keenly interested in architecture. It was a Mr. Wainhouse who built this huge stone octagon chimney and provided it with a handsome stone top. A staircase twined round the shaft and inside the stone tower, and came out on a balcony at the top. Above the balcony a colonnade supported a massive domed top. The chimney was never used, for Mr. Wainhouse sold his dyeworks before it was completed. This Octagon Tower stands on the edge of the Calder Valley, and is a striking landmark for miles.

West riding folk called it "Wainhouse's Folly." They could not understand anyone spending money to make a mill chimney handsome. Mr. Wainhouse also spent a huge amount in adding to his cottage property handsome railings, good porches, and well-designed chimneys. One row of humble houses has a gallery, towers, and bridges worthy of a college. The Octagon Tower is considered by some judges to be the finest piece of architecture in the town.

Lifeboat Dwelling

A famous Cornish lifeboat, after years of service, has been converted into a dwelling, and is to let for $3 a week. This old lifeboat has done duty at many wrecks. It was launched when the ss. Mohegan went ashore on the Manacles with the loss of so many lives, and also at the stranding of the American liner Paris.

The Best Cough Syrup is Easily Made at Home
Costs Little and Acts Quickly. Money Refunded If It Fails.

This recipe makes 16 ounces of cough syrup, and saves you about $2.00 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It stops obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—in a hurry, and is splendid for sore lungs, asthma, croup, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Tastes good.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and the other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this recipe, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

Thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada now use this Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe. This plan has often been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled. Its low cost and quick results have made it immensely popular.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

A REAL ESTATE YARN

Ex-Mayor Waugh of Winnipeg told a real estate yarn in a way that was as fetching as the story itself. A real estate agent, selling California city lots in the mid-West, entered a town when it appeared to be deserted. Discovering that the town was virtually paying its respects to one of its departed citizens, the agent, seeing no chance of doing business, joined himself to the company of mourners in the cemetery chapel. He entered as the clergyman was asking anyone who would like to say a word in memory of the deceased, let him now come forward. No one accepting the invitation, despite a repetition of the request, the real estate salesman rose and respectfully said: "Mr. Minister, as no one seems anxious to say a word for the deceased, and as I didn't know him when he was alive, perhaps you will permit me to tell you something about some California lots that I have to sell."

BUSINESS IN 2,000 B.C.

The Babylonians and Their Neighbors Knew of "Short Cuts"

The deciphering of the old Babylonian records of clay have revealed some very interesting facts with reference to business life two thousand years before Christ. In many cases these records relate to trade transactions, to business disputes, incident to the ordinary, every-day doings of the merchants, and to their troubles as to the title to property. There are even data to show how the Babylonians and their neighbors conducted their accounting systems. Nearly four thousand years ago these people had so far progressed in "business" that it was actually found necessary to enact special laws to deal with those who were trying the "short cuts" to wealth. The young man with "prospects," like his prototypes of to-day, was wont to utilise those prospects in negotiation with the professional money-lender. The banker of Babylon deposited regularly and issued his brick "checks" and bill of exchange, and the law intervened, as it does to-day, to uphold the rights of property. Most careful accounts of revenue and expenditure were kept. These show in many cases that investments in loans and purchases of land, as well as other profitable dealings, were a regular part of the fiscal activities.

BUILDING MATERIALS

Valuable Resources Being Gradually Opened up in Western Canada

With the exception of British Columbia there is very little building stone produced in Western Canada. This is due to two causes. First the rocks which underlie the developed portions of the Prairie Provinces are of comparatively recent age, and are, consequently, soft in character and weather rapidly; second, there are very few rock exposures in the settled portions of these provinces, except in the Rocky Mountains and the foot hills. In British Columbia there are large potential resources of building stone. They have, however, been developed only in certain localities on the Pacific Coast, and have been confined to Cretaceous sandstone and certain volcanic rocks, situated on Vancouver Island and adjacent islands. Varieties of marble are also quarried on Texada Island.

A Sad Coincidence

A sad coincidence was connected with the death of Andrew Tripney, twenty-two, miner, Bankhock Rows, who was killed in Cannerton Pit. Tripney was just commencing work at the coal face when about a ton of coal came away on top of him. His fellow workers extricated him with all speed, but he was found to be dead, his skull being fractured. His father was killed in the same pit and in similar fashion a dozen years ago.

Crooked Billet

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reason to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms, and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs every home, because nobody can ma a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Bodies From Stag Canon Mine Are Buried Immediately.

DAWSON, N.M., Oct. 28.—By noon yesterday 132 of the victims of the Stag Canon mine No. 2 disaster had been buried. The major portion of the bodies now being recovered are in such condition that they cannot be shipped or laid out in the morgue for public funerals as was the case with the first two score. Health officers are using vigilance to see that the sanitation of the town is not impaired. Rescue men, who bring the bodies from the mine, are subjected to disinfectants after each trip. Bodies are taken to the cemetery directly from the temporary morgue at the mine, and if identification is possible members of the dead miners' families are not permitted to view them.

Danger from fire passed last night when air currents were directed into every room of the workings, and no smoulders were found.

Government mine experts will remain in Dawson for two or three weeks in an effort to determine positively the cause and the nature of the disaster.

The Red Cross, the Salvation Army and the Stag Canon Fuel Co. will begin their efforts at once to arrange the affairs of the dead miners' families.

Cured Eczema Like Magic

Suffered for Years—Tried All Kinds of Treatment—Surprised at Results From Dr. Chase's Ointment.

You can soon tell when people are enthusiastic about medical treatment by the language they use. After experimenting with all sorts of ointments in a vain effort to obtain relief and cure, the writer of this letter was astonished at the quick and satisfactory results obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

"It worked like magic," she writes. Indeed, it is surprising the healing that is often effected in a single night by this great ointment. The stinging and itching are relieved at once, and cure is only a matter of time and patient treatment.

Mrs. Clements, 13 Strange Street, Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have suffered from eczema for years, and after using all kinds of ointments, at last tried Dr. Chase's Ointment. It worked like magic and proved a God-send to me. I would advise anyone suffering from eczema to try one box and be convinced." 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THEY LOVE THEIR PAJAMAS.

Englishmen Said to Take a Delight in Wearing Them Publicly.

Writing from South Africa about the sights to be seen in that country, E. W. Howe in his monthly says:

"On the line between Bulawayo and Salisbury there are a good many towns, including one built around the best gold mine in Rhodesia. And how the people turned out to see the train come in! At one place we estimated that there must have been 500 around the station.

"Trains travel over the line only two or three times a week, and people seem to come from great distances in the country to see the trains go by. But between the stations there were millions of acres of land as wild as it was in the days of Adam.

"Early in the morning our English passengers walked about in pajamas when we stopped at stations. Englishmen love that sort of thing. At Victoria falls they visited the Rain forest in pajamas, and in Johannesburg I was told that on Sundays and holidays pajamas are worn around houses and yards until lunch time.

"Englishmen show their pajamas so much that I cordially hate that particular form of nightdress. Englishmen have the same passion for running around in pajamas that American boys have for running around in baseball suits."

SAVE YOUR HAIR! IF IT IS FALLING OR FULL OF DANDRUFF—25 CENT DANDERINE

Ladies! Men! Here's the Quickest, Surest Dandruff Cure Known

Thin, brittle, colourless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die — then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine to-night—now—anytime — will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store, or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, down hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

The further results of the Italian general elections reported yesterday confirm the Government victory.

Mrs. Blackadder, wife of James Blackadder of the West Front road, Cornwall, died in the 77th year of her age. She has been ailing for several months.

James Larkin, the leader of the striking Dublin transport workers, yesterday found guilty on charges of sedition, was sentenced to seven months' imprisonment.

Thomas Backus, aged 97 years, one of the oldest and best known residents of Chatham, died there yesterday. He was one of the pioneer farmers of the district.

Mrs. Joseph McGregor of Mull, Kent County, took her own life yesterday morning by swallowing a dose of carbolic acid. She had been despondent for some time.

Sex hygiene as a part of the regular curriculum of Chicago's high schools was inaugurated yesterday when six lectures on the subject were delivered in five institutions.

Mrs. J. L. Beden, of Rochester N.Y., visiting Montreal, found a pearl in an oyster at the Oxford Hotel, and refused $100 offered by the proprietor and $280 offered by a jeweler for it.

Deputy Eduardo Dato, former Minister of the Interior and Minister of Justice, yesterday accepted the office of Premier of Spain, in place of Count Romanones, who resigned Saturday.

Lieut. Charles C. Newton, injured in the fire in the Goodyear Rubber Store, Milwaukee, Sunday, died last night, raising the total list of death to eight. The other injured firemen are expected to recover.

A Thackeray Slip.

Thackeray asked Lowell to point out candidly any error of Queen Anne English to the novel "Henry Esmond" Lowell asked if people used at the time the phrase "different to."

"Hang it all!" cried Thackeray. "No of course they didn't."

PARISIAN SAGE

The Scalp Cleanser Sold in Canada on Money-Back Plan.

Tried them all and failed, thousands of people will say.

Try the real Parisian Sage and succeed as thousands have done.

In Paris Dr. Sangerbond discovered the dandruff microbe and the way to kill it.

In Paris women have most abundant, beautiful, lustrous and fascinating hair.

They know about hair and its diseases in Paris, far more than we do. They have institutions where the study of the hair is made a specialty.

Parisian Sage is the only certain destroyer of the dandruff microbe which is the cause of 97 p.c. of hair troubles.

Parisian Sage is such an extraordinary and quick acting rejuvenator that the Warne Drug Co., who are the agents in Peterborough, guarantee it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back. It makes women's hair lustrous and luxuriant and drives away foul odours in summer.

You can obtain a large 50-cent bottle of aPrisian Sage at the Warne Drug Co, and at leading druggists all over Canada. "The Girl with the Auburn Hair" is on every package.

ULSTER MUST STAY.

Control of Education and Police May Be Granted Says Grey.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Sir Edward Grey, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in a speech at Berwick last night explained that what the Government was willing to concede to satisfy Ulster was a sort of home rule within home rule, giving Ulster control of her own education, police and matters of that kind.

It would thus seem clear that in his recent announcement of policy with regard to home rule in Ulster Premier Asquith had no intention of offering even the temporary exclusion of Ulster from the operation of the home rule bill.

"Arson Squad" Busy Again.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Militant suffragettes yesterday morning set fire to and burned to the ground Till House, a fine residence at Bramshott, twelve miles from Aldershot, belonging to T. McKenna, a brother of the Home Secretary, Reginald McKenna. A quantity of suffrage literature and several kerosene cans were found lying on the ground together with the notification that the "Arson Squad" had set fire to the mansion as a protest against the forcible feeding of imprisoned suffragettes.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IS YOUR LAXATIVE

Best Liver and Bowel Cleanser and Stomach Regulator in the World —Work While You Sleep

Get a 10-cent box.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage organs and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your "insides" pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

Jupiter Cold and Dim.

Jupiter is 1,283 times larger than the earth, but the quantity of matter in this huge volume is only 316 times that in the earth; hence its density is low—in fact, only 41 per cent greater than that of water. Jupiter has been weighed with extreme precision, this because its mass can be measured as to distance and specific speeds of orbital revolution with the last degree of accuracy. But, then, it is cold out there, the distance of Jupiter being 5.2 times that of the earth from the sun the intensity of solar light and heat energy received by the good Jovian folk if there are any such creatures, being only one twenty-seventh that received here by humans. We would at once die in cold and dim twilight if taken out to Jupiter.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

Crocodiles as Policemen.

There has been instances in Papua which long sentence prisoners have had no desire to return to their home because they grew fat in jail. However, those cases are exceptional, and attempts to escape are not infrequent. Crocodiles were a great danger to the runaway, and there was a belief in a part of the Papuan gulf that the crocodiles were in league with the government.

A prisoner escaping from jail was once severely lacerated by one of these reptiles while crossing a river. The criminal crawled to the nearest village constable and gave himself up to justice. "No good me fight along government now; alligator he help government," was the complaint of the escaped.—London Cor. New York Sun

The First Balloons.

I suppose you heard of those strange lobes invented in Paris which rise into the air though encumbered with the weight of human animals. I wish we could procure one and travel to other among the clouds. At night we could illuminate our flying palace and hover like angry meteors above the habitations of our enemies, who perhaps have not yet been made acquainted with this wonderful invention. Like certain mischievous bird which Orid celebrates, we would dart down upon the graceful innocents and carry them off in spite of the screams of their mothers. Think how triumphantly we could sail through the calm, blue ether (100) feet above this dirty planet.—From a Letter of William Beckford (1783).

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—Wheat developed notable strength today in consequence of bullish foreign advices and a huge falling off in the domestic visible supply. The market closed firm at an advance of 1½c to 1⅝c net. Other leading staples, too, showed gains—corn ⅜c to 1¼c, oats ⅝c, and provisions 5c to 25c.

Liverpool wheat closed ⅜ to 1¼ higher; corn, ⅜ to ½ higher.

Paris closed unchanged to ¼ up; Berlin, ½ up; Budapest, 2¼ higher; Antwerp, ⅛ lower.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Oct. 27.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards yesterday were large—285 cars, comprising 6,000 cattle, 530 hogs, 2,559 sheep and lambs, 379 calves and 10 horses.

Exporters.

There were no cattle bought for export, but there were a few lots of export weight and quality sold at $7.60 to $7.75.

Butchers.

There was a scarcity of good to choice butchers' steers and heifers—not enough to supply the demand. Choice butchers sold at $7.25 to $7.50; choice butchers' heifers at $7 to $7.35; good steers, $6.75 to $7.25; medium, $6.25 to $6.75; common, $5.50 to $6; choice cows, $5.75 to $6.50; good cows, $5.25 to $5.50; medium cows, $4.50 to $5; common canners and cutters, $3 to $4.50; export bulls, $6.75 to $6.50; butcher bulls, $5 to $5.50; bologna bulls, $4 to $4.75.

Stockers and Feeders.

There was an excellent demand for stockers and feeders, as there were many buyers. Steers, 1000 to 1150 lbs., sold at $6.20 to $6.60; steers, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $6 to $6.25; stockers, 500 to 900 lbs., at $5.25 to $6; rough eastern stockers, $4.50 to $5.25.

Milkers and Springers.

Good milkers and forward springers are in demand. Late springers are not wanted. Prices for cows ranged from $50 to $94 each, the bulk going between $60 and $75.

Veal Calves.

The market for veal calves held steady, as follows: Choice calves sold from $9 to $10; good calves, $8 to $9; medium, $7 to $7.50; common, $6.50 to $6.50; rough eastern calves, $4.50 to $5.

Sheep and Lambs.

The market for sheep was steady; ewes sold at $4.25 to $5.25; culls and rams, $3.75 to $3.50; lambs were lower, selling at $7.25 to $7.50; bucks 75c per head less.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $8.90 to $9, and $8.65 f.o.b. cars, and $9.25 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Oct. 27.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market 3400 cattle, 3500 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 700 calves were offered for sale this morning.

Butchers' stock was stronger and prices advanced 15c to 25c per 100 pounds, this being attributed to the continued small supplies of good stock coming forward. Common stock was in good demand, and prices were higher. Common stockers sold at $5.50 to $5.75; common bulls at $4 to $4.60, and canning cows at $2.25 to $3.50 per 100 pounds. There was also a good demand from local packers for canning stock, and they secured quite a number at the above prices. Supplies of good to choice steers were none too plentiful. Really choice sold at from $7.40 to $7.50 and picked lots at $7.75, while car lots of good stock brought $6.65 to $6.85 and picked lots at $7 to $7.25 per 100 pounds.

There were no new developments in the market for small meats, prices for all lines being firmly maintained under a good demand and as supplies were fairly large an active trade was done. Western lambs sold at $6.75 to $7, and sheep at $4.25 to $4.50 per 100 pounds. A good trade continues to be done in grass fed calves for shipment to the United States, and the market in this respect is active with prices firm at 5¾c to 4½c, and local butchers are paying 6½c to 7½c for milk fed per pound.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.40 to $7.75; do., medium, $6 to $7; do., common, $5 to $5.50; canners, $3.25 to $4.50; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6 to $6.35; do., medium, $5 to $5.50; do., bulls, $5 to $6; feeding steers, $5.50 to $5.75; milkers, choice, each, $85 to $90; do., common and medium, each, $75 to $80; springers, $65 to $70; sheep, ewes, $4.25 to $4.50; bucks and culls, $3.75 to $4; lambs, $6.25 to $7; hogs, f.o.b., $9.50 to $10; calves, $8 to $10.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 27.—Cattle—Receipts, 7000; fairly active and steady to easier; prime steers, $8.50 to $8.75; shipping, $7.75 to $8.50; butchers, $7.00 to $8.25; cows, $2.25 to $6.50; bulls, $4 to $7; heifers, $5.50 to $7.50; stock heifers, $4.75 to $5.25; stockers and feeders, $5.75 to $7.30; fresh cows and springers, active and strong, $35 to $90.

Veals—Receipts, 1000; active and steady; calves, $4 to $13; Canada calves, $9.50 to $9.50.

MARTIAL LAW IS DECLARED

Eight Thousand Miners Are on Strike in Colorado Coal Field and the Troops Are Called Out

SALOONS ALL CLOSED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

DENVER, COL., Oct. 28. —Martial law was declared early to-day in the Southern Colorado coal fields where eight thousand miners are on strike. One thousand State troops, including cavalry and artillery, left here at six a.m. for the mines. One thousand others wil be sent from other points. All saloons will be closed. It is stated there is little possibility of the strike extending to the Pensylvania coal fields where most of the Ontario coal comes from.

Horses Collide With Street Car

Bad Mix-up at Corner of Charlotte and Aylmer Streets Yesterday Though Horses Escaped Injury

An outfit, the property of Mr. R. Gibbs, the local liveryman, very nearly came to grief, at the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer Streets, yesterday, at noon, in a street car collision.

The outfit, consisting of an open, two-seated vehicle and a team of fine-looking horses, was being driven south on Aylmer Street, in charge of one of the livery men. The Jackson Park street car was travelling at a good speed. Just as the livery outfit approached the corner a team passed down Aylmer street. The eyes of the livery man were watching the other team to avoid a collision with it, and the motorman of the street car was engaged in the same manner, consequently the driver did not see the approaching street car, nor did the motorman notice the livery outfit. While the first team crossed the track in time to avoid the street car, the livery horses were driven right on to the fender of the car. A smash ensued that could be heard a good distance in all directions. The horses and rig were carried some distance along the car track and the animals were badly entagled in the fenders. However, when the smoke had cleared away it was found that only the harness of the outfit had been very badly damaged, and the fender of the street car bent.

What Does Canada Deserve?

To the Editor of The Globe: Will you allow me to ask you a question? The Globe is usually strong enough and fair enough to discuss a question with candor. In your editorial of Friday you say in an article on the navy that the Liberal policy means that the Canadian navy shall be owned and controlled by the Parliament of Canada and ready at all times of peril to take part in the Empire's affairs. The difference between the Laurier policy and the Borden policy, in Parliament and out, has been and is, I am quite sure, simply the difference between a policy that pledges itself now beforehand to take part in the defence of the Empire and a policy which says we will not pledge ourselves beforehand and therefore may or may not take part in the defence of the Empire. Manifestly at those times when Canada is out of it, when she is not taking part in the defence of the Empire, she is no longer a part of the Empire. It is not only foolish but cowardly to pretend that we are part of it when it does not suit us. I am a Canadian of the Canadians, but I would renounce without compunction my allegiance to a party or country which has so low a sense of pride as to take advantage of Great Britain and the other dominions in times of our need whilst discreetly refraining from pledging ourselves to do the decent thing at other times. This is too materialistic. This is too much like the artful dodger.

Whether the policy adopted is that of Mr. Borden's or Sir Wilfrid Laurier's, let it be, at least, a policy that has got some manliness and pluck about it. In your news columns to-day we see that Britain's ally, France, is to undertake the defence of the Mediterranean. Where, may I ask, is Canada? She has picked out, through her Senate, the only policy that meant anything, leaving us to preach peace without honour to all the other nations of the world which, preparing for eventualities, will be ready to give us some day what we deserve if we don't mend our ways. Why does The Globe defend this non-committal policy? Why does it not take the manly stand it is accustomed to take in many other but less important matters? Are we to reject all history as a horrid nightmare—something that has not taken place? Are we to assume in the face of the most relentless facts that the lion and the lamb are ready to lie down together? Is it not better to keep our strength up to the proper standard, since I have yet to learn that either a man or a nation to be peaceful must be a physical degenerate?

HAS ENJOYED HIS TOUR OF THIS COUNTRY

Mr. Cyril Maude, English Actor-Manager, Says He Has Been Enthusiastically Received in Canada

TALKS OF HIS PLANS

"I have greatly enjoyed my tour of Canada, so far," remarked Mr. Cyril Maude, English actor-manager to an Examiner reporter to whom he kindly granted an interview in his dressing-room between the second and third acts of "The Second in Command" at the Grand last night.

"The audiences have been large and enthusiastic and I was splendidly received in Montreal and Toronto," he continued.

"Probably my best success so far was scored in a little play called 'Grumpy,' which I did in Montreal and which I will put in in New York.

"I open in the American metropolis next Monday night with 'The Second in Command.' You know it has been done in New York before by John Drew and an American company, but it is such a particularly English play that I fancy they did not play it exactly as we do. It has never been played before in Canada, probably because they hesitated to send an English play there played by an American company."

"Don't you think I have brought a fine company with me?" Mr. Maude inquired "You know some of them have been with me a long time. Mr. Hayward, for instance, for seventeen years."

The distinguished comedian had nice things to say for the Grand Opera House. "A pretty little theatre, this," he remarked, "and the dressing rooms are so spotlessly clean."

"It's a nice audience to play to, too. They seem to be liking it and that makes our work easier."

Mr. Maude and his daughter, Miss Margery Maude, were entertained at dinner last evening by Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Travers, while Mr. Maude was the guest of the Peterborough Club after the play.

YOUNG EVANGELIST TO SPEND NEXT 7 YEARS IN EQUADOR

Mr. Herbert W. Johnston is the Thirteenth Missionary Produced by Bethany Tabernacle---Will Work Among the Indo-Spaniards of South America---Has Many Friends in This City

Mr. Herbert W. Johnston, son of Mr. Alfred Johnston, 19 Dennistoun Avenue, of the Nugent Drug Company, is one of Peterborough's young men who has resolved his life into a definite purpose and is about to strengthen it in the fields of actual reality. He has spent years in preparing himself for the foreign missionary field, and on Wednesday afternoon, leaves for New York, sailing on November 8th for Equador, where he expects to spend the next seven years in evagelical work among the people beneath the equator.

A Collegiate Graduate.

Mr. Johnston was educated in the Public schools of this City and graduated from the Collegiate Institute in 1909. His next three years were spent in the Christian Missionary Alliance Seminary at Nyack, N.Y., on the Hudson and for over a year he has had charge of one of the Alliance branches. Thus he spent the last four years in preparing himself for the work which he is about to undertake among a people of one of Spain's foremost colonies. The Equadorians are a mixture of Spanish and Indian races and the language is almost pure Spanish. Hence, Mr. Johnston's first year, which he will spend in Monte Christo, will be largely devoted to the study of the language.

The Alliance has missions in Quinte, Guayaquid and Monte Christo, and at present there are five missionaries in the field.

His Farewell Address.

On Sunday evening Mr. Johnston gave a farewell address at Bethany Tabernacle, of which his father is one of the prominent members. He said he was not going away with any illusions as to the work before him; he expected nothing more than the prosaic humdrum drudgery of common life. He said he used to wonder what death was when he was a boy, but he had learned that it was only when we become dead that we really live. "All our blessings come when we put ourselves in the back-ground and let Christ do the work. We are going to be in the back-ground and yet we are right at the front too."

Moved to Tears.

At certain points in his address the young missionary was deeply moved, but he brushed the tears away, and laughingly said, "excuse me wiping my eyes, I have tears in them."

He spoke of the religion of the people in Equador, and said: "The Catholicism as shown in South America is a blasphemous libel on the religion of Jesus Christ."

Mr. Johnston, senior, spoke at the close of the service and told how his son was on the point of death when he was a week old and how he and his wife prayed that Herbert might be spared and they would bring him up with a view of becoming a missionary.

Bethany's Missionaries.

Bethany Tabernacle has borne a wealth of missionary fruit, Mr. Johnston being the thirteenth to go to the foreign field. Among hem was his sister, Miss Grace Johnston, who is located in Africa. The young missionary will be joined at New York by Mr. and Mrs. Felga, who are bound for Chili to undertake similar work. Mr. Johnston is quite a young man in his early twenties and should have a long period ahead of him. He has always shown a marked seriousness in his disposition, and while at the Collegiate he was a boy among boys, he manifested certain traits indicating an early realization of the task for which he was preparing.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Johnston have given the first two of their children for missionary work, surely an indication of the impressions resulting from their guidance. The many friends of the young missionary will follow with interest his success in the land of perpetual summer.

MR. HERBERT W. JOHNSTON.

Peterborough young man leaves for Equador to-morrow where he will spend the next seven years in Evangelistic work.

WILL CLAIM A REDUCTION IN ASSESSMENT

On the Grounds That Buildings Have Depreciated in Value in Proportion to Increase in Land Values

POPULATION FIGURES

One of the appellants who will appear before the Court of Revision on Friday next will claim a reduction in the assessment on property which he owns, on the grounds that the buildings have depreciated in value in proportion to the stated increase in land value. Land values, he asserts, have been inflated beyond their true value by real estate operators and he proposes to disclaim liability for the increased assessment. The property is located in the heart of the factory district, and since the advent of several new industries, has increased in value from year to year, according to the assessment returns.

Population Increase.

Peterborough's population figures for the past five years represent a pyramid of progress. They are as follows:

1909	17,907
1910	18,000
1911	20,300
1912	21,900
1913	22,500

The figures given above include the outlying districts which have, from a commercial and industrial standpoint, an equal figurative value.

Meetings To-night.

Central Charity Board . . 7.45 p.m.
Legal Committee . . . . . 8.00 p.m.
Power Committee . . . . . 8.30 p.m.

The Board of Works committee will meet to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

BATTLE AT COAL MINES

Special Wire to The Examiner.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 28.—A general battle between the coal strikers and mine guards has been raging since 6:30 a.m. at the Delagua, Hastings, Berwind and Tobas Company coal camps near Ludlow, Col. The men have been fighting in a blinding snowstorm. So far the governor has not been advised whether there have been any fatalities, though hundreds of shots have been exchanged. The militory ordered out this morning has not reached the scene.

HAVE SECURED LARGE CONTRACT

The Vermont Marble Company Will Supply Marble Fittings For Edmonton Hostelry

NO REDUCTION

The Vermont Marble Company have secured a large contract from Edmonton. The order calls for marble products sufficient to equip a large sized hotel which is being erected in the Capital City of Alberta. The draughting department of the local plant is already engaged in the preparation of the plans for the work, and within a few weeks the large hostelry in the western city will be fitted throughout with the product of Peterborough's newest industry.

The new tariff bill recently adopted by the United States Government did not provide for any reduction in the duty on marble. The duty on marble coming into Canada is thirty-five per cent. The unfinished product is listed at fifteen per cent. A saving of twenty per cent. is thereby effected by shipping the marble to Canada in the rough and finishing it on this side of the line.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

There is going to be one grand time at the Y.M.C.A. on Hallowe'en night. Every boy of the Boys' Department is invited to be on hand, and 90 per cent. of them are going to be there. The spacious game room is going to contain one of the merriest gatherings of boys that has come together in that good old institution, for some time, and it will be suitably decorated with all sorts of Hallowe'en designs for the occasion. Hallowe'en games, of the usual and unusual variety, will be supplemented by a series of slight of hand tricks, by Mr. Carte, a local magician of decided repute. Besides that a musical programme will be given. It is suggested that this is an excellent way to dodge the cops on Hallowe'en night. The boys who attend need have no fear of Police Court proceedings the next morning.

Business Boys' Class to-night at 6 o'clock. A good turnout is asked for.

The Ramblers and Leaders will clash in a red-hot game of basketball to-night at 8:50 o'clock.

Employed Boys' Leaders will be out in force to-morrow night at 7 o'clock.

Sympathy That's All

Maritime Provinces Will Not Get Much More Out of Interprovincial Conference

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Oct. 28.—The Maritime Provinces are not going to have their way in the matter of representation. There was no formal declaration against the Eastern Provinces. In fact there was a good deal of sympathy, but the three premiers of the Atlantic provinces were given to understand by the eleven other premiers that sympathy was all they could expect and that they had better not put forward the resolution. This morning the provinces got down to the real purpose of the meeting and discussed ways and means to get more money out of the Federal treasury. Various plans were discussed and it was finally agreed that the best basis upon which demand could be made was to an allowance of forty cents per head of population of or the administration of justice. A resolution to this effect will be framed. The conference may close to-day and is practically certain to end to-morrow.

EXPERTS TO BE CHOSEN

In Connection With the Expropriation of the Peterborough Light and Power Company's Plant By the City

MR. LARMONTH NAMED

The Power Committee of the City Council will meet this evening at 8.30 o'clock. The meeting will be preceded by a thirty minute session of the Legal Committee. Several matters of importance pertaining to the City's Hydro Electric scheme will be dealt with by the Power Committee. Some information concerning the progress of the expropriation proceedings may also be forthcoming.

Consulting Engineers.

It is understood that Mr. J. H. Larmonth has been asked to act for the City as Consulting Engineer in th proceedings instituted with a view of acquiring the electric light plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Company. Mr. Larmonth was formerly manager of the system which, in part, the City is desirous of expropriating. It is claimed that Mr. Larmonth's knowledge of local conditions will render his services to the City, in the capacity of Consulting Engineer, all the more valuable.

Mr. J. Ross of Montreal, who was employed by the City of Toronto in connection with the recent valuation of the Toronto Electric Light Company, may be named as arbirator for Peterborough. It is estimated that the fees of the experts, upon whom will devolve he duty of carrying the expropriation proceedings to a conclusion, will average one hundred dollars a day. The total cost each day of the proceedings, which may extend into a week, will be in the neighbourhood of five or six hundred dollars.

Will Petition Legislature

To Allow Electors Generally to Vote on Money By-laws

Special Wire to The Examiner.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Oct. 28. —At a meeting of the Board of Trade it was arranged that this city take the lead and a motion was passed to petition the Ontario Legislature to give electors generally, and not merely property owners, the power to vote on money by-laws on the ground that the taxes are paid in any event by the vast rent-paying population, whose rents are regulated by the taxes paid by the owners. The idea is to make the law general all over Ontario.

Horse Shied Man Is Killed

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 28. — James O'Keefe, aged forty, a Guelph township farmer, was killed while turning in the gate of his farm. The horse shied at a bridge. A load of tiles overturned and he was hurted under them.

"THE QUAKER GIRL"

"The Quaker Girl" will be the attraction at the Grand on Saturday, Nov 1, and will be presented by practically the original company, headed by Victor Morley, and including Harry Short, Bernice McCabe, Mlle. Corday, Murray Stephen, Dixie Girard, Phil. J. Moore, Connie Mack, Wm. Blaisdell, Adelaide Folger and Carol Parson. This announcement means that the most important attraction for the current year will be presented in Peterborough, for there are few, if any, who will not concede this honour to "The Quaker Girl," peerless success of three continents, with its marvellous record of two years in London, one year in Paris and one year in New York. A company of eighty-six players are used in its presentation, which includes a stunning chorus and ballet. Lionel Monckton's ultra-tuneful score has, by this time been hummed and whistled a great deal in this City and it needs no advance praise. The book is by James T. Tanner and the lyrics are by Adrian Ross and Percy Greenbank. The sale of seats opens next Thursday.

ANNUAL TEA.

On the afternoon of Friday, October 31st, the recreation room of the Armouries will be the centre of attraction for all the ladies of Peterborough. On that afternoon from four to six the Daughters of the Empire will be at home to the other ladies of the City, and hope to receive a large number of callers. Silver collection. 3d-99

ARE WE CIVILIZED?

The Brantford Expositor cites an instance of man's inhumanity to woman that could not be surpassed in those heathen lands where woman is considered to have no soul, and no claim upon human compassion or to decent treatment. A few days ago in Kent county, a domestic servant, employed by a farmer in Raleigh township, was turned adrift because she was in a delicate condition, and later found herself lodged in Chatham jail on a charge of vagrancy. After her release from jail she gave birth to a child in a woodshed atached to a schoolhouse, and with her naked child in her arms walked a quarter of a mile to a neighbouring farm house to find shelter. The jail was no place for a woman who was more sinned against than sinning, and who was only a vagrant because she could find no one to employ her. Yet even the jail was a haven of refuge to a woman in her condition, but its shelter was refused her. Yet Christ died, to save, and in life He showed His divine compassion to, a woman like the poor servant girl, but perhaps more persistent as a sinner—"neither do I condemn thee; go in peace"—not to jail as an outcast, but as a forgiven sinner. We have the air of our Christian community vibrant with the appeals of good men in behalf of foreign missions—to save women from the degradation and miseries she suffers in heathen lands, yet where should we find a heathen land that could show more unchristian and heathenish illtreatment of woman than that measured out to the poor sinning, and, perhaps feeble-minded, girl in Kent county? God save us from the woe He pronounces upon hypocrites!

BACK TO BUCOLIC DAYS.

We have sometimes in our simplicity, imagined that Peterborough was a city, with something like city ways, city ideals and city journalistic methods. But our evening contemporary, the Review, has brought us back to the good old bucolic, ox-cart days of village life, when farmers' wives "swapped" eggs for sugar, etc., at the general store, and farmers paid their subscription to newspapers in cordwood; and when newspapers, themselves, exchanged slang - whanging pleurilities and heavy editorials upon light matters. Then "everything went" and the old hand-press gave these journalistic thunderings to the public, which appreciated them; for, with little to talk about they took interest in trifles. Last evening the Review wasted a column of attention upon the Examiner, anent childish trivialities, largely based on false statements, whose only cheering, if unexpected, feature was the assurance of our contemporary* that it had "brains and ink." The ink is conceded, and in this regard public opinion lines up with the Review.

PROBLEMS OF THE FRUIT GROWER.

During a sitting of the Select Standing Committee of the House of Commons on Agriculture and Colonization a few months ago, it came out in evidence that many apple growers were last year unable to secure more than from 75c to $1.00 per barrel on the tree and in some districts hundreds of barrels of good fruit were allowed to fall to the ground and rot because no profitable market could be found for it. It came out also that in the western provinces consumers were required to pay from $5 to $5.50 per barrel for good fruit. Mr. J. A. Ruddick, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, in giving evidence on this question, pointed out that about $1.75 per barrel was received in the Lake Ontario and Lake Erie districts by the members of co-operative associations while independent growers received about $1 per barrel. The Commissioner in referring to the discrepancy between the first and final prices of apples estimated that the unavoidable expenses amounted to about $2.23 per barrel, made up as follows: barrel, 45c.; picking, 17c.; management expenses of commission to a local buyer, 10c.; freight to Winnipeg, 80c.; broker's commission, 12c., and retailer's profit 50c per barrel.

The question of marketing was but one of many dealt with by the special committee, who had as witnesses besides the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, Messrs. Daniel Johnson, Forest, Ont., S. B. Chute, Berwick, N.S., W. S. Foggo, Vernon, B. C., and James Hardwell Ottawa.

As evidence of the value to the grower of co-operation Mr. Johnson instanced the case of a woman who was offered, by a local buyer, $125 for her crop, for which she received through a co-operative association, $1,035.

Mr. Chute, who represented 1,500 farmers, as manager of the United Fruit Companies of Nova Scotia, explained that through his organization 5000 tons of fertilizer had been bought from the manufacturers for the members who had benefited to the extent of about $15,000 on purchases of fertilizers, spraying machines and materials, farm implements, seeds and other requirements.

Equally interesting evidence was given by the other witnesses, all of which appears in a pamphlet of 116 pages that has been printed for public distribution by the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

OUR MEMBER'S IDEA OF WHAT CANADA DESERVES

An Answer to a Question of the Kind Solomon Once Had in Mind

A Conservative member of Parliament, in another column, on page seven, serves notice that some day Canada will get "what we deserve if we don't mend our ways" in the matter of naval defence policy. As a kind of ultimatum the letter of the member for West Peterborough is worth reading. Mr. Burnham's argument and appeal represent in cold type what his Parliamentary chiefs and associates are talking in fermented language on the platform. He represents Canada, with her Canadian naval service resolution passed unanimously by the House of Commons in 1909, and with her Canadian Naval Service Act based on that resolution and unrepealed, as a nation left "to preach peace" to the other nations. He asserts that those other nations "will be ready to give us some day what we deserve if we don't mend our ways." And then he asks, "Why does the Globe defend this non-committal policy?" Let the answer be, as he desires, "with candour."

The Globe stands for a Canadian fleet to serve on the North Atlantic and on the North Pacific because:

(1) Such a policy is in spirit and purpose genuinely and frankly Canadian. It has, to quote Mr. Burnham's own words, "some manliness and pluck about it." That "manliness pluck" are of the Canadian sort, not denationalized, servile, unreliant. Based on Halifax on the east and on Esquimault on the west, such a fleet would do for Canada's shores what the Australian fleet has already undertaken to do for Australian interests in the South Pacific.

(2) Such a policy is true to the letter and spirit of the only resolution approving "the speedy construction of a Canadian naval service" ever prepared by the leaders of both political parties and passed unanimously by the Canadian House of Commons, the Canadian Naval Service Act, based on that joint resolution, and passed in 1910, is law in Canada to-day. Under its authority the Government may ask Parliament for any necessary naval appropriations, and may order that fleet, when constructed, for service in defence not only of the shores and interests of Canada, but in defence of British shores and interests anywhere. To all that programme both parties in Parliament were committed by the unanimous resolution of 1909. And to all that Canada was committed fully and formally by the Naval Service Act of 1910. That thing has never been undone.

(3) That Canadian policy made Canada responsible for the construction, maintenance, and administration of the Canadian fleet, as the Militia Act made Canada responsible for the embodiment, maintenance, and administration of the Canadian Militia. Both alike are for the defence of Canadiani nterests. Both are under Canadian authority, for the defence of the Empire. But most unquestionably both are Canadian in the taxation that sustains them, in the men who serve in them, and in the final authoritative word that orders them out for service. To call that policy "cowardly," "too materialistic," "unmanly," "without honour," "non-committal," "degenerate," is not only to insult Australia in her unswerving fidelity to the deliberately accepted poli of both Dominions, but is also an offence against Canada's aspiration and ideal as a free nation within the British Empire.

(4) That Canadian policy, to which Mr. Borden and his followers deliberately pledged themselves, and to which the British Admiralty agreed and still agrees, is sanest and safest alike for Imperial defence and for maintaining the integrity of the Empire. The policy of a centralized fleet was refused by the Imperial Conference: the policy of local fleets was endorsed. Compulsion lost to Britain her colonies in the eighteenth century: free local self-government saved to Britain, despite the doubts and fears of both Beaconsfield and Gladstone, the colonies in the nineteenth century. The hope of Imperial unity and power is in the growing national self-reliance of all the nations within the Empire. A Canadian fleet on the North Pacific, maintained and manned by Canadians, is as truly Imperial as any Dreadnought "contributed" to the British Navy in the English Channel or the North Sea.

(5) The Canadian policy of attending first to Canadian affairs, guarding the peace with Canada's borders by a Canadian Militia, and providing any needed protection of Canada's shores by a Canadian fleet, will command for Canada from other nations "what we deserve"—respect, immunity from attack, a place and part in the higher civilization of the world. The "horrid nightmare" of the war policy is passing, hastened to its inevitable doom by every day's hideousness and irreparable waste in the Near East, by the awakening financial and social alarm of Germany, and by Britain's growing sense of the intolerable burden of armed peace. There, in the staggering war nations, is Mr. Burnham's "physical degeneracy." With no war debt, no war page, no war mania, Canada may show the nations the more excellent way. That done, Canadians will welcome what Canada deserves. — The Globe.

Postponement Of Offical Plans

Owing to lateness of season I have decided to delay surveyors plans until Spring. I have however made careful measurements and a fairly correct sketch showing location and sizes of lots, streets, lanes etc. From this intending purchasers may select at once, and this should be done without delay by a large number of people who want to save a little of what they earn, who may prefer having a home of their own with a nice garden in Springs, or who may desire a special garden block to make money for them while they sleep. Low prices, easy terms, assistance to build. Every lot will save and make money by increasing values as city grows. Call for particulars.

Large Number Of New Residences Going Up On Western Side Of City

Signs of building activity on the western fringe of the City are evident from Smith to Lansdowne streets. Between Charlotte and King on the two streets just east of the boundary there is quite a number of new houses that from an architectural standpoint fit in splendidly with the other homes in that section.

Down in Byersville, Mr. Saunders is building a store out on the street line at the corner of Brown and Monaghan Road. It is stated that at one time there was an agreement among the residents on Brown street that their buildings would have a uniform frontage. This may or may not be true, but some of the residents of the street have expressed their dissatisfaction that Mr. Saunders found it necessary to build so close to the street line. He has conducted a store on Brown street for some time at a location part of the way down the street, but is now preparing to occupy a new store on the corner.

Mr. A. Gibbs is building three very large houses on the south side of Chamberlain street extended. On Albert and Chamberlain streets groups of houses are under erection and all told there is considerable activity shown.

Several of the new houses in the Charlotte street section are of splendid design and combine features that are of the most modern. Many of the houses in the district referred to have a similarity that possesses no tone, and the unique features in design are all the more outstanding. Several new houses are a decided acquisition to the district.

ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

Nine-tenths of All Stomach Trouble Said to Be Due to Acidity.

A Physician's Advice on Cause and Cure.

A famous physician whose successful researches into the cause and cure of stomach and intestinal diseases have earned for him an international reputation, said in the course of a recent lecture that nearly all intestinal troubles, as well as many diseases of the vital organs, were directly traceable to a deranged condition of the stomach which in turn was due nine times out of ten to excessive acidity, commonly termed sour stomach or heartburn, which not only irritated and inflamed the delicate lining of the stomach, but also set up gastritis and stomach ulcers. It is interesting to note that he condemns the use of patent medicines as well as of medical treatment for the stomach, stating that he and his colleagues have secured remarkable results by the use of ordinary, bicarated magnesia, which, by neutralizing the acidity of the food, removes the source of the trouble. He contends that it is as foolish to treat the stomach itself as it would be for a man who stepped on a tack to rub liniment on the foot without first removing the tack. Remove the tack and the foot will heal itself—neutralize the acid and stomach troubles will disappear. Irritating medicines and medical treatments are useless as long as the contents of the stomach remain acid; remove the acidity, and there will be no need for medicine—the inflamed lining of the stomach will then heal itself. Sufferers from acidity, sour stomach or heartburn should get a small bottle of bisurated magnesia from their druggist, and take a teaspoonful in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after meals, repeating in fifteen minutes, if necessary, this being the dose which the doctor has found most efficacious in all cases.

Huerta Is Still At Head Of Government

Examiner Special:

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 27.—It is expected that despite the quietness of the vote the congressional representatives will declare themselves elected, organize their inaugural meeting and formally declare that the Presidential election is null and void. According to the constitution this will give Huerta an opportunity to have himself "requested" to act as President till he calls for another presidential election, which he can put off as long as he likes. It is admitted on all sides that the new Congress is a "Huerta Congress," so he is confirmed in his position as dictator of Mexico.

RAILWAY NOTES

Within a few months Prince Rupert, B.C., the Pacific Coast terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, will have its first permanent hotel building. This will be "The Premier," now well advanced in construction, and which is being completed as quickly as possible. The building is the first modern fire-proof, brick, steel and concrete hotel ever erected north of Vancouver, in either Canadian or American territory. The building has a frontage of 50 feet on Second Avenue, and 100 feet on Sixth Street, and overlooks the Grand Trunk Pacific reserve which is to be laid out in a park. The hotel is five stories high and contains eighty bedrooms with hot and cold running water in every room, the majority of the rooms being furnished with private baths. The cost of the building is $100,000 and before the spring of 1914 the hotel will be in operation and open for the reception of guests.

REVELATIONS OF TUBERCULOSIS CONFERENCE

BERLIN, Oct. 24.—In the course of the discussion at the Tuberculosis Congress to-day statistics were cited showing that a fifth of the deaths among the policy-holders of private insurance companies were due to tuberculosis after the insured person had paid an average of only four years' premiums, while a large percentage of insured persons following occupations such as that of tailor, weaver, stonemason and postman die from consumption.

Plea for Co-operation.

Privy Councillor Paunhitz closed the discussion with an appeal for co-operation between insurance companies, international organizations and Governmental organizations for the purpose of fighting tuberculosis.

A discussion followed on the subject of vocational schools. Dr. Franz of Berlin urged that such schools should be attached to all sanitaria for children.

Dr. Leon Bernard of Paris reported on a new method of diagnosing tuberculosis by direct examination of the blood and an injection into the blood which excluded all possibilities of error.

Dr. Von Glasenapp of Arolsen, Germany, advocated the compulsory notification of tuberculosis.

Mortality in Children.

Dr. Behla of Berlin, member of the Board of Health of Prussia, reporting on the mortality from tuberculosis and scrofula in infancy in Prussia, declared that while the general mortality from tuberculosis had decreased fifty per cent. since 1876, this had affected principally persons above the age of fifteen, that is, those well along toward maturity, but that the decrease in the age classes below fifteen years had been inconsiderable. The mortality in child tuberculosis had remained almost the same.

Several other papers calling for more extensive propaganda in the fight against consumption were received with great interest.

Stars For The Week

Mars Is Now Distant From Earth Less Than Ninety Million Miles

Yesterday the moon and the planet Venus were within three degrees of each other; at the same time the moon was at her nearest point to the earth in her orbit during the month.

New moon will occur to-morrow (Wednesday).

The planet Neptune, which for some time has appeared to be moving eastwardly among the stars, will appear stationary on Friday and remain so for about a month, when it will appear to begin drifting towards the west as the earth catches up to it and passes it.

By the end of the week Mercury will be 23 degrees east of the sun, but as it will be about the same distance south, it cannot be readily seen from here.

Jupiter is the only planet visible in the early evening sky to the south-west near the horizon.

About ten o'clock the planet Mars may be seen rising in the north-east as a steady bright red point of light. Mars is now distant from us less than 90 million miles, and is becoming noticeably brighter as he approaches.

The ringed planet Saturn appears about two hours ahead of Mars, shining as a steady white point of light.

Venus rises in the north-east shortly after three o'clock in the morning, appearing at this time in the telescope as a little quarter moon.

ANDROMEDA.

Immediately south of the constellation Cassiopeia, which appears as an inverted "W," and north-east of the great square of Pegasus, is the constellation Andromeda, of classical lore. Greek legends give this constellation rather a fanciful origin. References to her are found in some of the fragmentary poems of Sappho, of the 7th century B.C., that have come down to us. Euripides and Sophocles both wrote dramas about her, but there is ground for believing that the constellation was known as early as 6,000 B.C. Professor Sayce, the great authority on matters of antiquity, informs us that Andromeda appeared in the great Babylonian epic of creation, in connection with the story of Bel and the Dragon.

Milton, in "Paradise Lost," refers to her principal star as:

"The fleecy star that bears
Andromeda far off Atlantic seas
Beyond the horizon."

Charles Kingsley's "Andromeda" is also descriptive of this constellation. The chief astronomical feature of the constellation is the remarkable nebula known as "The Great Nebula in Andromeda," appearing in the telescope as a star surrounded by an immense cloud and visible to the unaided eye as a faint star in a dense fog. Its distance from us has been estimated to be 30 light years and its diameter several thousand times greater than our solar system.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

"Tory Toronto" Said Sir Wilfrid

Wet, Dreary Morning Greeted the Liberal Leader

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Oct. 28.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Liberal leader, spent three-quarters of an hour here early this morning on his way to South Bruce, where he will speak at a by-election meeting to-night and return to Ottawa to-morrow. It was a wet dreary morning as Sir Wilfrid stepped off the train for a few minutes. "Tory Toronto again," hes aid with a smile. The Liberal chieftain was in good form, exceptionally well and looked with pleasure to the Bruce meeting.

Two Injured In Collision

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 28.—A runaway team collided with an automobile containing William J. Tupper, son of Charles Tupper, D. E. Sprague, W. J. Boyd, and Dr. R. H. Simpson yesterday afternoon on Market street east. Tupper and Dr. Simpson were badly hurt, the machine was shattered and the other occupants had a narrow escape from serious injury. The horses jumped into the car among the occupants, and the tongue of the waggon crashed through the tonneau.

Dead-lock At Ottawa

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Oct. 28.—Members of the Ottawa Separate School Board maintain their sand pat attitude in connection with the enforcement of Clause 17—while the Ontario ministers at the Capital continue their policy of silence in connection with the matter. Inspector Summerby remains inactive at the Grand Union where he is registered, and waits for something to turn up. Napoleon Champagne, M.P.P. for East Ottawa, is doing his best to keep out of the controversy, but is manifestly worried about the situation. The matter is at a standstill and everybody is waiting for some new move from the provincial authorities.

ANOTHER SPLENDID HUMAN DOCUMENT

By RUTH CAMERON

Do you dread to grow old?

Do you think of all the years after sixty-five or seventy as a sort of stupid epilogue to the active drama of life

If you do, a letter friend of mine has an illuminating message for you. Please read it.

"I have read with interest," she writes, "your article in a pervious paper entitled 'Why grow old?,' and wish that I could have a heart to heart talk with you, and could meet your friend of 72. I have a fellow feeling in my bosom for all such as she who keep a cheerful outlook upon life. I am nearly 74 years young, and feel as ready now to attack any problem of life as I did 25 years ago. It seems to me that my brain is more alert every day. I enjoy perfect health, and an omnivorous reader, very catholic in my taste, and ready and try to digest everything from psychology to beans.

"I take a 5 or 6 mile walk every morning when the weather permits, rising at 4 o'clock in the summer to do so. I have been married 3 times, and cannot yet say that marriage is a failure. Have raised 6 children, 3 grandchildren and am now renewing my youth while helping to care for a great grandson who is a delight to me.

"I am now studying Latin, am perfect in German and spoke enough French to understand when it was spoken. I taught both vocal and instrumental music for 41 years and think I am entitled to a front seat along with all other teachers 'up yonder.' My life has been crowded with trouble, having had two daughters killed before my eyes, one accidentally, the other—well, I can't write of it

"I have taken up the study of birds and trees. Unfortunately I am very deaf, which deprives me of a great deal of pleasure, the greatest being my inability to listen to good lectures. But I do not complain. I've had my 'fling.' Have heard nearly every singer of note up to 10 years ago, and enjoyed listening to the best actors. I've graduated in photography, have my diploma and am now writing moving picture plays, so as to be independent.

"In looking this over it may sound rather egotistical. That was not my object in writing. I wanted to know that there are other so-called "old ladies" who are young at 70. As Nellie Thaxter sings, 'I stand in the sunshine sweet, and cherish every day!' I love and am loved, what more can I ask? Yours for a long life and a useful happy one."

Through Central British Columbia

The first white woman to go over the Grand Trunk Pacific route from Edmonton, Alta, to Prince Rupert, B.C., is Miss Ellison, the daughter of the Honourable Prince Ellison, Minister of Finance and Agriculture in the British Columbia Government. Mr. Ellison and his son and daughter made the journey through to the coast over the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway to end of steel near Prince George, B.C., thence across country to the end of steel at Morricetown, B.C., 205 miles east of Prince Rupert, taking the train there and proceeding to the coast by rail.

In an interview Mr. Ellison stated that he had had the time of his life. The route passed through a magnificent country and the railway itself was splendidly built. The scenery was superb. Right through the mountains of the Yellowhead Pass route it was second to none on the Continent. Miss Ellison was especially in raptures with it.

Mr. Ellison is particularly convinced that when the route of the Grand Trunk Pacific is known it will, for the scenic effects alone, attract many thousands from the United States and Europe, while settlers will come in large numbers when the fertility of the soil of Central British Columbia is appreciated.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE COSTS NO MORE THAN "SOMETHING JUST AS GOOD"

Why Take Chances

For a woman to adorn her head with false braids, puffs and rats, or a man to wear a toupee, is like buying an off-brand hair preparation instead of Newbro's Herpicide. The "false hair" and the "off brand" are both substitutes for the real thing. The original is always conceded to be better than any imitation or substitute. "Something just as good" is a heresy of the rankest kind.

Newbro's Herpicide is the remedy and does as promised. Years of success and thousands of satisfied users have made it standard. Herpicide destroys dandruff, keeps the scalp clean and stops falling hair. Its proper use before baldness appears makes false hair and wigs unnecessary.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Applications may be obtained at good barber shops and hair dressing parlours.

Send 10c in postage for sample and book on "The Care of the Hair," to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit Mich.

414th BARGAIN ANNEX EVENT — The GRESSMAN Emerary Limited — WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 29th

IN THESE "MILL ENDS" OF DRESS GOODS THERE IS GREAT SAVING AT $1.25 AN END

To buy good things cheap is the motto of economy that hangs in every home. And to produce good things cheaply is the aim of every manufacturer in Canada. But there are ways, as everyone knows, by which it is possible to buy good things cheaper than usual; and one of these ways, in buying Dress Goods, is to buy "Mill Ends." In the first place, these Ends are sold cheaply at the mill, yet they are of sound quality, being pieces from the finished bolts of regular cloths. Those for sale on Wednesday comprise heavy wool Reversible Coatings, Tweed and Worsted Suitings and plain and fancy Dress Fabrics. The lighter weight goods vary in lengths from 3½ to 4 yards, while there are some splendid Coatings and Suitings that are 1¼ to 2 yards long. Knowing, as we do, the value of these goods when bought by the yard, we do not hesitate to say that $1.25 seldom buys such sterling worth; for they would cost anything from $2.50 to $4.00 in the ordinary way. Thus we would point out to you the advantage of buying Mill Ends in the Annex.

THEY ARE NOW BEING SHOWN IN THE WINDOW

We would remind you that everything in the way of Wall Paper or House Furnishings can be secured on the 3rd Floor.

Victim Of Bichloride Of Mercury Held Party For Family With Death Near

Another Case of Taking This Poison by Mistake and Its Toying With Millionaire Victim, Who Vainly Believed His Will Would Stave Off Death

A PATHETIC STORY

About ten days ago Isaac Levy, a millionaire clothing manufacturer of New York City, took by mistake several bichloride of mercury pills. Yesterday he died, but his experience during those days, as reported in a New York paper, form an intensely interesting story of a man doomed to certain death and of his efforts to defeat the grim spectre that was counting out the sands in his hour-glass of life. The account is as follows:

Held Party With Family.

With death only a few hours away at best, Isaac Levy, the wealthy clothing manufacturer of Brooklyn, who on last Sunday accidentally took thirty grains of bichloride of mercury, held a tea party yesterday and acted as host to his grief-stricken wife and eleven children.

"Mr. Levy is alive at this minute simply because of his indomitable will and refusal to surrender," said his physician, Dr. Jacob Sarnoff.

"But even that splendid will power must succumb shortly to the dreadful poison. Already it has destroyed his kidneys and vital organs, and while he feels no pain the functions of his body refuse to respond. Death is very near."

So grave was Mr. Levy's condition yesterday, although he was unmindful of it, Dr. Sarnoff summoned three specialists for consultation. The question of operating and removing the kidneys was discussed and abandoned. The verdict was that death must come speedily.

Refuses to Think of Death.

To a reporter Dr. Sarnoff said: 'We have sweated him unmercifully all day and kept his organs flushed with oil. With every drop of perspiration some poison has worked out through the pores. While there is life there is some hope, but life is ebbing fast.

"Doctors cannot cope with or offer a remedy more powerful than that man's own determination to win this fight. I have not discussed death with him nor has he allowed even the thought of it to come into his mind."

While the doctors were holding their consultation in an adjoining room, Mr. Levy was the centre of gaiety. At his express orders favourite fruits were prepared, and summoning his grief-stricken family, he prepared a feast and discussed topics of the day. Several times he rose from his cot and walked to the window, where he gazed out on the dreary weather. On one occasion he exclaimed: "It is cold and wet out-of-doors, but it is heaven inside with my loved ones."

The two nurses made little effort to keep Mr. Levy in bed, although they urged him to spare himself and rest as much as possible.

The injunction annoyed him, and he declared he felt equal to do anything.

Sympathetic neighbours and hundreds of strangers stood silently in the rain waiting for bulletins of Mr. Levy's condition. Once, as he appeared at the window, they cheered him.

When some of the hundreds of telegrams and letters of sympathy were shown him he smiled and said:

"Why do they think there is no chance? Why is every one so kind and so thoughtful of me?"

At another time he said:

"All of us face a supreme fight at some time or other. Nothing counts but success. And a man can succeed always."

It was this belief in his ability to outwit the grave-faced doctors that was responsible for his still being alive after five days' fight.

Toward night Mr. Levy seemed to be sinking into a coma, but he roused himself again and again and refused to lie flat in bed. His wife, who has not slept since she discovered the mistake of her husband, still sat at his bedside, smiling and encouraging him, while his children read aloud to him.

THE SECOND IN COMMAND.

Peterborough had an opportunity last night of seeing Mr. Cyril Maude, the distinguished English actor-manager, who is turing Canada and the United States under the management of Liebler and Company. The famous comedian appeared at the Grand last evening in one of the best-known offerings in his repertoire, "The Second in Command," a play with distinct military atmosphere that shows Mr. Maude at his best. As Major Bingham, "Kit" to all the mess, Mr. Maude's work irresistibly effective, as delightful a piece of acting as Peterborough theatre-goers have seen. It was a part that in less skillful hands might have developed into a farcical interpretation, but played as it was by Mr. Maude was a role full of human interest, an altogether lovable part. Mr. Maude is assisted by his own English company of which his daughter, Miss Margery, is the charming leading lady. Her work as Muriel Winters was artistic and clever. Montague Love, as Col. Anstruthers, was particularly well cast and the balance of the Company was worthy of the principals. There were many curtain calls at the end of each act.

BAMBOOS AS WATER PITCHERS.

In the Hawaiian Islands the natives carry their supply of water about with them in long bamboo tubes, the joints of which have been knocked out. Girls may be seen making their way to nearby springs with the family "water jug." They patiently fill the long hollow in the bamboo with water, blocking up the end with a wooden plug. This is then carried to the hut and lasts the family for several days, keeping cool and sweet in this novel receptacle. The larger bamboo trunks are used in the same way as receptacles for storing various household commodities.

BREAKS A BAD COLD IN A JIFFY! TRY IT

"Pape's Cold Compound" ends cold and grippe in a few hours—Don't stay stuffed-up!

You can end grippe and break up a severe cold either in head, chest, body or limbs, by taking a dose of "Pape's Cold Compound" every two hours until three doses are taken.

It promptly opens clogged-up nostrils and air passages in the head, stops nasty discharge or nose running, relieves sick headache, dullness, feverishness, sore throat sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffing! Ease your throbbing head—nothing else in the world gives such prompt relief as "Pape's Cold Compound," which costs only 25 cents at any drug store. It acts without assistance, tastes nice, and causes no inconvenience. Be sure you get the genuine.

FINE WATCH REPAIRING

Cheap watch repairing may appeal to some, but generally speaking experience proves work done cheaply is generally done poorly, and in the end is the final ruin of a good watch. We have first-class workmen, and do only high-class work. No other place can do any better. Our charges are no higher than others, for good work. If you have a good watch you will find it economical to have us do your repairing.

TURNBULL'S

Harvest Thanksgiving Services

The Harvest Thanksgiving services were continued in the Park Street Baptist Church last night, when the church was almost filled by those anxious to receive the inspiring messages of the speakers of the evening.

Before the addresses and programme in the church, a very delicious congregational supper was served in the basement. This had been carefully prepared, was excellently served and was greatly relished by the large number who partook of it.

For the occasion the pulpit and platform of the church were appropriately decorated with palms and flowers.

The Rev. E. A. Connors, pastor of the church, acted as chairman. A splendid programme was successfully given, and short addresses were given by the Rev. Mr. McLean, of the Gilmour Memorial Church; the Rev. Mr. Butler, and the Rev. Mr. Gregory, of Lakefield.

Miss Kathleen Moore rendered a solo in splendid voice, which was warmly received.

Mr. J. John gave an exceedingly fine pathetic reading, followed by a humourous encore. Mr. Jones gave a tenor solo that greatly pleased the audience, and Mr. Pratt, a bass solo, in his usual style

The Rev. Mr. McLean spoke on the spirit of thankfulness. He exhorted those present to think of the many blessings God had bestowed upon them. They should thank Him for the comforts of home, for their physical fitness. But their gratitude should not be passive. They were called upon to remember that there was a duty before every one of them—that each had a part to play in the great harvest time. There was a call for the ones who would dare tribulations, and forego some of the pleasures of this life to serve the Lord. All around were people groping along in thed ark, pursuing false doctrines—without God or Christ. It was the duty of the church to harvest them in.

The Rev. Mr. Butler took for the subject of his brief address "Happiness." Happiness, he said, was the reward for service, and to be found only in the practice of holiness. The man whose will was one with the will of God, and whose love and hate reflected the love and hate of God—he alone could be truly happy.

"Do something for somebody," was the motto that helped one toward happiness. Here Mr. Butler advised the members of the congregation to be cordial to strangers, which was one way of improving their opportunities. "Indulge the forgiving spirit." There were times when each one sought forgiveness, and how could they hope to be forgiven if they did not themselves forgive. The last motto he advocated was "Accept Christ as your Saviour."

The Rev. Mr. Gregory in a short address suggested the use of the following four words in connection with the practice of Christianity. "Admit, Submit. Commit, and Transmit."

Mr. Gregory's was the final address and the singing of "God Save the King," brought a very helpful and enjoyable occasion to a close.

Social At All Saints' Church

A congregational social will be held in the All Saints' Parish Hall at 8 o'clock this evening. All members of the congregation are cordially invited to attend.

$100,000 FIRE IN WINNIPEG

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 28.—One hundred thousand dollars worth of malt and barley intended for Ontario brewers was destroyed this morning in a fire at the Canada Milling Companies premises.

Would Not Transfer The License

The Board of License Commissioners for West Peterborough met last night to consider the request of Mr. J. C. Sullivan that his shop license should be transferred from his present premises on Hunter Street, East City, to 184 Hunter Street.

A deputation from the City Temperance and Moral Reform League was present and objected to the proposed change.

The License Commissioners declined to accede to Mr. Sullivan's request and he will have to remain in East City.

OPENING NEW POOL ROOM AT THE MARKET

It was learned to-day that Mr. Alex. Gordon has disposed of the lease of his butcher shop to Mr. W. J. Spence, who will open up a pool and billiard room. The equipment will be of the best and will be conducted in a manner that will appeal to all lovers of the cue. Mr. Gordon is retiring from the retail butcher business.

Hunters Leave For The North

Peterborough Will Supply a Large Contingent of Deer-Hunters This Season

The call of the wild is beginning to manifest itself among the local deer-hunters, the result of which will be patent to the northern deer in the course of a few days. A number of licenses have already been taken out at two and five dollars, respectively. The former entitles the owner to shoot the agile deer and the latter concedes the right to pot the lumbering moose. As yet there are no applications from non-residents of Canada. Such a license would cost $50.

The season does not open until Saturday next and the dealers state that the greater demand comes during the last few days. Another thing makes it impossible to know locally just how many licenses are issued, seeing that the Department of Fish and Game have recently adopted the system of allowing guides and northern settlers to issue these certificates and make their small profit of twenty five or fifty cents each. Many hunters make it a practice to allow their guides to get this little perquisite.

Local hardware dealers report fairly large sales of hunters' supplies, which include ammunition and camping outfits. Several local parties have signified their intention of leaving for the north country on Thursday, in order to be on the ground when the season opens three days later. The season will last for fifteen days, commencing Saturday.

It is expected that there will be a large contingent of hunters in the woods before the end of next week including the Jack's Lake, Ketchecum Lake, Eagle Lake and Shawanage parties.

SERIES OF CONCERTS BY LOCAL ARTISTS BEGUN IN LAKEFIELD

Three of Peterborough's musicians opened in Lakefield last night a series of concerts that will be given throughout Ontario during the coming winter. Miss Dorothy Allan, soprano; Mr. John Allan, pianist and accompanist, and Mr. Asa Huycke, baritone, composed the party. They were accorded a flattering reception and responded with a most enjoyable programme. The town hall was well filled by a large number of Lakefield's music lovers. The programme was as follows, encores being demanded for most of the numbers:

Piano Solo—"Trovatore," Verdi. Mr. John Allan.

Solos—(a) "For You Alone," Geehl. (b) "The Big Bass Viol," Bohannon. Mr. Asa Huycke.

Solos—(a) "Love the Pedlar," German. (b) "Happy Day," Sanderson. Miss Dorothy Allan.

Duet — "Barcarolle." Offenbach. Miss Allan and Mr. Huycke.

Solos—(a) "The Tempest of the Heart," Verdi. (b) "Just a Wearyin' for You," Bond. Mr. Asa Huycke.

Piano Solo—"Frohliche Stucke," Sarakowski. Mr. John Allan.

Solos—(a) "When the Heart is Young," Dudley Buck. (b) "Love is Mine," Gartner. Miss Dorothy Allan.

Solos—(a) "A Perfect Day," Bond. (b) "Good-Bye," Tosti. Mr. Asa Huycke.

Solos—(a) "Tatters," Lane. (b) "His Lullaby," Bond. Miss Dorothy Allan.

Duet—"Down the Vale," Moir. Miss Allan and Mr. Huycke.

"God Save the King."

M'CALL DENIES HIS IDENTITY

Awaiting Sentence at Picton he Tries to Divorce His Unenviable Police Court Record

Ross McCall, in the toils at Picton, on a charge of theft, is making a stubborn effort to deny his real identity, and convince the police of that Town that he has never glowered at Magistrate Dumble from the prisoners' box. Ross was arrested on a charge of theft. The money was not found on him and it looked at first as though the police would have considerable difficulty in proving the case against him. McCall escaped from gaol and was recaptured. When arrested the second time the money, which is alleged to have been stolen, was found on him.

McCall denies that he ever had a police court record here, and says his father is Wm. E. McCall, a blacksmith of this City and that he is one of a family of several children. As a matter of fact Wm. E. McCall, the former local blacksmith, is dead, and did not have a family at all. McCall says he has not been in Peterborough for four years, but in reality he has not been outside the City for more than six months. Chief Thompson received a picture of McCall, which settles all doubt in the matter. The prisoner is awaiting sentence for theft and jail breaking.

SPECIAL POLICE FOR HALLOWE'EN

There will be a small legion of special police officers on duty next Friday night to dampen the ardour of the Hallowe'en marauders. The Chief is determined to avoid a repetition of the fence tearing and other destructive tactics of the young bloods last year. The most notable of the depredations last year was the legends printed on the Collegiate Institute, but it is not expected that anything like that will be allowed this year.

HORSE RETURNED AFTER A WEEK'S ABSENCE

A horse and buggy that was hired at Pulkinghorn's livery a week ago was found the night before last in the sheds of an East City hotel. It was thought that some one had stolen the outfit, but the stranger who rented it simply drove into the hotel yard, tied the horse, and walked away without any explanations. Both the animal and the buggy were in good condition and had apparently been well used.

PRESENTED WITH A LIMOGES TEA SET

Miss Daisy Bartley, Perry Street, a member of the contralto section of the choir of the Sacred Heart, was presented with a Limoges tea set yesterday. The presentation was a gift from the choir in appreciation of the services of and associations with Miss Bartley, whose marriage takes place within a few days.

WILL BE TRIED FRIDAY AFTERNOON

Garnet Jones, committed for trial on a serious charge by Magistrate Dumble, will come before his Honour Judge Huycke for trial on Friday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

QUESTION OF PRECEDENCE

JAMAICA, L.I., Oct. 24.—A question of precedence was the cause of an animated dispute between physicians during an operation on a woman patient, which finally culminated in the resignations of Dr. Paul Fleeri and Dr. Reginald Van Wert from the house staff of St. Mary's Hospital here.

The patient was lying unconscious, with the operation half completed, while the doctors were in the heat of their quarrel. According to one of the visiting staff, an outside surgeon had charge of the operation with his own assistant in attendance on him.

This was resented by one of the house staff who claimed the right to stand next to the operator as his assistant.

An argument started, seriously hindering the operation, and endangering the life of the patient, until several other house surgeons interfered.

The regrettable incident was responsible for the resignation of the two doctors named, and successors have been appointed.

Health and Beauty Helps

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Twenty-Two: I am convinced that the lifeless, aged appearance of your skin is the result of using powder to excess. A plain spurmax lotion is an excellent skin cleanser, beautifier and tonic. This is made at home by dissolving four ounces spurmax in one-half pint hot water (or witch hazel), then adding two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This spurmax lotion does not give to the complexion that "made" appearance. It brings out the nature's health-tone, because it frees the skin of the oily, sallow, "muddy" condition and insures a perfect complexion. This lotion will not open nor blow off and seems part of the skin.

A. L.: The delatone treatment for hairy growths is quite harmless and rarely is more than one application required. Mix a little powdered delatone with water and apply to the objectionable hairs, then after two or three minutes rub it off, and the hairs come with it. Washing the skin leaves it firm and free from blemish.

Dolly: Your itchy scalp can be relieved and cured, as well as the falling hair, by the use of a quinine tonic which at least a dozen of my personal friends are using and making at home from an ounce of quinoin dissolved in a half pint of alcohol, to which should be added a half pint of water. They use this regularly by massaging into the roots of the hair and they claim the itching stops immediately and the tonic improves the growth of the hair and helps nature make it beautiful and healthy.

Gertrude: I am sure you are wrong in the never-shampoo idea for I learn through my correspondents that neglecting to cleanse the hair is nearly as injurious as the use of soap or other harmful mixtures. So I would shampoo with canthrox at least once a month during fall and I think your hair will regain its healthy gloss and evenness of colour. A teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup hot water is quite enough mixture for a thorough shampoo, and after rinsing well, the hair dries very quickly. The regular use of canthrox for shampooing corrects all hair and scalp troubles and encourages a beautiful growth of hair, long and beautiful.

Anna: No, don't make yourself miserable by unnecessary dieting or indulging in violent exercise to reduce fat. Make up and take this simple reducer and your weight will soon be just where you want it: Dissolve four ounces parmelia in one and one-half pints hot water; when it cools strain and take a tablespoonful before meals. This parmelia reducer acts gently, is quite harmless, and entirely satisfactory results are quickly attained.

Hortense: Indeed, you can easily cure that tired, depressed feeling, which is accompanied with such a sallow condition of the face. They are caused by sluggish blood (very common in the fall months) which is not properly eliminating the poisons from the system. Try this blood purifier and tonic: Into one-half pint alcohol (whisky must not be used) pour one ounce kardene, then add one-half cupful sugar and hot water to make a full quart. Take one tablespoonful of this old-fashioned blood cleanser and tonic before each meal. This is splendid for that weak, worn feeling and restores the kidneys to normal action and the blood to a healthy condition. Its timely use will save much serious sickness.

Olive: Yes, I know a sure cure for wrinkles which one be cheaply made at he- e one ounce almosoin with co- t cold water and add two teasp- lycerine. Stir and let stand for one day. To remove or prevent wrinkles, apply this vegetable cream-jelly thickly and massage thoroughly. At night leave the face covered with the cream. You will find nothing so equal almosoin jelly-cream to remove wrinkles and keep them away and it contains no oil or fat which might promote hair growth. You will also notice by its use not only your wrinkles disappearing, but the large pores of the entire face getting much smaller and the skin very soft and velvety.

Lucy: You want to brighten and strengthen your eyes and can easily do so by using this plain eyebrow eye-tonic in which I have great faith because of the good it has done in so many instances, and I am sure if you put two or three drops of it in your eyes, aching eyes at present inflamed for a time the inflammation will disappear. To prepare this inexpensive tonic, dissolve one borax tablet in a pint clear water. The dull lifeless eye it will lend a youthful sparkle and everlasting expression.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

NO CHANGE IN LEADERSHIPS OF THE FOOTBALL LEAGUES

As a Result of Saturday's Games--Additional Comment Regarding the Matches---Old Country Football Gossip

There were no changes in the leaderships of the various British football leagues as a result of Saturday's games, although in the First Division, Blackburn, who are at the head of affairs, could only manage to secure a draw with Tottenham Hotspur.

This game was an important one, inasmuch as it went to show what the North London team were really capable of. The result, 3-3, speaks for itself. Although Tottenham were playing at home, it must be remembered that Blackburn's form this season has been such that even the Spurs' most ardent supporters did not expect their team to hold the leaders to a draw. Tottenham will now be looked upon as dangerous contenders for premier honours.

Chelsea Beat Aston.

Another London club that covered themselves with glory were Chelsea, who sent up their followers' hopes with a leap by defeating the cup-holders, Aston Villa, on the latter's ground, by 2-1. It is not the Villa team of last year that is battling for honours this season. The indomitable Halse is no more with Aston, and lined up against his former club mates on Saturday. He proved too much for them, and another loss was registered against Aston.

Sunderland, the league champions, are beginning to show their real form. Their latest victims were Bradford, who went down to defeat by 2 goals to 0. West Bromwich proved too much for Derby, winning by 2-1, while Oldham handed it to Liverpool to the tune of 3-2.

At Sheffield the Wednesdays beat the United by 1-0, while Preston North End handed a beating to their former Second Division companions, Burnley, by 2 goals to 1. Manchester United beat Newcastle, 1-0, but the city team could only draw with Everton, 1-1. Bolton won from Middlesboro by 2-1.

Hud's Seven Goals.

In the Second Division the outstanding game was that between Huddersfield and Birmingham, not because it had any effect on the standing of the teams, but because of the former club's high score. They notched no less than seven goals to their opponents' nil. Woolwich could only manage to draw with Blackpool, each club securing a single.

Clapton, the other London team, fared worse, losing to Hull City by 2-0.

Stockport were also high scorers, beating Leicester Fosse by 5-2.

Swindon are still keeping up their remarkable winning gait. Another was added to their roll of victims when they beat Norwich 2-1.

Crystal Palace and Queen's Park Rangers were also winners, beating West Ham and Southampton respectively.

Hearts Only Draw.

Hearts could ony manage to draw with Third Lanark, the score being blank at the end of the match.

Celtic proved their superiority over the league leaders, Rangers, by beating the latter on their own ground by 2-0. St. Mirren could not hold Falkirk in check and lost by 3-1.

Kilmarnock ran up a big score against Hamilton, beating the latter by 5-2. Hibernians and Motherwell scored five goals between them, the former, however, secured three and won. Dumbarton won a close game from Partick Thistle by 1-0. Morton smashed Queen's Parks hopes by beating thel atter by 3-1, while Dundee did the same to Raith, the Rovers losing by 2-1. Airdrionians managed a good performance by holding Clyde to a goalless draw.

On 6th inst. teams representing the amateurs and professionals in England met under the auspices of the Charity Shield, when the pros won by 7 to 2. Hampton helped himself to four goals. Teams:

The Amateurs — R. G. Brebner (Leicester Fosse), T. C. Burn (London Caledonians), and A. E. Knight (Portsmouth), G. H. How (London Caledonians), Peacock (Bromley), and J. Dines (Ilford), J. G. Sharpe (Leeds City), R. Healey (Darlington), V. J. Woodward (Chelsea) captain; Rev. H. V. Farnfield (New Crusaders), and G. H. Barlow (Preston North-End).

The Professionals—Hardy (Aston Villa), Crompton (Blackburn Rovers), captain, and Womack (Birmingham), Cuggy (Sunderland), McCall (Preston North-End), and Watson (Burnley), Walden (Tottenham), Fleming (Swindon), Hampton (Aston Villa), Holley (Sunderland), and Hodkinson (Blackburn Rovers).

A Great Record.

Can anyone in class football beat the record for consecutive appearances of T. E. Fern, Lincoln City's goal-keeper? On February 26, 1910, Fern was hurt at Lincoln and missed the match the following week at Derby. He reappeared, however, the next Saturday, March 12, at Lincoln, against Stockport County, and has not since missed a first team match. He played the ten remaining matches that season, appeared in the 38 league games in the following campaign — 1910-11—as well as in cup-ties, and the 32 Central League matches, with the various cup-ties, in 1911-12. He was a player in every one of Lincoln City's 38 Second Division games last year, with cup matches as well, and has played in each match up to date this season. This means that Fern has made 142 consecutive appearances with Lincoln City's first team.

Everton Calling Up Reserves.

In their forward line that opposed Sheffield United at Bramall Lane, Everton, included no fewer than four men who started the season in their reserve eleven. Harrison, Page and Houston appeared the previous week against Middlesbrough, and owing to Fleetwood's continued indisposition, Johnston was introduced to the inside-left berth. This young player was secured from Blyth Spartans last April, and he has done well in the Central League games. He is somewhat slight of stature, but he is exceptionally clever and controls the ball beautifully. He scored Everton's solitary goal at The Lane.

RUGBY

Did you ever notice how many old Peterborough boys are playing Rugby elsewhere? If they were all back here together the Petes would have the nucleus of a team that would be a serious contender for Dominion honours. Here is the list: Ross Craig, with Hamilton Tigers; Pete Campbell and Dick Sheehy with Varsity, Frank Heffernan with Torontos, Layfield, with Parkdales; Harold Hill, with Queen's, and Harold Matthews, with Royal Military College.

BERLIN TO HOLD ONTO FRANCHISE

BERLIN, Oct. 27.—The announcement made on Saturday that President Fitzgerald proposes to recommend a change in the Canadian League by transferring the franchises of Berlin and Guelph to some other cities, is not worrying the directors of the local Canadian League team. The franchise is owned by the Twin City Athletic Association, which proposes holding it for some time to come. When the annual meeting is held in Berlin, representatives will be instructed to inform the balance of the league that the association has not placed the franchise on the market. The directors, after having received the financial statement for the year, have ascertained where considerable money can be saved in future years and will benefit by the experience of this season.

The Berlin directors will not consent to having Manager Shaughnessy, of Ottawa, draw up the schedule for next season, but will advocate that men capable of drawing up an equitable schedule be engaged. "The sooner President Fitzgerald and one or two others in the Canadian League find out that Berlin promises to be one of the best baseball cities in the province, the better for themselves and the league," said one of the Athletic shareholders this morning.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Ethel's Engagement

The stout woman settled herself in the rocker with a sigh of relief. "I'm always glad I live on the ground floor!" she said. "I should not like to have to climb three flights of stairs every time I'd been anywhere! Still, of course, the rents are cheaper up here, I suppose. I hear that your Ethel got engaged this summer, Mrs. Gimmons."

"Yes," admitted her hostess with a pleasant smile. "Ethel is engaged to a perfectly splendid young man. His name is George Winkum—of the Indianapolis Winkums, you know—and is so good looking and polite, and so devoted to Ethel! It was quite touching."

"You must be relieved," said her caller. "Ethel has had so little attion here in town. It was clever of you to figure out that a change of location might help. Sometimes young men are caught in a hurry that way before they have time to think what they are doing. They have so much spare time on their hands at a summer resort that they get engaged before they know it just to kill time. That's the reason that kind of engagements never last long. I hope Ethel won't go and spend a lot of money on a trousseau that she may never have use for."

"No danger of that," said Ethel's mother, indignantly. "George is just crazy about her.

"There were ten girls to one man there, so he had plenty of choice. Still, if Ethel was like your Lillian, I could understand your taking the view you do—but I don't have to worry about Ethel's attraction wearing off. It must be sad for Lillian to realize that she is getting on in years and all her friends are marrying and she is left on thes helf. Lillian would be a nice-looking girl if her nose was different—and there doesn't seem to be much she can do for her complexion, does there? Ethel is so lucky, having natural bloom."

"She had it on so thick I could see it clear across the street yesterday," said the visitor. "Lillian called me to the front window and said, 'Mamma, isn't it perfectly shocking the way Ethel gets herself up?' I've always been careful to have Lillian a modest, refined, ladylike girl. When she marries she will get some fine man who can appreciate—"

"I suppose there is a chance for every girl to get married," interrupted the hostess, "provided she'll take any sort of an offer. Ethel has been so finicky that I've often said to her, 'Ethel, you'll pick up a crooked stick at the last.' The offers that girl has had. And now to think that she is to marry such a fine—"

"I've always kept Lillian away from summer resorts," said the caller. "You can't tell a thing about the men you meet at those places! They are so likely to be chauffeurs posing as millionaires. I hope you've had Ethel's young man looked up carefully. You should not let your joy over her catching him blind you to the future. It would be awful to have a son-in-law to support, when you and Mr. Gimmons live so economically."

"Here is George's picture," said her hostess in cold triumph, as she produced it. "One look at him will show you there's no danger of our having to support him!"

"My!" said the caller. "If he doesn't remind me of Jabe Stevenson back home who robbed the First National Bank and ran away with the druggist's wife. I never saw such a resemblance — eyes and mouth and everything. I hope he doesn't turn out to be the same kind of a man. When I was a girl there was a young man came to the lake—I never liked him from the first, but the other girls were wild about him—and he turned out to be a butcher from the next town. So refined looking, too. You never can tell. Lillian said when she heard about Ethel, 'Mamma, I shall never marry unless I marry a man I've known for years. I think it is terrible to marry a perfect stranger!' Lillian has such noble ideals!"

"George is at the head of the Winkum paint factory," said Ethel's mother with pride. "Such a responsible position and such a big income—"

"I hope there won't be a crash a few months after their wedding like the one I just read about," said the caller. "The Dills, you know—they flew so high and she kept three girls—and now their furniture is being auctioned off to pay the grocery bill and her cook attached Mrs. Dill's diamond necklace.

"Lillian has so often said, 'Mamma, I don't long for great wealth. When I marry I shan't care about money. I want a real manly man, who—"

"Lillian waited so long that she's kind of got the habit, I suppose," said the hostess. "My Ethel is a very different girl—she has had so many offers. Any other girl would have grabbed at George—but she kept him waiting two weeks for his answer!"

"What a risk for her to take!" said the caller, preparing to go. "I just dropped in to congratulate all of you. It must be such a relief to the family. It is perfectly remarkable how much he looks like Jabe Stevenson, though. Tell Ethel everybody's so glad that she's finally got engaged!"

TEMPERATURE OF THE BODY.

It Is Perspiration or Lack of It That Cools and Heats.

It is well to know what raises and what lowers the bodily temperature. In summer we all want to keep as cool as possible, and we should know what will tend not merely to make us feel cool, but really to be cool.

Except in sickness when the temperature of the body is increased by many degrees and is called fever, we are never so hot as at the moment we are born. The temperature of a new-born baby is higher than that of its mother, rising to 102 degrees Fahrenheit, but during the first day it goes down rapidly as far as 97.5, and then rises again to a little more than the normal temperature of the adult. With this exception age does not change the temperature, which is in the normal man 98.6 on the average.

The temperature varies as much as 2 degrees in the 24 hours. The minimum is 97.5, and is reached at about 4 a.m., while the maximum, 99.5, is attained at 4 in the afternoon. It is notable that fasting or sleep does not alter these temperatures; those persons, however, who work at night and rest by day reverse the order of the variations in temperature. Thus bakers, who work at night, have the highest temperature at 4 a.m., and the minimum toward evening.

In tropical countries the average normal temperature is 100.4, slightly higher than in temperate zones. In the Arctic the normal temperature is lower. Norwegians, who live in a cold climate, have an average temperature of 97.7.

These variations are certainly due to the difference in the temperature of the air, and not, as some have thought, to differences of race, for Norwegians attain the same temperature as natives when they live in the tropics.

Muscular labour has considerable effect upon the temperature and may raise it as much as two degrees. One scientist observed that with normal exercise the temperature went up from 97.7 to 100. In certain exceptional cases the temperature rises even more. A runner has been found to mark 103 after a hard race. Intellectual labour also causes a rise in temperature. Weiss shows that a man sitting down to study hard with a temperature of 97 raises it one degree to 98 by 40 minutes of brain work.

The maintenance of the temperature about a certain standard in the warm-blooded animals, notwithstanding the variations of external temperature, proves the existence of some kind of internal regulator by which the animal fights against the tendency to increase or diminish his own heat.

The resistance of warm-blooded animals against cold is considerable. In Polar regions those animals—bears, seals, musk oxen, dogs, etc.—withstand temperatures of 30 degrees below zero habitually, and Nansen reports that he felt no great inconvenience when the temperature was less than 40 below.

The body uses two means of fighting cold: Diminishing the loss of heat by radiation and increasing internal combustion.

Diminution of radiation is brought about by the fur of the animals and by man's clothing. Besides, there is a constriction of the blood vessels, or a diminution of the irrigation of the skin, which brings about a cooling of the skin and as a consequence decreased radiation.

Increase of combustion is brought about by increase of muscular activity, which, as we say, "keeps us warm," and by the eating of fats and other foods of high carbon content.

In summer or in tropical climates, we have to fight increase of temperature which would arise from the invasion of the heat without or from overcombustion within. The organism overcomes heat by increasing radiation and evaporation. The dilation of the blood vessels causes the blood to flow to the surface of the body, and if the temperature without be not higher than that of the blood the loss by radiation is increased.

But it is escpecially by loss of water that the warm-blooded animals prevent the rise of temperature of the body. The cold produced by evaporation is great, for loss of 1 gram of water takes up about 580 small calories. If, for instance, a man evaporates a quart of water (by perspiration and evaporation through the lungs) in 24 hours he loses 580 large calories; i.e., enough heat to lower the temperature of 116 pounds of water 10 degrees.

This demonstrates the enormous value of evaporation through skin and lungs and the necessity for keeping these organs in prime condition, especially during the warm weather, if we are to bear it in comfort. It is obviously, then, a crime against the body to overclothe it!

CHANGED WITH TIME.

The word "affectionate" is an instance of how meanings change, for an affectionate person was originally the reverse of agreeable, the word meaning passionate or willful. John Knox in 1554 writes of "the government of an affectionate woman" being "a rage without reason," and a century later another writer deplores the evils of affectionate soldiers. And now, as any nursemaid knows, affectionate soldiers have no evils.

FUNERAL NOTICE.

The funeral of the late Mrs. P. Delaire will take place from the family residence, 474 Park Street, to St. Peter's Cathedral, at 9 o'clock a.m. on Wednesday morning, October 29.

CONCERT ON NOV. 7TH.

The young men of Murray Street Church have decided upon Friday, November 7th, as the date of the select entertainment which is to be given under their auspices. The artists of the evening will be: Miss Dorothy Allan, soprano; Miss Mignon Teigmann, violinist; Mrs. L. J. Pettit, elocutionist.

The tickets which are now on sale are going rapidly, and the young men will doubtless realize their hope to have a capacity house. The proceeds will be given to the building fund.

CHRISTMAS GREETING CARDS.

The Daily Examiner has received a Sample Book of what it believes to be the best and cheapest assortment of Christmas Greeting Cards that have been shown in this City. While it is early yet to think of ordering your supply of Christmas Greeting Cards, still, in order to save a disappointment, it might be well for those who desire a Christmas Greeting Card of English manufacture, to call in and see the sample book and get prices at once. tf

NEW EYE-GLASS MOUNTING.

MABEL TARRANCE.

Peterborough is to be favoured with a visit of the talented young entertainer, Miss Mabel Tarrance, of Toronto, who is booked to appear in the Opera House on the evening of November 18th, with the Royal Concert Company. This Company is composed of a strong combination of musical and charming talent, who are having a successful tour in Canada. Miss Tarrance is a unique entertainer and her numerous friends in Peterborough will be pleased to have an opportunity of hearing her in her humorous and dramatic impersonations.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. Annie Campbell and Miss Edna Campbell are visiting Mrs. R. A. Elliott, 3 Engleburn Avenue.

Mr. Leo Young and Miss Molly Young went up to Toronto yesterday morning to attend the Knights of Columbus ball held there last evening.

Mr. R. P. Grills of Campbellford announces the engagement of his daughter, Ira May, to Mr. J. H. Oldham, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Oldham of Peterborough, the wedding to take place quietly in November.

BIG INCREASE IN POLICE COURT CASES

Total Number to Date Exceeds Last Year's Figures by 215

A PROBABLE CAUSE

There has been a striking increase in the number of police cases during the current year. The total number to date is 883. For the corresponding period last year there was a total of 522 cases. The total for the year 1912 is 668. This number was reached on September the fourth of this year, so that the increase for the present year to date is 215 with a little over two months to account for.

These figures do not merely represent convictions, but all cases that have passed through the regular police court channels.

The increase in the number of police court cases is partially attributed to the increase in population and also the large amount of construction work that was in evidence during the current year. The latter has resulted in an increase to Peterborough's floating population, consequently a large number of police court frequenters might be classified as transient visitors.

Any Woman Can Have Smooth, Hairless Skin

(Beauty Topics)

Here is a simple treatment, which, if used, will quickly banish hair or fuzz from chin, cheek or lip: Mix enough powdered delatone and water to cover the hair; let stand 2 or 3 minutes, then rub off and the hairs are gone. Then wash the skin to rid it of the remaining paste. This is quite harmless and does not injure the most sensitive skin. Definite results are had quickly if the delatone is bought in an original package.

Nearly Million Pounds Of Mail

Mail Motor-Drivers' Strike in New York Assumes Serious Proportions

Special Wire to The Examiner.

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 28.— The probability of calling out troops to move the United States' mails which are now piled up to the extent of nearly a million pounds in the various city post offices here, was discussed by the authorities here this morning and representations made to Washington to that effect. There seems to be no chance of a settlement of the mail motor drivers' troubles in the near future and the strike breakers now working are under the protection of the police. Canadian mails from Britain are also affected by the strike.

Unsettled Weather All Over Country

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Oct. 28.— Ontario is not the only sufferer at the hands of the variable and erratic weather man. The meteorological office to-day reports that unsettled conditions prevail generally throughout the Dominion with all the varying degrees ranging from heavy rains in the Maritime provinces, with showers and cloudy skies in Ontario to light snowfalls in the west. The unsettled condition in the weather will remain, judging from the indications of the weather man. To-morrow will be colder and will continue unsettled.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

GEN. DIAZ ESCAPES

He Thinks it is Safer on Board United States Warship

NEW POLICY IS PLANNED

VERA CRUZ, Oct. 29.—At ten Monday evening Gen. Felix Diaz, accompanied by his two confidential advisers, Cecilio Ocon and J. B. Sandoval, crawled across the roof from the German Hotel to the quarters of United States Consul Canada. There they asked for protection. Canada signalled to the Wheeling, the only American gun boat inside the harbor, to send a launch to the Terminal Co. dock. Between 12.30 and 1 o'clock yesterday morning Diaz and his friends were taken aboard the Wheeling, and later transferred to the United States battleship Louisiana.

Sentiment here strongly condemns American officials in their "butting-in" on national business. Diaz's life is not in danger. In fact Monday evening Antonio Villa Vicencia, the best Mexican detective, and head of the secret service here, publicly said that Diaz would soon leave the Consulate for American protection aboard their ships, and that he would not interfere with such a flight, as Diaz's absence from the country was more or less convenient to the public interest.

There was no order for Diaz's arrest, and he was under surveillance solely because the Central Government wished to keep track of his movements. It is thought that Enrique Hauser, proprietor of the German Hotel, called the German Consul's attention to what was going on in his hotel, and that the consul informed the officials of the warship Hertha, anchored near the Wheeling, to give the launch a good passage from the pier to the Wheeling, as the German Consul did not know what action the Mexican gunboats would take if the American Consul's plans were forestalled.

Will Stop "Drifting."

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 29. — A new and probably more definite Mexican policy is to be initiated by the United States. Assurances to that effect have been given by this Government to other foreign nations interested. From what was learned yesterday it is believed that the procedure that has been criticised as "drifting" is to be abandoned.

Coincident with an informal announcement by Secretary Bryan that this Government had assented to a request from the Government of France that American protection would be given to a party of forty French citizens whose lives are believed to be in danger at San Ignacio, forty miles inland from Mazatlan, it became known also through the Secretary of State that the United States had promised foreign powers to define its policy of future dealings with Mexico. In accordance with a request of the United States assurances have been received by the State Department from the Governments of Great Britain, Germany and France that they would take no action concerning Mexico until a statement of the American policy had been communicated to them.

These disclosures by Mr. Bryan mark the first indication of an intention on the part of the Government to take the world into its confidence with respect to the course it intends to pursue towards Mexico.

Breaks Away From U. S.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 29.—Walter S. McCreery, a millionaire, who by two legal decrees is held to be a mental incompetent in the United States and wholly sane in England, has escaped from his legal guardian, Attorney H. H. McPike, at the Los Muertas ranch of San Benito Co., and so far has managed to elude the vigilance of the sheriff and a posse.

If he can board a ship and get outside the three-mile limit McCreery cannot be taken under the laws of the United States. It is the general belief that McCreery will attempt to make his way to England, where he owns considerable property.

Murderer Missed Money.

ST. HILAIRE, Que., Oct. 29.—The finding of $51 in a bureau drawer now proves that the murderer of Mrs. Louis Chevalier here on Friday night, failed to secure the money that induced him to enter the old lady's house and to kill her.

The murderer seems to have overlooked the bureau in his hurried search and to have secured only a few nickels

TO BANISH THE BAR.

Ontario Young Manhood Association Formed in Toronto.

TORONTO, Oct. 29.—A new temperance organization, to be known as the Ontario Young Manhood Association, which will conduct an active campaign among the young men of the province, was formally organized last night at a meeting in the West End Y. M. C. A. of representative leaders in the various young men's movements in Toronto and throughout the province. The primary object of the organization will be to centralize the efforts along temperance lines of all the present existing organizations connected with the churches and Y. M. C. A. branches. The new organization will take an active part in the coming local option contests in York and Scarboro Townships, concentrating its efforts upon getting out the young men's votes, and next year it is planned that all municipalities voting on local option will be invaded. Every member of the new movement is to wear in his lapel a button bearing the words: "No Booze."

The principal officers are: Hon. president, George A. Warburton; vice-president, W. J. Gallagher; general secretary, Newton Wylie, University of Toronto, and W. A. Dunlop; treasurer, T. A. Silverthorn.

TESTIMONY TAKEN.

Only Summing Up Remains In Eaton Murder Case.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Oct. 29.—All evidence in the trial of Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, charged with poisoning her husband, Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton, had been put in when the afternoon session closed yesterday, and the fate of the woman will probably be entrusted to the jury before to-night.

Before the case of the defence was closed a medical expert, Dr. A. E. Auston of Boston, testified that in his opinion the poison which killed the naval officer was taken at or after the noon meal, Wednesday, March 5, and that it was taken in one dose.

Mrs. Eaton on that day was visiting in Medford, according to testimony given by witnesses for both the state and defence.

Grandma Never Let Her Hair Get Grey

Kept Her Locks Dark, Thick, Glossy, With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all grey hair disapears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Grey, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

TO BUILD OWN NAVY

New Zealand Decides to Discontinue Its Subsidies

AGREEMENT IS UNFULFILLED

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Oct. 29.—The Government of the Dominion of New Zealand decided yesterday to adopt the policy of building a navy of its own on the same lines as that of the Commonwealth of Australia and to discontinue its subsidy to the Imperial British Navy.

Premier William Ferguson Massey in announcing the reversal of the present system explained that the decision of the Government to assume the greater responsibility was due to the inability of the British Admiralty to carry out its agreement of 1909, and station two cruisers of the Bristol type of 4,800 tons displacement in New Zealand waters, the Dominion bearing the cost of their upkeep.

The British Admiralty had substituted for these two cruisers the Psyche and Pyramus of 2,135 tons displacement, which were unsatisfactory to the Dominion, and the Premier proposed to recommend to the New Zealand Parliament an order for the construction in England in 1914 of a cruiser of the Bristol type at a cost of $2,000,000.

This and other war vessels acquired by New Zealand, the Premier said, would be under the administration of the Dominion in peace time, but would pass automatically into the control of the Admiralty during war time or when they might be urgently needed.

No Solution, Says Times.

LONDON, Oct. 29. — (C.A.P. Cable.)—The Times, commenting on Premier Massey's proposals to build a New Zealand home navy and discontinue the Imperial subsidy, declares that while it marks a new departure for New Zealand, it is obvious that this announcement does not touch the deeper problem of unity in defence which Borden has emphasized in Canada. Massey's speech, it says, when it reaches the wider aspect of his subject, had a stirring and confident ring, and New Zealand's past record is an earnest of the spirit in which she will address herself to the new work.

"We have long maintained," continues The Times, "that the creation of a local flotilla, while it cannot completely provide for naval security, must be an essential part of any adequate and lasting system of common naval defence. We look to this two-fold policy as the most hopeful means of naval co-operation yet thought out. It may be regretted that the Admiralty has not been able to carry through the agreement of 1909 in the sense of sending two of its most modern light cruisers to the Southern Pacific, but a study of the circumstances should make the reason plain, since ships are now necessarily stationed where they have ships of their own quality to fight."

Toronto Enquiring For Painters.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—That Toronto, Canada, is engaged in a fight for retention of store-door deliveries, or a reduction in freight rates to equalize lack of service, is revealed by a letter to the Chamber of Commerce here from the Canadian city, asking for full information as to the fight here, the hearings before the interstate commerce commission and how the local commercial bodies went about such a fight.

German Regencies Must Go.

BERLIN, Oct. 29.—Bills were introduced yesterday in the Diets of the Duchy of Brunswick and the Kingdom of Bavaria for bringing to an end the only two regencies existing in Germany—that of Duke Johann of Mecklenburg-Schwerin over Brunswick, and that of Prince Ludwig over Bavaria.

The Bavarian Cabinet met yesterday morning and received the consent of Prince Regent Ludwig to the introduction of a measure to make him King of Bavaria in place of the insane King Otto, who succeeded his father, Ludwig, in 1886, and has never known that he was a monarch.

SICK, SOUR STOMACH, INDIGESTION OR GAS

Take "Pape's Diapepsin" and in five minutes you'll wonder what became of misery in stomach

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women to-day know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favourite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach—it's so unnecessary.

Provincial Premiers Want 10 Per Cent. of Excise and Customs

A COMPLETE READJUSTMENT

OTTAWA, Oct. 29.—Resolutions adopted by the interprovincial conference yesterday afternoon propose a complete and radical readjustment of the financial arrangements beween the Dominion of Canada and the provinces. In addition to present subsidies, the provinces ask that the Federal Government should pay the provinces ten per cent. of its total revenue derived from customs and excise. The discussion of financial matters took up all the sitting yesterday. There were several suggestions which, however, were finally concentrated in unanimous resolutions which were conveyed to Premier Borden.

The increased cost of provincial administration is the basic ground on which the demand is made. It is claimed that the cost of administration now reaches the limit of revenue in the various provinces.

The resolutions which were adopted, on motion of Sir James Whitney, seconded by Hon. G. H. Murray, were placed before the Premier, who promised careful consideration.

The resolutions follow:

Resolution No. 1: "Whereas under the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867, and the various amendments thereto, the existing financial arrangements between the Government of the Dominion of Canada and the various provinces thereof are inadequate to provide for their expenditure, in consequence of the heavy and steadily increasing amounts required to be expended to maintain the efficiency of the services of their respective Governments as by law provided, and to provide the moral and material progress of the people;

"And, whereas the financial arrangements at the time of Confederation and since have been regarded as final by the provinces;

"And, whereas, in 1867, the provinces surrendered customs and excise revenue amounting to $11,580,968, and received in lieu thereof but $2,227,942, and whereas in 1913 the total revenue from customs and excise was $133,212,143, of which the provinces receive only $10,280,042, be it therefore resolved:

"(1) That in the opinion of this conference an additional subsidy equal to ten per cent. of the customs and excise duties collected by Canada, from year to year, should be granted to the provinces, payable semi-annually in advance, in addition to all the other subsidies to which the provinces are now or may hereafter be entitled.

"Under reserve of the right of any province to submit to the Dominion Government a memorandum in writing, concerning any claim it may have to larger sums than those mentioned in this resolution, and without preference to any existing claim or demand of any province."

Resolution No. 2: "That the additional subsidy be paid to each province as follows:

"(a) There shall be set aside out of such additional subsidy an amount sufficient to pay each province a sum equal to fifty per cent. of the amount now payable to each province for government and legislature.

"(b) The balance of such additional subsidy shall be payable to each province according to its population, as ascertained at the then last census."

Resolution No. 3: "That in case of the Government of Canada concurring in the views of this conference as expressed in the above resolutions a measure should be submitted to the Parliament of Canada at its next session providing for the payment of such increased subsidies as may be determined upon pending an amendment to the British North America Act if such is deemed necessary."

Another resolution asks increases of salaries of Lieutenant-Governors, and there is also one which asks that their titles be changed to governor.

Hon. Mr. Taschereau asked that free postage be granted to the provinces in respect to public documents, sessional and departmental, and the conference unanimously agreed to the proposal.

The provinces will also ask that the Government take steps to have the stocks of provincial corporations classed in England in the list of those whose securities in which trust funds may be invested.

Train Dynamited.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 29.—Only eight persons escaped alive when the troop train was dynamited by rebels Monday at the railway station of Lulu, between the towns of Saltillo and Vanegas, in the state of Coahuila. More than 100 Federal soldiers, including three officers, were killed. All the survivors were injured.

The troop train is said to have been acting as a convoy and was preceding a passenger train. The latter backed into Saltillo safely. The rebels had disappeared when troops arrived on the scene from Vanegas.

Three Months For Stabbing.

KINGSTON, Oct. 29.—Found guilty on the charge of stabbing his brother-in-law, John Merriott, John Coughlin was sent to jail for three months by Magistrate Farrell. Coughlin became involved in a row over his wife who left him, and pulling a jackknife stabbed his brother-in-law several times in the face and back. Merriott was at death's door for several days, but is now able to be around.

BIG RALLY IS HELD.

Teeswater En Fete To Welcome Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

TEESWATER, Oct. 29.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier entered the riding of Bruce yesterday in behalf of Reuben Truax, Liberal candidate in the approaching Federal bye-election, and held a big rally in this village. Despite a drizzling rain, the welcome given the Liberal chief at the railway station was enthusiastic and the town was specially decorated. The gathering which crowded into the rink was estimated at three thousand.

Hon. Mackenzie King, the first speaker, contended that the Borden naval policy would result in Canada's being involved in European brawls. He criticized the course of Hon. Sam Hughes and the accompanying Canadian officers in inspecting strategic posts on the border line between France and Germany. He was at a loss to understand, he said, why Canadians should be concerned about such matters.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in his speech, charged the Borden Government with being retrograde and reactionary. On the highways aid bill, on the measure to secure branch lines for the Intercolonial, and finally on the navy bill, he said, the Government had sought to take away from Parliament the right to control the expenditure of money. These were the great principles of responsible government for which the Liberals had fought, and it was up to the electors of South Bruce to declare whether they approved of such tactics.

Mr. J. G. Murdock, president of the South Bruce Reform Association, was in the chair. On the platform were Mr. F. F. Pardee, M.P.; Mr. John Tolmie, ex-M.P.; Mr. Geo. Anderson, M.P.P.; Mr. Wm. M. German, M.P., and a score of others

By ROY NORTON

"Sure it does," blustered the spokesman. "It's a cinch it wa'n't taken legally."

"Never mind that part of it. I ain't a lawyer," was the prospector's reply. "And how about this claim I'm on?"

"It's just the same. Sorry to have to put you off'n it. Maybe you can fix it up with the owners, whoever draws it."

Lish looked at him pleasantly, and then at the others.

"It does seem right hard the way I have to change bosses all the time," he commented. "And me bein' a real hard-workin' sort. I've done quite a lot of diggin' around here. Ain't found nothin' yet, except a few colours down on the bed rock, and none of 'em big enough to rattle in a pan. Ain't they no way you can fix it up so's to leave this claim alone, same as Channel's?"

The men looked to their self-authorized spokesman to reply, which he did with clear vigour.

"Nope. Besides, what difference does it make to you who you work for? Ain't one man as good as another? You're a stranger here, you see, so you don't care who owns the ground your work, do you? Channel says you've got a lay on this, and that it's Harry Martin's."

The prospector looked at Channel with a curt stare, and then back at the man.

"I sort of think he gave it to you straight on that," he said, "but it does seem to make a difference to me who I work for. I rather like him. We got an agreement that suits us first rate. And as far as his Brother John's ground goes, we ain't none. Only I like him, too, because he's been pretty decent to me. The rest of 'em on this gulch I don't know. That's up to them and you. But I guess you'll have to leave this claim and John Martin's out of the deal."

The men frowned at him, and again left it to the spokesman, who had become bolder.

"You've got nothing at all to say about what we do," he declared hotly. "You mind your own—"

He stopped short, for there had came a blue flash, and the prospector had taken three or four steps with quick precision. A gun was pointed at his head.

"You talk too much!" Lish snapped at him, and all the whimsical humour had vanished. "Ever since I showed up here you've been shootin' off your mouth. I'm for peace all the time, but I've had too much of it, and, besides, I don't like you anyhow. You don't look straight to me. You get off this ground and take the rest if this bunch with you, and do it quick! If you don't, I'll put five shot in your hide before you can hit the ground! Now get!"

There was scarcely an instant's hesitation. The loud spokesman went suddenly white, and his nerve vanished. He looked to the others for support, but they, too, appeared to have been stricken with a sudden desire to leave. Already one or two men on the outskirts began to move hastily away, calling to others to "Come on! No use in a gun fight!" The spokesman had lost his prestige. He joined a procession that threatened to become a stampede. Lish watched them until they had reached almost the limit of his claim, and then called to them: "That goes, too, for John Martin's ground. Don't get mixed up in your measurements."

No one replied as they fled away. They halted above the stakes on the claim's boundary, and Lish was still standing there, rigid as a rock, and seemingly as ready for a fight as when he first declared himself. Channel Smith, a picture of senile helplessness, was back of him, with his hands hanging at his sides. The men began to walk away up the gulch by twos and threes, now and then looking back, until they were lost to sight. The prospector turned toward the old man with an impatient gesture, then slipped the gun into his belt in the absence of a holster.

"This comes," he declared, "of your shootin' off your mouth so much about the prospects you've been findin.' Channel, you're a nice old chap, but, by the great horn spoons, you sure need a nurse!"

The old man looked indignant, but did not answer.

"I reckon you told 'em you thought this ground was all open, eh? Just the same as you did me. All they had to do was to come and get it. Just stick in a few stakes and it was their'n. Why didn't you give it to 'em straight?"

Channel Smith assumed an air of great authority.

"They ain't nobody workin' up here," he declared, with dignity. "The more folks around the more company. I'm a developer, I am. I've got a book down here a feller give me called 'The Rights of Man,' an' it says land hadn't ought to belong to no one what don't dig in it."

He fumbled around for words for a minute and then assumed a stern appearance.

"If you can tell me, David Henley, what business you had a-goin' off this mornin' without sayin' anything to me where you was goin' I'll like to hear it. You're the most peevin' young feller I ever bad on my gulch!"

The prospector looked at him for a full half-minute, and then doubled over with laughter.

"Had anything to eat?" he asked irrelevantly.

The ancient's face brightened, and he looked toward the tent expectantly.

"Because if you ain't," Lish added. "I'm thinkin' of warmin' up some beans and openin' a can of tomatoes. By that time that gang up the creek'll have cooled off a little, and I'll go up and see what I can do for 'em."

He walked over to his tent, started the fire in his little camp stove, and prepared the hurried meal, then again, with a grave face, turned to Smith.

"Now," he said, "I want you to sit right down here on this bench I made, and make yourself to home till I come back. If you see that there Jack a-snoopin' around, hand him and Pete this bunch of biscuits. They're burned, drat 'em!"

He turned and stalked away up the gulch, while Channel watched him out of sight. Again he was the Mediator. He traversed half the length of the next claim before he came upon the claim jumpers, who were drawing lots.

"Hey, you fellers," he called. "I want to talk to you about three minutes. I'm sorry I had to say what I did back down yonder, but a man has to stick to his principles, if he's any good at all."

He walked toward them all the time he spoke, and halted in front of where they stood expectantly waiting.

"You men came up here to this gulch," he said, "because you heard old Channel Smith had struck it rich. That's so, ain't it?"

Some of them nodded their heads.

"Well, I'm goin' to tell you that he ain't got a thing on earth, as yet. They ain't nobody knows whether there is a dozen of ounces of gold in the whole blamed gulch."

Some of them ripped out oaths of disappointment, and others looked sheepishly at him. One of the men laughed and said, "I was afraid of that."

"Now, boys, there ain't no use in bein' sore at Channel Smith," the prospector went on. "He's a fine old feller, but he's right old. He talks a lies too much, and I'm sort of afraid he brags a little—just a little—now and then. If you dont believe what I'm tellin' you come on back and have a talk with him and look at his ground."

He waited for this to sink home then said: 'I was right hasty down there, this mornin', but we'll forget all about that. I'm here lookin' after my friend's property, and I'll sort of keep on doin' it; but as far as anybody's gone, it ain't worth fightin' over. Anyhow, you all have jumped these other claims. The law'll tell you, when you get done, who the ground belongs to, and until then, if I was you, I'd drop it. I'm witness. If anybody else tries to come on to this gulch, I'll tell 'em so. Now suppose you come down and look at Channel's and my ground.'

He waited patiently at the side while they argued the situation over among themselves, and was gratified when his adherents won the day. He led them back down the trail, and pointed to his own trenches and prospect holes.

"Anybody that wants to try a pan or so down there's welcome," he invited, but they did not accept. Channel Smith, peacefully asleep on the bench in front of the tent, awoke and got to his feet.

"Channel," Lish called, "I'm goin to take the boys down to your ground. Come over here a minute."

The patriarch got slowly to his feet, rubbed his eeys, stroked his beard, and doddered across the intervening space.

"Now suppose you tell us, straight, the biggest pan you have had," Lish suggested.

The old man swelled with importance.

"Onct I got a pan what run forty cents," he declared. "That was nigh on to twenty year ago. This is mighty good ground."

"But what did you get since? Give us the truth," demanded one of the jumpers.

"I was a-pannin' down there one day, right by that clump of pussy willers, when I got some right-good dirt. Channel answered, growing more enthusiastic, "and says I, 'Channel, this is a great, claim! She's good whenever you get that pay streak,' says I. And then, over by that big yeller rock you may have seen, I found some dirt, and says I to myself, says I—"

"But what did the pans show, Channel?" patiently interrupted the prospector, while the others listened intently.

"Richtly good prospects; but, of course, they wa'n't in the pay, and—"

"But how much did the pans go?" insisted Lish. "In cents I mean."

The old man shook his head, and started to go on with flamboyant predictions.

"You weighed 'em, Channel," the prospector remarked. "I know that! You weigh everything. Your scales is most worn out from over-work. Now just what was the biggest pan you ever got besides that forty-cents one?"

The old man hesitated and looked embarrassed.

"Just what did they weigh, Channel?" Lish went on. "You'd tell me wouldn't you?"

Channel Smith warmed to the appeal, and relapsed into plain truth.

"The biggest I got were three cents," he admitted. "But you see how it is, they ain't no—"

A roar of laughter interrupted him and the claim-jumpers turned toward one another with much amusement. Even the patriarch's indignation was drowned in their comment. The prospector waited until it had died away.

"I don't want you men to think that the ground ain't good," he said, when his opportunity came. "If I didn't think so I wouldn't be here workin on it; but it's just promisin', that's all. And anyhow, there ain't much of anything in the world worth fightin' over, except the square thing. Ain't I right?"

Now that their passions were cooled, they looked at him and had to admit that he had merely stated truth.

"By jingoes, you are!" declared the man who had been the spokesman of the forenoon. "If we hadn't been so cocksure, we could have saved a whole lot of fuss. I'm for you, Henley. And when you say you'll see they won't nobody else come up here and stake till we find out about these titles, it goes for me."

Lish looked at him and grinned shyly at the compliment.

"It sort of seems to me," one other man declared, just before they moved down the gulch, "that he's right able to stand for anything he starts in to do," and then, with another laugh at their own expense, and sad shakes of their heads at Channel Smith, they turned out into the trail.

Lish turned toward the patriarch with a sly look.

"Channel," he said, "this has sure been a lesson to me, to keep my mouth shut! The trouble with me is I do too much talkin'."

And Channel Smith, with a great air of reproval, said: "Son, you sure do! That's the only fault I got to find with you; but when you get older, like me, you'll never say nothin' about it to nobody when you've struck it rich. And, by the way, them tomaters was singed just a leetle bit! Try not to singe 'em to-night when I come for dinner, son."

Thus, having invited himself to dinner and administered a rebuke, the ancient plodded down the trail to his work, leaving the prospector to speculate on the advantage of always sustaining a peaceful disposition, and keeping a gun handy to do it with.

CHAPTEn XV.

Pardners.

"It just does seem," said the prospector to himself, as he dumped a pan of potato peelings outside his tent on the following afternoon, "as if they ain't no way for me to get shed of that old cuss, Channel, except to kill him. I moved out of his blamed cabin and he's just as good as moved up here. He's not lost a meal since I moved, and he don't rush up and volunteer any grub. All I got for movin' was a chance to live in a tent and have a free-for-all-boarder!"

He heard voices back of him coming down the trail, and readily distinguished the high notes of Channel who was talking volubly.

"I says to 'em, says I, 'You fellers gota get off'n my gulch. If you don't I'll sick Lish Henley on you.' An they didn't go for to go. Then I says to Lish, 'Come here son, an' just naturally kick this scum of the earth off'n this here mountain!' He minded me right well and between us we sent them all off about their business, we did."

The prospector stared around the corner of the tent and saw that with the voluble old man were three others, whom he recognized as the Martin brothers and Murdock, superintendent of the Canada Hill. He advanced farther, shouted "Hello!" and stood with his empty dishpan in his hand to receive them.

It was the claim-owner who reached him first.

"Henley," he said, "news travels pretty fast up these hills, and I've come over to thank you. There ain't much to say, but I want to remark that you're all man."

His brother came forward more slowly, while Murdock awaited his turn.

"I don't know that I've ever done anything for you," John Martin said, in his quiet way, "but you undoubtedly stood for me. No man ever lost anything by it."

"Done for me?" Lish said. "Why say, you offered me a job."

"And it is always open," was the concise answer.

Murdock shook hands.

"Bully boy!" he exclaimed. "Those fellows haven't got a chance. The land is all patented; but they might make considerable trouble if they go at it hard enough. The Martins wanted to come over and thank you, so I came along."

Apparently the prospector had dismissed all thought of the claim-jumping from his mind. His first question proved it.

"How's Mrs. Marthy Higgins?" he asked. Is—is—is her tongue couted?"

His solicitude and evident desire to appear respectful, robbed his question of anything but a homely meaning.

"My mammy used to always look at my tongue first," he went on, with great earnestness. "You see if it's in good shape, 'most always you ain't bad-tempered, and sooner or later you'll get all right. I reckon if somebody could find how to keep folks from havin' bilious tongues this would be a heap happier world. You say she seems on the mend. That's good, ain't it!"

Every woman may write fully and confidentially to Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and may be sure that her case will receive careful, conscientious, confidential consideration, and that experienced medical advice will be given to her absolutely free.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar coated, tiny granules easy to take as candy.

"Yes! Kuntz's Old German Lager is my choice. There's nothing to match that 'Old German' flavor, you know. And just watch how it sparkles when I pour it out. See the beautiful foam, too. You can't beat it. Kuntz's Old German has the class, alright. And it's put in Peacock Green bottles to prevent it from deteriorating when exposed to light. Better order a bottle yourself, old man."

To make certain of getting Kuntz's Old German, be sure the "Old German" name is on the label. 114

A RECORD FLAGSTAFF.

Vancouver Has the Tallest in British Empire.

Towering 218 feet in the air and weighing eleven tons, the largest one-piece flagstaff in the British Empire was put into position the other day in front of the magnificent new court house at Vancouver. The big stick is a product of the British Columbian forests, and is a flawless example of British Columbian timber.

The big pine was cut at Gordon Pasha Lake, B.C., and presented to the Government of British Columbia. The tree, of course, was much longer than 218 feet, its utility for flagpole purposes depended on having that length free from branches. As it grew in the forest it was as erect as a sergeant-major, in fact, very much more so. It was towed in a log boom for two hundred miles to Vancouver, and drawn by night from the slip on False Creek along a straight road by a traction engine. In its finished state the big stick weighs eleven tons; before the carpenters had adzed and planed it into shape it weighed probably three tons more. Since last fall it has been seasoning and drying out to prevent it warping out of shape.

It is difficult to convey an adequate idea of its immense size. At its base the flag staff is three feet square, and at the top it is a foot in diameter. The big gilt ball at the top measures twelve feet in circumference, while the big arrow which shows plaintiffs and defendants alike which way the wind is blowing at the court house measures fifteen feet from end to end.

Great care had to be taken in erecting the big pole. A concrete foundation twelve feet deep was prepared to carry the weight. A derrick-pole nearly one hundred feet long had to be erected to lift the big stick. At the first lift the centre came up and bent like a cane, but the ends of the pole refused to leave the ground until timber braces had been put round the pole and a martingale and wire stays adjusted to take the strain from the ends. After the necessary experiments had been made and the time came for the final lift, the signal was given to the engineer, and the donkey engine and winch slowly but unerringly lifted the big stick from the ground and allowed the big base to be swung into the concrete socket. During the operation the steps of the court house resembled the bleachers when the home team is playing.

The giant flagstaff is held in place by guy cables set in concrete beds at each corner of the court house lawn, and will stand for many decades as an example of what the forests of British Columbia can produce in the way of tall timber.

He Got It.

"I had a dream the other night," said the joker at a luncheon table recently. "I dreamed I was in business with a rich man, selling potted flowers. But business was bad, and we decided to discontinue business. I wanted the pots and flowers and took them."

"What did the rich man want?" asked one of the guests innocently.

"He wanted the earth," replied the wit.—Exchange.

Well Named.

"What do you call your dog?"

"Stock Market."

"What a peculiar name! Any particular reason?"

"I should say so. Most unreliable dog you ever saw. You can never tell what he's going to do next."—Life.

VALUE OF RHEUMA FROM THE COURT

Judge Barhorst Was Relieved of Rheumatism After Doctors Failed

If you have tried many other remedies and doctors' treatments for Rheumatism and found they failed, do not be skeptical about trying RHEUMA. Read the testimony of Judge John Barhorst of Fort Loraine, O.:

"After treatment by three doctors without result, I have been cured of a very bad case of Rheumatism by using two bottles of RHEUMA. It is now two years since I used the remedy, and I am still as well as ever. Previously, I was a cripple, walking with crutches."

Such testimony should be convincing, 50 cents at Warne Drug Co., guaranteed.

MANGELS FOR POULTRY

A Cheap Food to Grow Where There is Room

In the production of mangels as a poultry food, very small areas, or comparatively large ones, show a decided profit when given over to the culture of these beets. They have proved to be one of the best and one of the most popular of the roots used as poultry food, because of their ease of growth and of their very heavy yielding qualities. They grow to immense size, and will produce a good many tons of roots per acre on good soil, are easily stored with little expense, and are highly relished as a part of the daily ration throughout the winter months.

BANK OF ENGLAND CAREFULLY GUARDED

Men From the Tower of London Are Stationed Outside the Bank During the Night

For over one hundred and thirty years a company of guardsmen, in charge of an officer, marched every evening from the Chelsea or Wellington Barracks to the Bank of England. This was changed, however, and the nightly guard for the Bank of England is drawn from the guards stationed in the Tower of London.

If the visitor to London waits by the bank any evening, at half-past six o'clock he will see about thirty men in the charge of a lieutenant and two sergeants marched up in parade dress with fixed bayonets and loaded ammunition belts. These are the only troops that may march through the city of London with fixed bayonets. The men themselves like the duty. When they march back to quarters, about seven o'clock in the morning, they may do as they please for the rest of the day; and they receive an extra shilling a day from the bank managers. Each man also has a pair of fine blankets wherein to wrap himself while he waits for his turn to go on guard, and in winter big fires are lighted for them. They have numerous refreshments provided for them, and the officer in command has a dinner for himself and two friends.

In the daytime another curious survival of the past is to be observed. Although detectives guard all the doors, the old uniformed beadles are also paid for the service. From the standpoint of efficiency these officials are very much in the way, but as long as the Bank of England has been in existence the beadles have policed it.

The custom of presenting a little gratuity for the bank dates back to 1780, when an attack was made upon the bank by a mob during the Gordon Riots. It is said that in the fight that ensued between the rioters and the clerks of the bank, the latter melted their metal ink pots for ammunition after their supply of bullets had given out.

Baseball in Prison.

The American passion for baseball has been turned to good purpose at a Delaware prison. The warden decided to gratify the inmates' love of the sport as a reward for conduct. All prisoners who obey the rules and observe the discipline of the institution are permitted to play or witness the games. While armed guards patrol the top of the wall about the exercise yard where the sports are held, they have not been called upon to quell any trouble.

USES FOR SAWDUST

A Former Waste Product is Now Extensively Employed

Not so very long ago about the only real use anyone had for sawdust was for packing ice. That was when small local saw mills were more common, and the amount of this form of waste wood was, or at any rate appeared, comparatively small. Now, when the tendency is to consolidate these into large mills with a capacity of several hundred thousand feet of lumber per day, the daily waste in sawdust is seen to be enormous and much experimenting is being done to discover new methods of utilizing it. Perhaps the most promising venture in sawdust utilization in Canada is the manufacture of ethyl (or grain) alcohol. The sawdust is treated with sulphuric acid under suitable conditions, resulting in the formation of sugar, which is then fermented to produce alcohol. Several plants have been erected to produce alcohol from wood in this manner, and, though there are some difficulties still to be overcome, the ultimate success of the process on a commercial scale is assured. Sawdust has been successfully manufactured into briquets for fuel for a considerable time in Europe by a very simple process. The shavings and sawdust are first steam-dried, the water contained in the wood being thus evaporated and the resin almost liquified. The sawdust is then compressed under heat into briquets of the desired size, the contained resin acting as a binder. A firm in Vancouver is engaged in a similar line of manufacture, the sawdust being compressed into a cylindrical tube where it is cut into short lengths by a revolving knife, emerging in the form of small round briquets. These briquets are clean to handle, easy to kindle, and leave very little ash. In England sugar is manufactured on a commercial scale by treating sawdust in closed retorts with weak sulphurous acid under high pressure. In Austin, Texas, also a plant is being built to manufacture stock food from sawdust, by a somewhat similar process. The tar, pitch and turpentine are removed from the sawdust leaving only sugar and fibre to which is added forty per cent. of cottonseed meal. The mixture is said for fattening cattle. Two and one-half parts of clean sawdust mixed with two parts sand and one part cement make a warm long-wearing and sound-proof floor, to which carpets can be tacked with less injury than to a board floor, and which has the advantage over a cement floor in being more elastic. These qualities should win an extensive use for this form of flooring, which has the additional advantage that it can be stained to harmonize with interior furnishings by the addition of color to the mixture while in a semi-liquid state. The sawdust of certain kinds of woods is used in considerable quantities by manufacturers for metal polish, for packing, for meat curing, for making safety explosives, and composition novelties, and for fibre and pulp manufacture. Patent cleaning powders for use on carpets and rugs consist principally of sawdust, lightly moistened by some cheap mineral oil.

Churchyard Unearthed.

In the churchyard at Caerwent (Monmouthshire) was excavated a part of an elaborate drainage system and a paved courtyard of Roman origin. Children playing in the schoolyard accidentally discovered the entrance to a passage leading to a vaulted chamber six feet below the level of the yard, and undoubtedly of Roman workmanship.

WHEN YOUR APPETITE COMES BACK TO YOU

It Is a Sure Sign Your Stomach Is Able to Work. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Will Give You a Rousing Appetite.

It is the greatest joy in the world to be able to eat what one wants and no misery can compare with that which comes when an appetite fails.

When the stomach cannot digest food the system revolts at the very idea of eating, but when the digestive apparatus is restored to its normal condition every quality of mind seems to make a man cheerful.

"That's the Way I Used to Look. What's you think of me now?"

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets mix with the food you eat. The stomach by its peristaltic action churns and moves the food around the stomach walls, the powerful ingredients in these tablets instantly begin digesting the food as they are forced through it and around it.

These tablets regulate the strength of gastric juices. If there is too much acid or alkali then Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets reduce or dilute these evil conditions and prevent the irritating and raw stomachs which always come with dyspepsia, indigestion, etc.

It is the very essence of pleasure to a stomach sufferer to know that he can digest any meal if he will only take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after eating.

The use of one of these Tablets after meals will in a very short time restore your appetite to its normal condition and you will be able to enjoy your food with an old-time relish.

Every Drug Store carries Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Price, 50 cents.

Tasteless Preparation of Cod Liver Oil

NA-DRU-CO N D & C C

Prevents Sickness

Are you one of those thousands who, though apparently well, catch cold easily and often? It's a dangerous condition to tolerate, and one which you can easily prevent by taking two or three bottles of Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Preparation of Cod Liver Oil at once—this Fall.

This pleasant-tasting food-tonic gives tone and vigor to the whole system, and so strengthens lungs and bronchial tubes that they readily throw off the colds which would otherwise take hold of you.

Restores Health

By virtue of its remarkable combination of curative and nutritive properties, Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Cod Liver Oil is one of the very best remedies known for chronic coughs and colds, bronchitis, asthma and catarrh. It is also an excellent reconstructive tonic after fevers, and in diseases such as scrofula and rickets, which are due to constitutional weakness.

Prove its worth by getting a 50c or $1.00 bottle from your Druggist. 397

COURAGE OF NAPOLEON.

The Way It Carried Him From Aspern-Essling to Wagram.

Professor J. Holland Rose in "The Personality of Napoleon" writes of Napoleon's courage. He says that his personality "never stood forth so grandly as after a defeat." The most serious blow in the middle part of his career was that dealt him by the Archduke Charles at Aspern-Essling, northeast of Vienna. The Austrians were nearly double him in strength. The bridges over the Danube had been broken down in his rear. His great marshal, Lannes, had been killed, and, in fact, he had suffered a terrible reverse. All his generals were for retreat, but he withstood them, and Professor Rose ranks the next six weeks "among the most glorious of his military career." He secured new troops, deceived his enemy by false movements and finally defeated him at Wagram.

But a decline came to such a prodigious man. He himself said at St Helena that he had been spoiled by success. It was natural that the victor in fifty pitched battles and innumerable smaller engagements should come to believe himself omniscient and invincible. It was this hardening of the mind that betrayed him into the Russian campaign, that caused him to refuse all compromise in 1813 and 1814 and that led him to defeat by his inferiors, Wellington and Blucher, at Waterloo, just as Hannibal was finally beaten by his inferior, Scipio, at Zama.

Putting Trees to Bed.

An interesting method of protecting peach trees from frost during the winter has been practiced for several years at the agricultural experiment station at Canyon, Colo. Early in November the earth is removed from a circle about four feet in diameter around each tree, and water is turned in to saturate the soil. When the ground has become soft the tree is worked back and forth to loosen the roots and is then pushed over on its side. The branches are brought together and fastened with a cord, and burlap covered with earth is put over them.

Thus the trees lie snug until spring, when the covering is gradually loosened and finally removed, and they are raised and propped up.—Rocky Mountain News.

But She Hadn't.

"I haven't. You see, my wife threatened never to speak to me again if I didn't come home last night before 10 o'clock, and I didn't."

"I see. You're finding out the loneliness of solitude because she kept her word, eh?"

"Not by a jugful. I wish she had."—Exchange.

JUMPS THE EYE MAKES.

It Sees an Object by Piecemeal and Not at a Glance.

The eye does not take in an object at a glance, but piecemeal. It follows the outline of the object, but does so by jumping from point to point in an irregular manner, never twice alike.

In looking at a large circle, for instance, the movement is not regular the gaze passing from point to point until a complete mental image of the circle is formed, even though the person undergoing the tests starts at the top of the circle and attempts to follow its outline all around back to the starting place. Such ocular movements are so rapid that one is not aware of them.

Proof of the irregular movement of the eye may be provided, according to the Optical Journal and Review, by means of the motion picture camera. A small, bright light is placed across the room, and this forms a small image on the cornea of the eye. As the eye attempts to follow the curve of the test object the motion picture camera takes a rapid succession of views of the eye and its bright spot. Then a comparison of the resulting prints and the position of the bright spots in each shows the movements of the eyeball in following the circle.

Vegetables in Arctics.

The information brought to Ottawa by Mr. Henry A. Conroy, inspector of Indian agencies in the north, regarding the splendid crops of vegetables grown within the Arctic circle, has led to a decision by the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association to make a trial of seed production in that region.

Mr. W. J. Kerr, secretary of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association, stated recently that for next summer samples of high-class onion, beet, pea, cabbage and early sweet corn seed will be forwarded to Fort Smith, Fort Simpson, Fort Providence, Fort Chippewa, Fort Good Hope, Fort Norman, Smoky River and Saskatoon Lake.

Varicose Veins And Itching Piles

Usually Arise From Same Cause — Relief and Cure Effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Nearly everybody knows of Dr. Chase's Ointment as the most effective treatment for piles or hemorrhoids that medical science has been able to compound. So much suffering and misery arises from this ailment the one is not long in telling his friends when he has found an actual cure. This accounts for the enormous sales of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

This letter tells of relief from the suffering of varicose veins by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Many suffer from this trouble, not knowing the comfort to be obtained by the use of this great soothing ointment.

Mrs. E. J. Evans, 187 Munro Street, Toronto, writes: "We have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for years. I have been troubled with varicose veins, and find it the only thing that gives relief. For every purpose when a soothing, healing ointment is needed there is nothing so good as Dr. Chase's Ointment." 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Old French in Official England.

One may not be ignorant, perhaps, that French, old French, remains as the language used in certain royal proclamations in England.

So when "the king's assent" is given before the throne in "the painted chamber" the clerk cries in the language of our father, "Le roy le veult," ("the king so pleases"). If the bill that he is asked to approve is a money bill the clerk adds after a profound obeisance, "The king thanks his good subjects, accepts their benevolence and is pleased." The proclamation on ascending the throne is preceded by the traditional call of the French heralds of former times, "Oyez, oyez, oyez!"

Alas, that time has disfigured this old world of our country, and today the philematic English herald cries thrice to the people: "Oh, yes! Oh, yes! Oh, yes!"—Cri de Paris.

Mother's Tongue.

"Don't you realize the power of the mother tongue?" asked the young man who professed interest in literature.

"Yes, and so does father," replied the young woman.—Buffalo Express.

BENEFICENTLY vigilant at the gateway of his Ellis Island stockade stands your Uncle Sam, culling the immigrants. Right across the street—the narrow street of harbor water—on her little star shaped hummock, rises Miss Liberty, tireless armed despite her years of constant torch uplifting.

"Let them all come in, Samuel," adjures Miss Liberty in beautiful petulancy. "What's the use of being such an old particular every time you have a big rush of visitors? What's the need of so much red tape? Let them all in!"

"All of the right calibre, Libbie; all of the right calibre get in, but not one that don't; no, sirree," opines Uncle Samuel.

So goes the incessant discussion at the nation's greatest portal, where eddies a maelstrom of hopes, fears, loves, hates, ambitions and cunning schemes. The place is the clearing house of every human motive and passion, and tens of thousands every year deceive, lie, steal and almost commit murder in their mad effort to pass the Republic's boundaries. It is the crossroads where journeyers are either right about faced or bidden welcome with an immediate introduction to Mr. Opportunity for which there is no charge.

Adventures of an Earl.

There being no other melting pot point equal to it, no wonder the ladle pours out all sorts of tales of men and women and conditions, with the metal varying from the sizzling hot of romance and adventure to the cooling or dead cold state of the sordid humdrum. All kinds and descriptions are embraced within the official records of deportations kept at Ellis Island, but at best these records deal with the perceptible superficials. The hidden mainsprings of action are not required to be analyzed and filed in the regular department annals. Were the cases related in their complete fulness and depth they would catch eye, ear and interest in a way that would separate them at once from the story of the trite and the colorless. Listen to one picked at random.

Down in the stokehole of the steamship Baltic as she swept into New York Bay on Saturday, July 5, 1913, was an English earl shovelling coal. It's hard on the palms of soft hands and fretful to the even tenor of proud spirits to have a dirty mass of fuel to issue several hours a day for five days. Naked to the waist and grimy like his associates in the stifling space allotted to the coal passers, Lord Weddiford found it a tougher task than he had expected when he decided in London a few days before that his love for the wife of Captain William Hallock, of the Royal Artillery, was deep enough to warrant the hardships he was enduring.

At this particular moment of his shovelling in the sooty depths Mrs. Hallock was on the promenade deck, a first cabin passenger. Lord Weddiford could have been there, too, easily enough, but he feared restraining cablegrams, interloping detectives and, worst of all, the close scrutiny of morals, purses and purposes under the official searchlight of Ellis Island. Alone he could pass muster. Alone Mrs. Hallock could pass muster. But together—no, the scandal of their simultaneous disappearance was still the one topic of the gossip circles. They could not be discovered together or they would never be permitted to enter Uncle Sam's land.

Lord Weddiford had pursued Mrs. Hallock for half a year, fully convinced that he loved her as no woman had ever been loved before, and that unless he could gain her regard he might as well toss away his life as he would a worn out garment. He had received little nibbles of encouragement now and then, but every time he began to glimpse a surety of happiness a shifting mood of the lady dashed him from the foothold in her affections he supposed he had gained. Just at the moment he had arrived at the depths of despair, which is the forerunner of the healthful coming out of a love trance, he was almost shocked from his horse in Hyde Park by receiving from Mrs. Hallock an out and out proposal to elope.

The Elopement.

He had been cantering along the Row wearily hoping to see his fair lady, even though the seeing meant nothing in accomplishment. Suddenly he espied a cab enter the park, and in another moment it had drawn up alongside his horse. Out of the window appeared the face of the beautiful Mrs. Hallock. She wasted no time.

"My Lord, I am about to run away to America. I may appear to talk calmly, but I never was more angry in my life. I have been coldly cut by my husband for a week past. He's a fogey and becoming more of a recluse in his habits every day. I want life, I want joy. Some of my women friends have told me you would die for me. Will you come to America and marry me after an American divorce?"

You've got to kind of give Lord Weddiford credit for a quick decision following a dumfounding proposition. He didn't even "bat an eye," as the flash saying is, but bowing low stretched his hand out to Mrs. Hallock to emphasize pledged loyalty.

"I am yours until death, and at your own terms, madame," he said, in tense, measured tones.

"You speak fair and inspire faith. Listen, then. We are watched now by detectives. My husband has had me followed for a week, in the delusion that I could be trapped in something reprehensible. I discovered the espionage the first day and tired of it at once. We quarrelled over it to-day. I warned him I would leave him and go to America. But although I talked bravely I felt I had not the courage to make the leap alone. Then I thought of you. I got this cab and came here purposely to seek you. And even now, with all your assurance of aid, there are difficulties that can hardly be overcome."

"There is no difficulty I cannot overcome if I have your love as reward," said Lord Weddiford simply.

"But I've talked about such cases as ours might be to our solicitor—made a supposititious case, you know. He says if two persons—a man and a woman—leave here under the suspicion that they intended to remain in each other's company unlawfully, why, why—a cablegram from here to the immigration authorities in the United States will be sufficient to have them detained at a place they call Ellis Island, and if—if—they are not satisfied as to the—the situation they send the couple back—call it deporting them, I believe."

"Why, my dear girl, they cannot stop English subjects of rank and standing from entering America. Why, they can't do it!"

"But my solicitor says they have done it. I can't bear to think of such a scandalous delay and investigation. And yet, I must go; I will go! Isn't there some way we can arrange it and not face that horrid Ellis Island?"

"Madame, we shall go. I shall travel under an assumed name. And further, if it be absolutely necessary, we shall hold no conversation during the voyage."

"But, don't you see, my lord, they will know you have gone if you go to the ship. It is bound to come out. The detectives, watching us now, are almost sure to follow."

"Then," said Lord Weddiford, as solemnly as though it were an act of life consecration, "I shall ship as a British sailor. I shall become one of the crew. I know enough of the sea to pass muster. They cannot hold an English seaman and they will never suspect I would so travel. It will seem easy, no matter how hard it is, when I think of you in the same ship with me, ready to join me when we land."

There was just eight hours to make Liverpool and conveniently take the Baltic. An unusually liberal job-getting fee left at a shipping office sufficed to have Lord Weddiford hurried to the ship to take the place of one of the crew who had not appeared. Within an hour the English earl was roundly cursed by a subordinate officer as a landlubber breed of sailor and ordered to the stokehole. It was no use to protest. He had shipped as an able seaman and had revealed his ignorance of the ship's stations in trying to obey the very first order. So he was ordered to pass coal.

But Lord Weddiford came of gamy people. He gritted his teeth and passed on hour after hour, while the blisters on his hands grew sorer. On the promenade deck Mrs. Hallock often watched the crew for a sign of her lover and wondered why it was she never caught a glimpse of him somewhere. So it was until they entered New York harbor.

When ladies elope they should always give a thought to the pocketbook. So hurriedly had her flight been arranged that when Mrs. Hallock had purchased her ticket she found she had but a few shillings left in her purse. But this did not alarm her. She forgot what an important part coin plays with the advent of the immigrant, and supposed the only inconvenience her shortage would cause her would be the necessity of making an advance draft upon her future husband when he joined her on shore.

And so when the immigration boarding officers assembled the first cabin passengers and began to question them Mrs. Hallock awaited her turn with little concern. She was the wife of Captain William Hallock and she was paying a brief visit to the country. Money? Why, of course, she had plenty of money—or could have when she got on shore. But now? Well, why must she have it now? No, she did have only a few shillings now—whose business was it how much she had? She could get all the money she wanted. But the immigration officers shook their heads. In half an hour she was at Ellis Island—detained pending possible deportation.

When the Baltic tied at her pier Lord Weddiford hurried ashore. There was no one to stop him. He was one of the crew, and so far as immigration regulations are concerned the captains of steamships are responsible for the "all rightness" of their crews. The English earl first went to a second class hotel and "cleaned up." Arraying himself more in keeping with his station in life, he went to the Waldorf—the meeting place that had been decided upon with Mrs. Hallock. She had not yet arrived, and while wondering at her delay his eye caught a headline in the evening paper:—

"Wife of Prominent Londoner Faces Deportation.

"Mrs. William Hallock Arrives in United States Penniless."

Lord Weddiford caught the last boat of the day for Ellis Island. He hurried to the Commissioner's office and in a few moments was brought to Mrs. Hallock. The Earl had mapped out his scheme and lost no time in springing his subterfuge. With a warning look at the lady who was being detained he turned on the immigration officers with well assumed indignation.

A Ruse That Failed.

"Why this outrage in detaining my sister because she happens to be without funds? She may draw upon me for an unlimited amount. I am only too glad to have her with me. Release her without a moment's more delay or I'll appeal to the British Consul. Only fancy such a beastly state of affairs when an English lady, just because she has forgotten to fill her purse up, is detained here among a lot of low class immigrants! It's outrageous, I say! Why, I"——

And Lord Weddiford up to this point came pretty near, as the saying in certain quarters is, "Spotting it across." Mrs. Hallock had taken her cue and had advanced to his side with one arm placed trustfully about his neck and a glance of defiance turned on the immigration officers. The scene had attracted a little group. The officers wavered a trifle, looking from the man to the woman in an uncertain way, as though half convinced they had made a mistake.

"What is your name, sir?" finally one of them asked the Earl.

"My name? Why, my name—why, it's John Forteseque, and this lady's maiden name"——

"John Forteseque his name? When did he change it?" A ruddy faced man in the uniform of the Baltic's officers pushed out of the group that had been listening to the dialogue. "Why, this man shipped across last trip as one of our crew. His name was William Ferguson with us. He was a beastly bad sailor for a man shipping as able seaman, so I fired him down to the stokehole. He's been shovelling coal all the way over. John Forteseque—pretty good!"

And while Lord Weddiford and Mrs. Hallock were busy changing the color of their countenances as many times and tints as there are shifts in the rainbow hues another blow fell. A cablegram was handed the chief inspector. He read it aloud to the chagrined couple:—"If Lord of Weddiford is aboard Baltic with Mrs. William Hallock it is unlawful concealment. Act accordingly. H. P. Collins, solicitor for Captain William Hallock."

They Are Deported.

"Are you Lord Weddiford?" asked the chief immigration official abruptly.

"I am," answered the Earl with great dignity, "and now that the farce is played out the lady and I will go ashore and save you further bother."

"Did you know the Earl was aboard the Baltic, madame?" asked the same official of the lady very suddenly.

"I—I—well, yes; I did."

"What was your purpose after landing?" The inspector looked searchingly from one to the other.

"That is none of your damned business, sir!" thundered Lord Weddiford.

"It's our business to ask. Your business to refuse to tell if you decide so."

"But I'll not tell you. We'll go ashore now."

"No, Lord Weddiford; neither you nor the lady will go ashore. You will be made as comfortable as possible here in conformity with regulations governing such detentions until you are examined further. On the surface it would appear that you have grossly violated an immigration law by shipping as a sailor in order to escape examination on landing. In addition, the lady and you are apparently under a compact of elopement while she is still married. This hardly permits you entering the country. Morally you would not be considered desirable."

Lord Weddiford kept mails, telephone and telegraph busy for the best part of five days. The British Ambassador and the British Consul were invoked. Somehow they either refused aid or were dilatory in taking up the matter, for when the steamship Baltic steamed back to Liverpool on Thursday, July 21, the English earl and the wife of the captain in the Royal Artillery were aboard and marked on the Ellis Island records as deported.

"Never mind, dear," said Lord Weddiford consolingly to his companion as they passed out of the Narrows and Uncle Sam's land faded from their sight, "after this has blown over a bit we'll try again. Only this time you'll take one ship and I'll take the next one following. And we won't go to where there's an Ellis Island that pokes its nose in a man's affairs. We'll go"——

"Well, I don't know. I'm not so sure about the wisdom of elopements as I was. When I come to think of those five miserable days among those immigrant that reminded it had to endure"——

"Exclusive—immigrant surroundings" broke in Lord Weddiford disgustedly. "Have you ever by chance shovelled coal in the stokehole of an ocean steamship for five days?"

"That's None of Your Damned Business, Sir!" Thundered Lord Weddiford.

New Light on Nelson.

TWO interesting letters from Nelson to Lady Hamilton were made public for the first time the other day by Miss Anne Miles, of No. 97 Priory road, Hampstead, London, who has the originals in her possession.

The first letter, dated August 13, 1798, twelve days after the battle of the Nile, was written at a time when Nelson was only slightly acquainted with Lady Hamilton. "I am penetrated with the Queen's condescension to think of such an animal as I am," wrote Nelson. "God Almighty has made me the happy instrument of destruction."

The second letter, addressed from Malta two months after he had won the battle of the Nile, was written when Nelson was personally taking part in the blockade of Malta, then occupied by the French.

In it Nelson asks for more ships, "ready victualled, stored and manned," to accomplish his plans. "I want to have force enough," he says, "to keep this blockade complete. • • • I have ships enough if they were English, but the Portuguese (squadron placed at Nelson's disposal) are all with the rank of rear admiral, and will not serve under any of my brave captains."

SCIENTIFIC SLEEP FOR CHILDREN.

A Sleeping Lesson in Progress at an Infants' School in Buckinghamshire.

SCIENCE has invaded the realm of the child nowadays as well as that of the adult, and the little one must be taught the best scientific methods of breathing, playing and going to sleep, as well as the first steps in numbers, reading and writing. At many of the infant schools in Buckinghamshire the children are taught how to fall asleep quickly and surely.

The afternoon session of the schools is broken by a half hour's rest and the children are taken out into the school garden. A mat is spread for each child and then the sleeping lesson begins. As the lessons take place only in the warm weather, when the children naturally crave an afternoon nap, the instruction is not so difficult as it might be in other circumstances. Whether the instruction is supposed to extend into the later life of the children so that as worried city brokers or irritable politicians they will also be able to woo Morpheus to their couch as easily as they once fell asleep in the school garden in the course of study in how to fall asleep now to sleep and how to wake up does not state.

The Staff of Life.

PROFESSOR T. B. WOOD, of Cambridge, lecturing at the Royal Institution, London, exposed the pretensions of bread.

"The 'staff of life'" he said, has been masquerading as a valuable food on the strength of the protein it contains, but it has now been discovered that half of that protein is composed of glutomiac acid, of which the human system requires but a minute quantity, while the remainder is split up into a dozen or fifteen other products of considerable value to animal life, but which are necessarily found in bread only in almost infinitesimal proportions.

"In order to obtain sufficient quantities of the latter on a bread dietary, the system would have to cope with a vast amount of waste glutomiac acid.

"What we want to encourage people to do," Professor Wood declared, "is not to worry about eating this kind of bread or that kind of bread, but to mix other things with their bread in order to get protein in a more suitable and digestible form for animal requirements than is the case with ordinarily bolted proteins when is derived from bread."

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

Where One May Dig to China.

Freeland, Pa., is exactly what its name indicates—free land. It is land which when purchased becomes the absolute property of the buyer, and his title is not subject to mining royalties, ground rent or any other reservation. In this respect it differs very much from the land surrounding the town on all sides and owned by the coal mining corporations, which land when purchasable at all is restricted to the surface rights only. In 1808 August Donop, foreseeing the need of a town site that would be free from the control of the mining corporations, bought several hundred acres of land. He laid out the town, and in selling the lots he emphasized the fact that it was "free land" and the owner's rights extended as deeply into the earth as he might care to prosecute. By common consent the town's first name was Freehold, but this was ordered changed by the postoffice department to avoid confusion with the older town of Freehold, N. J. In deference to local sentiment the name Freeland was substituted.—Ladies' Home Journal.

First Flight Sensations.

The sensations when you first shoot up rapidly in the air are distressful to the novice, says Captain C. Mellor in the Airman. This is how Captain Mellor felt, sitting behind the pilot in a biplane:

"The rush and press of air are terrific. My chest seems to be getting stoved in and my ribs feel inclined to give way. I have difficulty in exhaling. The smallest opening of the nasal valve seems to give too much air. My blood rapidly becomes superoxygenated, and I experience a feeling of exhilaration. I should like to shout or at least say 'Ha, ha!' but the pressure of the wind is too great for me to say anything, and I feel it best to keep my mouth shut."

It was much the same when taking a trial flight in a monoplane from the Blériot school. At the end of the first circuit he "felt like blowing up."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

PLAYING CHAUFFEUR

By RYLAND BILL.

"This is a very gentlemanly business, being the president's aid-de-camp," said Lieutenant Brayton, "but I'd rather be the general's orderly in camp."

"Or drive a caisson," chimed in Captain Cogswell.

"Speaking of driving guns, I'd like to tackle an automobile."

"Why don't you hire out for a chauffeur?"

"By Jove, there's an idea! I believe I'll adopt it."

Brayton was just out of West Point and had been appointed one of the president's aids because he was a descendant of a commodore in the navy who flourished in the war of 1812. He hired an automobile, and after coming very near causing the wrecking of several cars and a couple of dozen persons he went back to the garage and asked to be taken on for a chauffeur. The proprietor, having a call for a car from a house in a fashionable quarter of the city and noticing Brayton's genteel appearance, sent him to do the job. Brayton pulled up beside the curbstone. He came near mounting it. A young lady standing in the window, dressed to go out, came to the door and descended to the car.

"Take me for a ride," she said—"I don't care where."

Brayton put on the clutch and speeded southward down the Potomac.

"Be careful," said the young lady as he skidded round a corner. "Have you been a driver long?"

"Yes, miss," was the reply as he barely escaped wrecking a donkey cart.

Presently they got out where the road was more open, and the young lady began to ask questions. This led to her giving her handsome chauffeur information about herself. Her father was Senator Brown, but recently elected, and Washington was new to his family. Brayton represented himself as the son of a cab driver. He said in being a chauffeur he had got a point ahead of the old man.

He was talking to the girl with the back of his head forward when he heard a toot-toot and a yell and felt a smash. An auto rounding a corner had run him down. The young lady, being in the back seat, was unhurt, but Brayton was sent flying out of his seat and landed in the street. He was picked up unconscious. The man who had plunged into his car was beside himself with anxiety. Brayton returned to consciousness and asked what was the matter. He was placed in the car that had run him down beside Miss Brown, and she directed that they be driven to her father's house.

The senator was not at home. Brayton had recovered sufficiently to desire to keep his identity a secret and gave his name to several newspaper reporters as Patrick Doolan. Miss Brown directed that he be carried into the house, but he insisted on walking, supported by a man on each side. Miss Brown wished to send him upstairs to bed, but he preferred resting on a lounge.

West Point is a good school to educate young men to hard knocks, and Brayton had the pluck of a soldier. Nevertheless he "sojered." Miss Brown was so pretty, so attentive, so sympathetic, that he preferred to linger. So he made several feeble attempts to stand on his feet, but when he saw the color leave her cheeks at witnessing the effort on him, rather than give her pain—which he did not feel himself—he lay down again.

Senator Brown, who was busy at the capital at a meeting of a committee of which he was a member, did not hear of the accident, and since his daughter had not been injured he was not informed of it. About 6 o'clock in the evening he came home, and Mrs. Brown met him at the door to tell him what had occurred and that the injured chauffeur was lying on a lounge in the library, being fed dainties and braced with choice wines by Alice, their daughter. Senator Brown said he would go in and see the man and have him removed to his home or a hospital, whichever seemed best.

When the gentleman stood in the library doorway and saw young Brayton lying on a lounge, a table covered with luxuries beside him and Alice bending over him, a look of surprise dawned in his face, while Brayton returned a look of consternation. The senator was quite sure he had seen the chauffeur somewhere, and the chauffeur knew the senator very well by sight, having seen him often at the White House.

"Are you not one of the president's attendants?" asked Mr. Brown.

"It's all up with me," replied the officer. "I'm Lieutenant Brayton, the president's aid. I thought I'd turn chauffeur for a lark."

Mr. Brayton was forgiven for having endangered the life of Miss Brown and invited to remain in the house till he had recovered. He said that his chief wish was to keep the matter from being known, especially to the newspapers. Miss Alice thereupon suggested that it would be best for him to remain till every vestige of injury has disappeared.

Attended by a pretty girl, it was not to be expected that he would recover in a hurry. It was a couple of weeks before he left the house, and in a couple of weeks more his engagement with Miss Brown was announced. The secret of his escapade never leaked out.

A MESSAGE FROM A WOMAN TO WOMEN

"Every Woman Should Take "Fruit-a-tives"

LAKELET, ONT., MAY 12th, 1911

"Kindly publish this letter of mine if you think it will benefit other women who might be afflicted with the diseases I have had in the past, but am now, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives", completely cured of. It is my firm belief that every woman should take "Fruit-a-tives" if she wants to keep herself in good health.

Before taking "Fruit-a-tives", I was constantly troubled with what is commonly known as "Nerves" or severe Nervousness. This Nervousness brought on the most violent attacks of Sick Headache, for which I was constantly taking doctors' medicine without any permanent relief. Constipation was also a source of great trouble to me and for which the Doctors said "I would have to take medicine all my life", but "Fruit-a-tives" banished all these troubles and now I am a well woman"

National Baths.

He was a gentleman who was in Washington as a minister representing Honduras. Diplomats, according to the popular conception, never say the wrong thing. They are believed to be the delicacy of language and the finesse of vocabulary. This particular diplomat entered an uptown barber shop in Washington and got a shave after he had explained what he wanted in words which were more full of accent than of fluency.

"Now, sir," said the barber briskly, "can't we give you a Turkish bath."

"No-o-o!" replied the man from Honduras, with some hesitation. "You see, I'm no—no Turk."—Popular Magazine.

Plants and Electricity.

The idea of growing plants by electricity has been referred to as the "last cry" in gardening and floriculture; but, as a matter of fact, the idea is nearly a couple of centuries old. As long ago as 1747 electricity, as an aid to plant cultivation, was advocated by a writer in the old Gentleman's Magazine, who mentioned the astounding results he had achieved from electrifying a myrtle seventeen times.—London Tit-Bits.

Nurse's Years Of Experience

Proves Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Best Treatment for Kidney and Stomach Troubles.

The trained nurse has even greater opportunities than the doctor himself to watch the action of medicine in specific cases.

For years the writer of this letter has been recommending the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills among her patients, and is firmly convinced that no treatment is so prompt and effective.

This is the most valuable evidence obtainable, and we believe that all who know Mrs. Duffy will appreciate it to the full, knowing that she would not recommend anything in which she had not the fullest confidence.

Mrs. Duffy, nurse, 35 Lewis Street, Toronto, writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for years, and recommend them to my patients for all disorders of the kidneys, liver and stomach. In all my professional experience I have found nothing better." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THE LOVELIGHT IN HIS EYES.

He Thought That Was What Made All the People Stare.

"You have read in novels how a great emotion will transform a man's countenance, how a poet's face in the hour of inspiration sets the sparrows singing on the housetops. My own features are of the commonplace type—nobody thinks of regarding them twice—yet I, too, have had my experiences, declares a contributor to Punch.

"They occurred on the morning when I received a letter from Phyllis, which said briefly, 'Yes, I think so.' Not much in that, you may say, but when I tell you it was the delayed answer to a proposal of marriage you will understand. Shortly after reading it I stepped out into the street to walk to the office.

"What a walk that was! The light in my eyes seemed to brighten the very sun; the song in my heart was echoed from a hundred motorbuses. Never have the winds of May wooed so winningly a February morning.

"Every man I met turned his head as if loath to take his eyes from my irradiated countenance. Every girl seemed to take the keenest pleasure in my happiness and smiled at me prettily as if infected by its contagion. 'Tis well,' I thought (in blank verse), 'that Phyllis now is pledged to me or, by my troth, these flattering glances shot from beauty's eyes might make my heart unfaithful.'

"It was only when I reached the office and looked in the glass that I discovered the large black smudge on the end of my nose."

The monoplane of which Colonel Cody had such great hopes fetched no more than $70. Without the engine Mr. Leon Cody reckoned that it had cost $2,500.

FERVID LANGUAGE.

Political Orators of To-day Mild Beside Their Predecessors.

It is the fashion nowadays, if a politician speaks his mind in plain English "understanded of the people," to hold up shocked hands and to declare how sadly degenerate the modern statesman is when compared with his dignified predecessors. This opinion is entirely wrong and it requires but little familiarity with political oratory of generations that are gone to prove how erroneous it is. In fact, it would be difficult to name a leading legislator of the last century who has not spoken his mind far more freely and bluntly than any law-maker of our day.

There was no man whose tongue could be more scathing than Benjamin Disraeli, from the day when, in one of his first electoral speeches at Aylesbury, he addressed his opponents thus, "Your most brilliant argument is a groan and your happiest repartee a hiss . . . I have to open your great thick heads. If I bawl like you, you will leave this place as ignorant as you entered it."

Friend and foe alike fell under the lash of "Dizzy's vitriolic tongue. He denounced Lord John Russell as "an individual who, on the principle that good vinegar is the corruption of bad wine, has been metamorphosed from an incapable author into an eminent politician." Palmerston reminded him of "a favorite footman on easy terms with his mistress." He described him as "combining the smartness of an attorney's clerk with the intrigue of a Greek of the lower empire," and addressed him thus, "Our language commands no expression of scorn which has not been exhausted in the celebration of your character. There is no conceivable idea of degradation which has not been, at some period or another, associated with your career."

But it was on O'Connell that he emptied the vials of his smartest scorn. "He is," he said, "a systematic liar and a beggarly cheat, a swindler and a poltroon. . . . His public and private life are equally profligate; he has committed every crime that does not require courage." "I am not one who will be insulted by a yahoo without chastising it," he said, a little later, to O'Connell himself. "I will seize the first opportunity of inflicting upon you a castigation which will make you remember and repent the insults you have lavished upon me."

To the "Liberator's" son he said, "I wished to express the scorn in which I hold his character, and the disgust with which his conduct inspires me. I shall take every opportunity of holding your father's name up to public contempt, and I fervently pray that you, or someone of his blood, may attempt to avenge the inextinguishable hatred with which I shall pursue his existence."

But for plain speaking Disraeli had at least his match in the "yahoo," O'Connell, of whom Gladstone said, "He was the greatest popular leader whom the world has ever seen." No politician was more abused; none ever gave back more lustily blow for blow, striking on all sides indiscriminately. Among the epithets heaped on "Ireland's greatest son" were "the turbulent blackguard," "the Irish mendicant," "that unredeemed and unredeemable scoundrel," "the worst being in human form that ever disgraced the floor of an English Senate." While The Times crowned the pyramid of abuse by surely the most scathing and scurrilous lines ever penned, opening thus:

Scum condensed of Irish bog!
Nurse of murder, treason's factor!
Ruffian, coward, demagogue!
Boundless liar, base detractor!

But O'Connell was no man to quail, even before such a tornado of scurrilous abuse. He had an inexhaustible stock of thunderbolts of his own, and he launched them fearlessly, even pitilessly. He dubbed Wellington a "madman" and Peel a "driveller." Sir Henry Hardinge, Chief Secretary of Ireland, he called a "wretched English scribe—a paltry, contemptible little Englishman, who had the audacity to pen his pitiful and contemptible name to an atrocious proclamation.

Oldest Registrar.

The record public service of Mr. John Smith, of Shotteswell, Banbury, Eng., has added lustre to a well-known name by establishing a record. He is resigning his position as registrar of births, marriages, and deaths for the Cropredy district after fifty-three years' service. He is eighty years of age, and is the oldest registrar in England.

From Soldier to Vicar.

Rev. Richard Tebbs, who rose to be the vicar of St. Thomas, Wigan, Eng., after starting life as a private soldier in the army, has died at Wigan at the age of sixty-one.

He enlisted in the 2nd Battalion, Queen's Regiment, when seventeen, and served in India during the Parsee riots at Bombay. In 1874 he was in charge of the military police entrusted with the protection of the women and children at Colaba.

Mr. Tebbs was bought out of the army in 1876, and started on a clerical career. He was deputy grand chaplain of the Orange Order in England.

A YEAR INDOORS

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were wasting, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

A Professional Love Letter Writer.

In the American Magazine appears under the title "A Handy Man With the Pen" the confession of a man who is a professional writer of love letters, after dinner speeches, obituary poetry, etc. The following is one of the stories he tells about writing love letters for a customer:

"One day last fall a handsome young man, much embarrassed, appeared and after some hesitation confessed that he had neglected his education and was corresponding with a young woman with whom he was very much in love. She was a college graduate, and he desired to have his letters as well written as hers were, so he wanted me to write them. I advised him to write simply and as he talked, but he persisted, and twice a week he came, informed me concisely and briefly what he wanted to say to her, and I wrote the frills into them. He copied the letters himself, blushing frequently as he read what I had added in the way of sentiment. That young lady received some of the most wonderful love letters ever written. They were married during the winter."

TO FORCE RECOGNITION.

London Policemen's Union Growing Despite Officials.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The policemen of London have become inoculated with the trade union germ and a provisional committee, drawn from their ranks, is busy to-day enrolling members in what has been named the Metropolitan Police Trade Union.

Every member of the force below the rank of superintendent is eligible for membership, and the men are joining in such numbers that the organizers anticipate that the union will be strong enough by Christmas to force the authorities to recognize it.

The metropolitan police force at the end of 1912 consisted of 33 superintendents, 662 inspectors, 2,537 sergeants and 17,031 policemen, making a total of 20,329, but this figure has been somewhat increased this year.

WILL IS CONTESTED.

Relatives Want Priest Declared of Unsound Mind.

KINGSTON, Oct. 29.—Relatives of the late Rev. Father Brophy, who died recently leaving an estate valued at $177,000, are taking action to oppose the will. It is stated that Father Brophy made the greater part of the money through insurance. Years ago, it is claimed, he insured his life on the endowment plan, and at the end of the specified time drew out $11,000. The insurance agent advised him to insure his (the agent's) life and he did so for $75,000. The former died in less than a year's time, Father Brophy securing the money. It is said the will is to be contested on the ground that the testator was of unsound mind he made it, the greater part of the estate being devised to the Roman Catholic clergy.

Was Indian's Name Struck Off.

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 29.—A man named Prego, who is classed by the police as a member of the prohibited list, when sworn in the police court yesterday stated that he had received whisky over every bar in Brockville during the past thirty days, and accordingly all the proprietors will be summoned for a violation of the Liquor Act. Enquiry shows that the license inspector struck the name from the list at the request of relatives. This will not deter the prosecution. The ground will be taken that the hotelkeepers were aware that the inspector had no authority for his act, and that the name could not be removed for the space of one year without the order of the county judge.

One More Aviator Killed.

RHEIMS, France, Oct. 29.—Another French army aviator, Quartermaster-Sergeant Canal, was killed yesterday. He had only recently become a pupil of the military aviation school and was flying alone for the first time. His monoplane had reached a height of 300 feet when it made a sudden lurch to the side and the aviator was thrown out and killed.

Will Enforce Duties.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 29.—Wheat and wheat flour will not be admitted free to the United States from those countries which decline to admit free of duty similar products from the United States.

Customs collectors have been advised that the countries now doing so are Great Britain, Finland and the Netherlands.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a diseased part, the cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming of fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Avenue, Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Company and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema!

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, or we will send free trial box if you send this advertisement and a 1c stamp (to pay return postage). Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

CONFESSION FOR PARDON.

Sen. Stilwell Offered To Expose "Boss Rule" In New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Stephen J. Stilwell, former state Senator from the Bronx, acquitted of bribery charges by the Senate last spring, convicted afterwards by a jury and now serving his sentence in Sing Sing, appealed to William Sulzer, governor, for a pardon and offered, in return, to expose the inner workings of "Boss rule" in New York, "whereby representatives in the Legislature are placed between the alternatives of political death and destruction by failure to obey the boss or the violation of their obligations to the people."

Stilwell's offer is contained in a letter made public by Sulzer yesterday.

Warned of Big Storms.

DULUTH, Minn., Oct. 29.—Warnings of a northeasterly storm were posted at all points along Lake Superior yesterday by the U. S. Weather Bureau, and marine traffic was at a standstill, while boats waited for what was predicted to be the hardest blow of the year.

A small fleet cleared Monday, and some anxiety is felt for their safety, as none of the boats carry wireless apparatus.

Blizzard In Western States.

DULUTH, Oct. 29.—The first real winter weather of the season struck the western portion of the northwest and Canada yesterday and reached Duluth last night. A northwest blizzard, heavy snow and low temperature prevails here, and cold will continue all day to-day, according to forecast.

ELY'S CREAM BALM OPENS CLOGGED NOSTRILS AND HEAD—CATARRH GOES

Instantly Clears Air Passages; You Breathe Freely, Nasty Discharge Stops, Head Colds and Dull Headache Vanish.

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake to-night struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

ANAEMIC SINCE CHILDHOOD

How Miss Holmes Regained Her Health.

If you are anaemic, you need more iron in your blood, and the tell-tale symptoms are a pale face—colourless lips, ashen finger nails, poor circulation, and short breath, and more serious diseases are easily contracted when in this condition.

What Vinol did for Miss Yvonne Holmes of Fall River, Mass., it will do for every anaemic run-down person She says: "I have been weak and anaemic since childhood, always had 'that tired feeling.' Tonic after tonic was tried with little or no result until Vinol was recommended, and after taking three bottles, my appetite and digestion have been improved. I do not suffer any more from insomnia, nor do I have distressing headaches as formerly, and I am stronger than I have been for years."

We ask every anaemic or run-down, weak person in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not do all we claim. McDermid & Jury, cor. George and Charlotte Sts.; also Payne's Drug Store, cor. George and Simcoe Sts.

TRENTON TO HAVE A FIELD BATTERY

TRENTON, Oct. 29.—It is learned that this fall and winter two new batteries of Canadian field artillery will be organized in the third division. Trenton has practically been decided upon as the headquarters of one, which will complete the 10th brigade, which now comprise the 14th battery of Cobourg, and the 24th of Peterborough. Capt. A. E. Bywater, of the 49th Regiment, has been spoken of as the commanding officer of the new unit. Lieut.-Col. T. W. H. Young, who is now in Saskatoon, commands the brigade.

Just where the headquarters of the other battery, the organization of which is under consideration, will be located, is not as yet decided. It will complete the 8th brigade of Ottawa, Lieut.-Col. C. H. Maclaren commanding. The 2nd and 23rd batteries of the capital, are now in this brigade. At any rate the new battery will be formed in the Ottawa district, as well as the question of whether the men are available for recruiting; horses must be available.

The last battery organized in the division was the 34th of Belleville, which trained at Petawawa this year. It made up the 9th brigade, with the Kingston and Gananoque batteries. A howitzer brigade, C.F.A. is authorized for the divisional troops, but has not been organized. In fact all the divisions are short on artillery.

Oldest Ball Game.

Tennis is pronounced the oldest of all the existing ball games. It is impossible to give its origin, but it was played in Europe during the middle ages in the parks or ditches of the feudal castles. It was at first the pastime of kings and nobles, but later it grew popular with all classes. The French took it from the Italians and the English from the French.—New York Press.

ENDS BACKACHE AND KIDNEY DISORDERS

Croxone Helps Lifeless Organs Regain Health, Strength and Activity

It is useless, dangerous and unnecessary to be tortured with the digging, twisting pains of backache or suffer disagreeable kidney and bladder disorders when Croxone is guaranteed to promptly and surely relieve all such misery.

Croxone masters these troubles because it quickly reaches the cause of the disease. It soaks right into the stopped up, inactive kidneys, through the membranes and linings; cleans out out the little filtering glands; neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and makes the kidneys filter and sift from the blood the waste and poisonous matter that clog the system and cause such troubles.

It does not matter whether you have but slight symptoms or a chronic, aggravated case, it is practically impossible to take Croxone without results.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if you are not entirely satisfied the very first time you use it.

STRIKE IS SANGUINARY.

Colorado Mine Trouble Has Cost 99 Lives In Month.

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 29.—While the ordering of troops to the coal field followed the failure of Governor Ammons' efforts to arrange a settlement, an additional reason for the action was found yesterday in the list of casualties and property damage that have marked the thirty-five days of the strike. These strike incidents were summarised as follows:—Battles and skirmishes, 18; killed, 28; wounded, 41; personal assaults, 6; buildings and bridges wrecked or damaged by dynamite, 11; property loss, estimated, $50,000; loss in wages, estimated, $2,500,000.

Since almost the first day of the strike, Sept. 23, the governor has been importuned by authorities and citizens of Las Animas and Huerfano counties to send troops to the coal camps and equally insistent representations have been made against such action.

Fatal Battle With Strikers.

TRINIDAD, Colo., Oct. 29.—In a battle which is believed to have started at 5.30 o'clock yesterday morning between approximately 1,200 strikers and possibly 300 mine guards in the camps at Hastings, Delagos, Tobasco and Berwind, one mine guard and three strikers are said to have been killed.

EXONERATES FRIEND.

Priest Says Muret Did Not Do Any Counterfeiting.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. — Hans Schmidt, one-time priest and confessed slayer of Anna Aumuller, took the witness stand in the Federal Court yesterday afternoon, and took full responsibility for the counterfeiting operations for which his associate, "Doctor" Ernest Muret, is on trial.

"I made the money. I did it," shouted Schmidt, rising from the witness chair. "It's no person's business why I did it. That is between God and me. Muret refused to help me. I bought the whole equipment. Muret had nothing to do with my murder of Anna Aumuller. He never met her. I murdered her."

In order to conceal from Muret the fact that he was counterfeiting, he said he did much of his work in the vestry of St. John's Catholic Church, where he was a priest.

A WEAK HEART

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefit.

UNION BANK OF CANADA

Open a Housekeeping Account and Pay Your Bills by Cheque

There is a decided advantage in depositing your housekeeping money in the Union Bank of Canada, and issuing Cheques for your expenditures. You avoid the risk of keeping a considerable sum in your home or carrying it when shopping, and each Cheque, when cashed, becomes a Receipt.

ASKS GREAT POWERS TO WAIT FOR A WHILE

Secretary of State Bryan Requests European Countries Not to Make a Pronouncement of Their Policy

STATES TO INVESTIGATE

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 29.—After a conference with President Wilson, Secretary of State Bryan today cabled the European powers courteously to kindly withhold their pronouncements of policy in connection with the Mexican situation until the United Sates had made a fuller investigation and report. In view of the confidence which has been placed in the United States in connection with this matter to date it is expected that the European nations will comply. The United States will, it is understood, make immediate representations to Mexico, demanding that Huerta's influence in elections be withdrawn and a vote taken with the free will of the people at large. At the recent elections Huerta's emmissaries practically held guns at the heads of the voters, compelling them to vote for Huerta's men or stay away from the polls.

REV. DR. SYMONDS IS UNDECIDED

Regarding Call to the Presidency of Western University

MONTREAL, Oct. 29.—Rev. Dr. Herbert Symonds, who has returned from a short visit to New York, acknowledges that he has received a call to the presidency of the Western University, London, Ont., but asserts that he will probably not make a definite decision for some time to come.

A committee from the board of governors of the Western University visited Dr. Symonds in Montreal and laid the matter before him. The members have not yet made their report to the governors.

Dr. Symonds became prominent some months ago when he was censured by the Anglican House of Bishops for preaching in a Presbyterian Church.

Special Services

Anniversary Fittingly Observed by Havelock Methodist Church

The anniversary services of the Havelock Methodist Church were held on Sunday last. Two large congregations attended and the sermons preached by Rev. A. H. Foster of Colborne were much appreciated. The Choir, under the direction of Dr. Kindred, rendered an excellent programme of special music, assisting greatly in the services. Miss Lottie Chiles presided at the organ in her usual finished manner. The order of serivce was as follows:

GROCERS ARE FINED $50

Government Inspector Charged Them With Selling Adulterated Maple Syrup

CITY GETS $2.60 OF FINE

Manley Smith, a blacklister, appeared in court this morning. He pleaded "guilty" to being found drunk and was remanded for a week.

In police court yesterday two local grocers were fined $50 and costs each, amounting to $64.60, for selling maple syrup in an adulterated condition. The information was laid by the government inspector.

Although the fine is a considerable one, the City only benefits to the extent of $2.60 from each of the merchants. The government receives the fine of $50, and $12 is paid for the analysis of the syrup. The City's share, $2,60, comprises the costs of the case.

Travel In Special Train

Quaker Girl Company is a Monster Organization

But few people realize the task it is to transport a big musical organization around the country, such as "The Quaker Girl," which comes to the Grand next Saturday, Nov. 1, for two performances. The organization of this company consists of 86 people. There are fifteen singing principals, a chorus of 52, a stage crew of eight, and then a number of maids, valets and wardrobe helpers, which runs the total up near the century mark. In order to carry this number of people it requires on all movements, three sleeping cars, two day coaches and two sixty-foot baggage cars. This, with the dining car, makes a special train of seven cars by which the company travels everywhere, and the amount paid out to the railways will average from $500 to $1,000 a wek. The transferring of the scenery from the depot and back is a matter of $200 or so a week, so that the travelling expense alone of the organization will come close to a thousand dollars a week. When this is added to the salary list, royalty, newspaper advertising, printing and bill posting, musician's salaries, and a thousand and one incidental bills, it can be readily understood that it costs a pretty penny to keep "The Quaker Girl" going, and unless the business is practically capacity of all theatres played, there is a heavy loss.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

Examiner Special:

Following is the official report of the Toronto Live Stock market:

Receipts were moderate—97 cars. 1787 cattle, 825 hogs, 1400 sheep and lambs, 100 calves.

New Grocery For South End

That the southern part of this City is growing rapidly is evidenced not only by the residences that are being built, but by the business stands that are now occupied, and will be occupied in the near future. One of the latest business growths is that on the corner of Prince and Aylmer Streets, where Mr. F. C. Rooke will build a store and put in a stock of groceries. He expects to open up about the first of December.

HOW PETER W. LANGAARD FLIRTED WITH DEATH BEFORE THE MOVING PICTURE MACHINES—Young Canadian rescued American moving-picture man. This diagram shows the Niagara Gorge leading to the famous Whirlpool, where Captain Webb, of England, the Stantons of Toronto, and many others have lost their lives. On October 23rd, Peter W. Langaard left the Maid of the Mist landing on the Canadian side in a small motor boat as a subject for the moving-picture men. He tossed through the whirlpool rapids safely and passed into the whirlpool, where driftwood clogged the propeller. Repeatedly he was drawn to the centre of the whirlpool and each time by balancing his body he managed to keep the boat from being sucked down or upset. The strain, which lasted several hours, was exhausing to both man and spectators. As darkness set in, street car searchlights were turned across the whirlpool. A crowd numbering a thousand had gathered, when Fred Preston, of Niagara Falls, Ont., volunteered to swim out with a life-line tied to his wrist. After two attempts he reached the boat and held its side as rescued and rescuer were slowly pulled ashore.

COMPLETION OF STREET PAVING PROGRAMME

Is Looked For This Week—Board of Works Committee Will Meet This Evening

CITY HALL NOTES

The regular weekly session of the Board of Works Committee will be held this evening, providing Alderman Buller can muster sufficient members to constitute a quorum. The work of the Committee during the past year has increased to an extent that warranted the members pledging themselves to meet at least once a week in order to keep apace with the work. These meetings have been held regularly with one or two exceptions. The Committee practically constitutes a clearing house for complaints of every description, and it is through this department that the greatest amount of money is expended.

Charity Board.

The Central Charity Board met on Tuesday evening with the following members present: Messrs. H. Rush (chairman), J. Carveth, C. McClelland, R. C. Braund, J. Batten, and Relief Officer Miller.

The Relief Officer reported that he had rendered needed assistance to a number of parties during the month. Three individuals were also sent to the Protestant home during that period.

The regular monthly statement is as follows.

Statement of Orders Given.

	Since Last Meeting.	During 1913.
Groceries	$ 32.00	$ 769.00
Wood	13.50	457.75
Tickets	———	16.15
Sundries	223.00	$1,698.28
	$288.50	$2,941.18

The annual appropriation for the Relief Department for the current year is $2,000, and for the Protestant Home $1,654.86; while the sum of $433.42 is set aside for the House of Providence.

Street Paving.

With favourable weather, the city's paving programme for 1913 will be completed this week. The work of laying the asphalt on the west side of George street was concluded this morning and a start made on the east side. The last section of concrete base will also be laid to-day. Following the completion of the George street section, the contractors will close down their plant for the winter. The duty of arranging for additional street paying to be commenced in the early spring will devolve upon the incoming council.

PACKAGES MUST BE STRONG ENOUGH

To Carry Contents—Transportation Companies Assert Right to Refuse Freight

The Canadian transportation companies notified their agents at various points to refuse all freights in fibreboard, pulpboard, or double faced corrugated strawboard packages, unless the packages are fully strong enough to carry the contents. Complaints have been received that these packages are reaching destination in a damaged condition, evidence that shipments are being sent to railways in packages that are not of sufficient strength to safely transport their contents. Agents have, therefore, been notified that henceforward they must positively refuse to accept shipments that do not fully comply with the requirements and specifications provided in the Canadian Freight Classification. In the past, agents have had the right to accept such packages at an increased freight rate of 20 per cent. From now on, agents have no option in the matter, and must refuse such packages.

FOUND MISSING SISTER IN THIS CITY

After an Absence of 27 Years —Mother Died a Few Months Ago

RESIDES ON AYLMER STREET

A short time ago R. H. Sandy, of Pomeroy, Ohio, U.S.A., wrote to the Peterborough Police Department in search of information concerning the whereabouts of his sister, Rebecca Sandy, whom he had not heard from for upwards of twenty-seven years. Chief of Police Thompson referred the communication to the local press, where it received due publicity. Since then it has been learned that Mrs. James Head, wife of Mr. James Head, proprietor of the Montreal House, 282 Aylmer street, is the missing party referred to in the letter from Pomeroy.

The writer in his communication to the Police Department stated that his mother died on September 10th of this year. The brother was particularly anxious to obtain information concerning his sister whom he has since communicated with.

A. O. U. W. Held Successful Concert

The Ancient Order of United Workmen held a Concert and At Home in the Foresters' Hall on Simcoe Street, last night, which was fairly well attended.

J. J. Turner, Sr., Master Workman, took the chair at 8.15 o'clock. On the platform with him were Mr. M. D. Carder, Grand Recorder, and J. Lockie Wilson, representing the Grand Lodge; Mr. Blair, Organizer, and Mr. Miscampbell, Chief Ranger, of Chemong Court I. O. F.

During the evening two excellent addresses were rendered by Mr. M. D. Carder, Grand Recorder, and Mr. J. Lockie Wilson.

The A. O. U. W. was oganized 34 years ago, and since its inception Mr. M. D. Carder has been Grand Recorder. During his term of office the Order had paid out $18,000,000 to the relatives of deceased membrs, and the membership had grown until it was now 30,000.

The programme, which was successfully rendered, was as follows:

Instrumental solo—A. Nichols.
Solo—Geo. Harris
Solo—Miss F. Emmerson.
Instrumental solo—A. Nichols.
Reading—J. John.
Address—M. D. Carder.
Scotch song—R. Henry.
Intermission—
Solo—Robt. Henry.
Address—J. Lockie Wilson.
Solo—J. J. Turner, Sr.
Recitation—J. Lockie Wilson.

After the programme, which was enjoyed by all, refreshments of the choicest order were served by Mr. T. H. Hooper. These were splendidly prepared and greatly appreciated.

Resignation Is Not Forthcoming

At a meeting of the Council on Tuesday evening the Police Committee brought in a report recommending that Chief Gummerson tender his resignation forthwith. This report was adopted without a dissenting voice. A copy of this resolution was handed to the Chief by Town Clerk Sanders the following morning. A week has rolled around and there has been no change in the condition of affairs. Mr. Sheriff stated that as soon as the Mayor returned there would be a special meeting of the Council to finally dispose of the matter. The Mayor has returned but as yet there has been no meeting. The public would like to know who rules the affairs of this Town, the Mayor and Council, or the Police? — Port Hope Guide.

MUCH COMMENT OVER DEMAND OF PROVINCES

General Impression Seems to be That Government Will Not Consent to Subsidy Proposal

CONFERENCE CONTINUES

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Oct. 29.—The somewhat startling demand for increased subsidies contained in the resolution passed yesterday by the Provincial Premiers, has been the cause of considerable comment here. The general impression appears to be that the Govrnment will not consent to the proposal to hand over yearly to the provinces a tithe of all excise and customs revenue collected. Apart from the fact that it would mean the doubling of the present subsidies without prejudicing any claims for increases, it is believed that serious economic complications might ensue by the adoption of such a measure of Dominion aid. This morning the conference again considered the question of representation and it is believed the deliberations will cease to-night.

Engineer Murphy In Peterborough

In Connection With the Removal of C. P. R. Poles Off George Street

Mr. John Murphy, engineer of the Dominion Railway Board, was in the City in conection with the Council's application to have the C.P.R. telegrah poles removed off George Street. It has been suggested that the Company bring their wires from the C.P.R station to their uptown office by way of Water Street. Engineer Murphy will make a report to the Dominion Railway Board regarding the matter.

FAMILY IS UNITED AGAIN

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, OCT. 29.—After waiting for days for his beloved wife and family, who were survivors from the Volturno, Joseph Ernst of this City was rewarded to-day by the welcome sight of his loved ones stepping off the Grand Trunk train from Halifax. They had been delayed by the immigration officials and Ernst was very nearly giving up long deferred hope when they appeared.

SIXTY REPORTED DROWNED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

SAN SALVADORE, Central America, Oct. 29.—Sixty people are reported drowned by floods in the interior the last two days. Some of the victims are Europeans and North American whites.

GOLD LAKE HUNT CLUB ARE READY

The members of the Gold Lake Hunt Club are all prepared to leave on Thursday for the opening of the deer season. Among those going are Messrs. Fuller, Carruthers, Brown, G. Gunsolus, C. Westlake, H. Evans, W. Evans, M. Dobson A. Mitchell Gus Sawers, J. Gibbs, W. White, J. Leary and J. Lahey. Messrs. Sewers and Mitchell are already at the camp, having remained after the departure of the fishing crowd.

IMPORTANT REAL ESTATE TRANSACTION

Eastwood Property on Hunter St. Has Been Purchased by Jas. R. Bell, the Local Grocer

WILL BE RE-MODELLED

Another important real estate deal, involving the Eastwood property on the south side of Hunter street, has been consumated. Mr. Jas. A. Bell, the Hunter street grocer, has purchased it from Mr. Isaac Eastwood, who formerly operated an hotel in the building. The building is better known as the old Noble House.

Mr. Bell intends to remodel the building, and make it completely up-to-date in every particular. The lower floor will be used for stores, while the upper floors will be made into flats.

This property, being so centrally situated, is very valuable, and though Mr. Bell, when seen by The Examiner this afternoon, did not care to make public the exact amount of money involved in the transaction, stated that it was a comparatively large amount.

The work of renovating and altering the building is to commence at once, and will be completed within the course of a few months.

It will be remembered that only a short time ago, the former owner was brought into court because the walls of the building did not satisfy the demands of the law, in regard to their thickness. The City Council, however, decided that the by-law governing the matter was antiquated and made provision to have the walls of the building remain as they were.

IMPROVEMENTS AT GOSPEL HALL

Render a Change in the Order of Service Necessary

The regular mid-week service in connection with the Gospel Hall, will be held on Thursday evening at the home of Mr. G. W. Mulligan, 804 George Street. The change in date and place is necessitated by reason of the improvements that are being made at the Gospel Hall, and which will be completed in time for the regular services on Sunday next.

Meeting Of Court Stanley

Court Stanley, No. 7680, Ancient Order of Foresters, held a large attended meeting in the Sons of England Hall, Hunter Street, on Tuesday evening. Brother James Henry, Sub-Chief Ranger, occupied the chair in the absence of the Chief Ranger. Two candidates were duly initiated and six applications for membership were received.

After the regular business, Brother T. Henry introduced to the Court the members of the coming Juvenile Court which at last night's meting was named the Excelsior. Over twenty-five members have signified their intention of joining the Juvenile Court. The age limit ranges from five to seventeen years. At seventeen the members are transferred to the regular court.

A committee was appointed to make arrangements for the coming annual 'At Home,' which will be held during the course of the next few weeks.

LIGHTS ON BRIDGE HAVE BEEN REPLACED

The lamps on the Smith Street Bridge, that have been out of commission for several weeks, were burning as brightly as ever last night. Fire Chief Howard and some of the electricians in the employ of the City, replaced the broken lamps and globes yesterday afternoon.

CLAIMS ADJUSTED

Legal Committee Refuse to Abrogate Original Recommendation Concerning Claim of C. E. Adams

ONE CLAIM SETTLED

The familiar face of Mr. C. E. Adams, 103 Maria street, was manifest at a meeting of the Legal Committee, which was held on Tuesday evening. Those who had the pleasure of renewing acquaintances with the aforesaid mentioned ratepayer, were His Worship Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen G. N. Gordon (chairman), G. A. Gillespie, W. J. Johnston, Wm. Langford, Jr., and G. W. Green.

No less familiar to the Committee is the compensation claim, which Mr. Adams hopes to extract from the civic treasury in the form of five hundred real dollars, upon the grounds that his property in East City was damaged to that extent as a result of a railway siding that was constructed adjacent to the property in question.

Not a Charity Seeker.

After Mr. Adams had assured the Committee that he was not an applicant for charity and that his claim had been ignored by the Council, the members of the Committee conducted an examination for discovery, which resulted as follows:

Alderman Gordon—"What actual damage did you suffer and how do you fix the amount of your claim?"

Mr. Adams—"The approach to my property was obstructed by the siding in consequence of which the property was damaged"

Alderman Gordon—"To what extent?"

Mr. Adams—"Five hundred dollars."

Mayor Bradburn—"How long have you owned it?"

Mr. Adams—"About ten years."

"You didn't raise any objections until after the siding wa sput in," interpolated the Mayor.

"When did you expect me to raise an objection?" countered Mr. Adams.

Mayor Bradburn—"When you saw the plans for the siding in the municipal office."

"When I saw the plans the second time," said Mr. Adams, "I did not recognize them, as the original blueprints owing to a number of alterations that were made. What I would like to know is whether you propose to affirm or ignore the claim?"

The Finale.

Alderman Gordon assured Mr. Adams that the matter would receive the consideration of the Committee, whereupon the claimant left the committee room. After a brief discussion it was moved by Alderman Green, and seconded by Mayor Bradburn that the Committee make no further recommendation regarding the five hundred dollar claim of Mr. Adams.

The siding which Mr. Adams complains of, was put in by the C.P.R. to serve the Vermont Marble Company's works. The construction of the switch is said to be esponsible for a bank of earth that fronts Mr. Adams' property.

Mr. Huxley's Claim.

City Solicitor Hall was given authority to settle the claim of John Huxley for an amount not to exceed $140. This represents the amount suggested by Mr. D. O'Connell, solicitor for Huxley. The latter, it will be remembered, fell into a sewer excavation on Chralotte street a short time ago, and sustained injuries to his face.

Contractors Settle.

The claim of Catherine Gourlay, of Keene, was settled by Foley and Gleason, paving contractors, for the sum of $65. Miss Gourlay was thrown out of a vehicle on Hunter street during the construction of the pavement. The accident, it is said, was due to an obstruction maintained by the paving company.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The Business Mens' and Employed Boys' classes both had a record attendance last night. The business men turned out twenty strong, and the employed boys' class lined up with 25 boys in line.

The Senior Boys' class meet to-night at 7.00 p.m. for floor work. Business men Thursday at 6.45 p.m., employed boys 7.45 p.m.

The opening game in the Employed Boys' Basketball League was played last night, when Pringle's Leaders defeated Hamilton's Rovers, in a well played game, the score being 16 to 9. The next game in this league will be played Thursday, when the Invincibles meet the Brownies.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The Bible Study Class on "The Manhood of the Master," conducted by Mrs. Grey, General Secretary of the Y.W.C.A. every Sunday morning is attended by a number of interested enthusiastic students. It is our earnest desire that more young ladies will join us, for both Bible and Mission study classes. This is an age of study and research along Bible lines and we, as young women, cannot afford to neglect it.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 29, 1913

SOUTH BRUCE.

To-morrow the voting in the third of the five by-elections which will be held, it is assumed, before the meeting of Parliament, will take place in South Bruce. The result, judging from precedent cannot be predicted with any confidence. Unlike East Middlesex, South Bruce is not a Tory "hive." It's representation since the riding was created in 1903, has not been of one party complexion. In 1904 it went Liberal by 144 votes, and in 1908 and 1911 J. J. Donnelly, Conservative, whose elevation to the Senate makes the present election necessary, carried it by 193 and 103 votes respectively. The record of the old riding shows a similar freedom of thought on the part of the electors. Originally Conservative at the time of Confederation, South Bruce elected Honourable Edward Blake in 1872, 1874 and 1875, reverting to the Conservative side again in 1878. From that time, party honours in the matter of representation have been fairly even. If the electors are allowed to express an opinion without undue influence, one might risk the risky game of prophecy. But under the Borden regime as we have had demonstrated, the past two years, it is folly to talk of the free and independent electorate pronouncing a verdict. While in the main, electors honestly divided on party lines may put honest convictions into the marking of their ballots, there is in every constituency a "loose fish" element subject—anxiously subject—to the sinister influences which the Minister of Corruption of the Borden Cabinet has shown himself as proficient in administering. Under such circumstances the result of an election unless it shows superiority to such influences, tells us nothing dependable of the honest sentiment of the riding where the election is held.

DOING ANOTHER'S DUTY.

Toronto is proposing an heroic remedy for overcoming the high prices of meat in the interests of the citizens. Alderman Dunn suggests that the city invest $200,000 in the business of providing meat for the public at reasonable prices. The city council has approved of the idea, and a by-law will be submitted for the approval of the ratepayers. If the popular vote is favourable, the Provincial government will be applied to for the necessary legislation. While the alderman's proposal may, if effectuated, do some good, there is a much easier way. Let the city council of Toronto use its influence with the government to induce the latter to do its duty. It should have some little influence for Toronto, as a Conservative city shows its confidence in the government, for it sends it eight Conservative supporters. The city council should demand that the Whitney government do its duty by prosecuting, under the laws already on the statute book, the combines, to whose conspiracy, in their own interests, but effectively against the people, the high prices are chiefly due. Then there would be no necessity for the city to go beyond its duty by entering into the meat business and taking the bread out of the mouths of the honest traders who compose the combine. Toronto in its slavery to party, permits a Conservative government, which it supports through thick and thin, to enslave it. But what can be expected in other things from Tory Orange Toronto, which swallows the Nationalist-Conservative alliance? After that, the toughest chunk of beef steak shouldn't choke it.

UNEQUAL RIGHTS.

James Larkin, the Irish Labour leader, has been sentenced to seven months in prison for sedition. This sentence may be just; but it gives rise to the question why in Ireland fish is made of one and flesh of another. If James Larkin is punished for sedition, why not a far greater offender, Sir Edward Carson? Sedition may be defined as incitement to resistance to constituted authority, and in this regard Sir Edward Carson has committed enough wrong to justify committing him for seven years, instead of seven months. Here is a mild form of the inflammatory appeals he has been publicly making for months. Speaking at Newry on Sept. 17th, Sir Edward Carson said:

"I do not hesitate to tell you that you ought to set yourselves against the constituted authority in the land. We will set up a government. I am told it will be illegal. Of course it will. Drilling is illegal, volunteers are illegal, and the government knows they are illegal; they know that the moment they interfere with you, you will not brook their interference."

Here we have a great lawyer, an eminent man preaching sedition and going scot free, while a comparatively obscure man, less dangerous, less influential, is put into jail for a lesser offence. One speaking on behalf of a party or faction that boasts of its loyalty to the Crown, which is only another name — a symbol—of "constituted authority," which Sir Edward Carson resists on the ground of a purely imaginary evil; the other speaking on behalf of humbler folk, protests against what he feels to be actual wrong. Without for one moment pronouncing upon the merits of the respective causes, one thing is apparent — equal treatment is not meted out to equal treatment against law and constituted authority.

LLOYD GEORGE ON THE LAND QUESTION

The speech of Lloyd George, at Bedford, a few days ago on the land reform problem for the old country is still the subject of world-wide controversy. Some of the Chancellor's main points were:

The landlords' powers are terrible. Landlordism is not only the greatest of all monopolies in this land; it is the least controlled of all monopolies.

The landowner can destroy cottages; drive the peasantry into exile; convert the land into a desert.

Landlordism can not only ordain a wilderness; it can maintain one. In the north of Scotland you can find the remains of the old crofts, but the crofters are not there; the land is trodden by deer.

You ought not to put the landlords into such a position that they can possibly repeat things like those which have happened in the Highlands and elsewhere; and we mean to deprive them of that temptation in future.

Even Tories admit the present system has been a ghastly failure. They have only one solution to offer—purchase; but the government are not going to burden the community with a huge national debt in order to capitalize abuses.

Agricultural labourers are paid worse, work longer hours, and are worse housed than the men in any other industry in the country.

Their wages are 12s., 13s., 14s. a week, eked out with all sorts of allowances to keep men from death and starvation. What they want is not allowances but wages.

Ninety per cent. of them receive less than the amount necessary to maintain a family on the workhouse scale.

If you have got to choose, you must take a slice out of the landlord's rent for the labourer.

The worst-paid districts are those where the sway of the landlord is greatest

At a week's notice a man is not merely without a job; he is without a home

The commons have been stolen and the labourer converted from an independent peasant to a hopeless, under paid landlord's drudge on the soil).

There is no country in the world where cultivated land is so overrun and damaged by game.

We must reduce the game by at least two-thirds.

The slums in the towns are largely to be attributed to the way in which the land has been administered.

It is no use tirkering here and mending there. You must re-cast the whole system.

A colliery has to pay a living wage to the workers, and the law says, "You must not work your men more than so many hours." Why do that beneath the surface and not on the surface?

You must secure for the labourer a ladder of progress so that the most enterprising may become substantial farmers.

An end must be put to the system by which certain railway companies give preference to foreign produce.

Greater facilities must be given to the State to acquire land on terms fair to the community as well as to the owner.

ADVICE TO SOCCER FORWARDS HOW TO SCORE GOALS

How the Goalkeeper Saves Hard Shots--Forwards Give the Game Away--Bad Centering One of Weaknesses--Draw For Manchester Senior Cup

In watching a soccer match many followers often wonder how goals are ever scored at all; and it almost seems as if the old theory that the forward play should converge in the centre, who gives the final touch, no longer holds good. As a matter of fact, the centre forwards nowadays do not score the goals. The match records show that the inside men do more of the finishing touches. It may be that the devotion of the opposing centre-half concentrates on the other's side's pivot and so makes it hard for him to get away, while the winger has more room to move in. But the fact that the inside forwards are the more prolific scorers seems to tell against the common plan which sets the back to tackle the outside forward. I think that these tactics leave the goal open more than if the wing half stuck to the wing forwards.

Many forwards also often wonder why the goalkeeper saves a good many of their shots. They little realize how completely they give the show away to the goalkeeper by an upward glance at the actual moment of shooting in the direction where they intend putting the ball. This is one of the things that the goalkeeper looks for, and if he is able to detect where the forward intends to put the ball then he is well on the way to stopping it when it is put there.

"I should add that this attempt at an anticipation can often be turned against the goalkeeper, as I have had it turned against me, by a clever forward who can disguise his actions, or who can deceive the goalkeeper into thinking he is about to put the ball into one corner and then calmly places it into the other.

I always used to watch a forward with the ball most carefully, in the hope that he would give away his intention, and the man I like best is the one who promises to do one thing and then straightway proceeds to do the exact opposite.

Centring the ball right up to the goalkeeper is one of the weaknesses of many otherwise quite good wing men. To do this is often fatal to the chance of his side scoring. If the goalkeeper knows his work he will simply jump to the ball and either catch it or punch it out of harm's way.

While the goalkeeper can use his hands, the centre forward must get his head or feet to it, and obviously the odds in the goalkeeper's favour are very great.

The centre kick which is to be of value should be so far back that it would be exceedingly risky for the goalkeeper to attempt to run out with a view to intercepting it.

I have put down some of the faults of forwards as I have noted them from time to time. There are many others, but those I have mentioned are fairly general.

Amateur International Matters.

The International Selection Committee have decided that the game between England and Holland shall be played on the Hull City ground on November 15. At the meeting it was reported that the Plymouth Argyle ground was available on February 7th next, and it was agreed that the England vs. Wales amateur international match should be played there on that date. With regard to the amateur international match at Belfast on November 8th, between England and Ireland, Mr. Jackson (Scotland) was agreed to as the referee. Mr. Morgan T. Roberts was appointed to take charge of the team. As to future amateur international matches in Ireland, the committee expressed its desire to meet Ireland's wishes that they should be played in October. A request was received that an amateur international match should be played at Dover, but its consideration was postponed.

Manchester Senior Cup.

The draw for the preliminary rounds of the Manchester Senior Cup competitions by the cup's committee is as follows:

First Qualifying Round.

Stockport County vs. Newton Heath Athletic.

HOCKEY EXECUTIVE TO HOLD MEETING FRIDAY

A meeting of the Executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club will be held in the Oriental Hotel on Friday night at 7.15 o'clock, at which important business in connection with the coming season will be discussed. It is likely that at this meeting the question of what series the Club will enter will be settled. From this distance it looks like intermediate and junior teams, with the senior team being dropped. There is plenty of material available for two good sevens, although the Juniors will have to dig up a brand new defence, Flowers being over age and Cavanah and Morrow out of the City. Capt. Kenneally is also not eligible and only three of last year's regular seven are left, in Long, Rose and Halpin, although Barrie and Richardson, who were the spares last year, and who played in the last game against Oshawa, will be of great assistance this season. It is likely that arrangements will be made to start training within a short time. Some O. H. A. clubs are already hard at work.

DENEAU MAY MANAGE BRANTFORD NEXT SEASON

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Although it has not yet been definitely announced, it is reported on good authority that Rube Deneau, former manager of the London Baseball Club, has been signed up to manage the Brantford team for 1914, and he has already landed two or three players for the Red Sox. The announcement will likely be made at Brantford to-day. Rube has lost all hope of again becoming manager of the London team, apparently, and has been conducting negotiations with Owner Tom Nelson, of the Brantford Club. The result of these negotiations is that Rube is now going ahead signing up players on Brantford contracts for next season.

Deneau Still Belongs to London.

When informed this morning that Deneau had practically been landed by Tom Nelson, President Stevely, of the local club, stated that he did not see how this could be the case, as Deneau was still a member of the London Club, and that any negotiations for him must be made through the local directors. Rube is on the London reserve list, and until the London Club sees fit to release him or trade him or sell him, he must play ball in a London uniform and on the London team.

"Deneau has no right to make negotiations with anybody for next season," continued President Stevely. "He has not yet been released, and until he is, he is in no position to make terms or sign up with anybody. I am surprised that the Brantford Club should sign him up because I believe Tom Nelson understands the situation here thoroughly. Mr. O'Neil met Mr. Nelson in New York at the time of the world series, and I believe he explained the matter to him. Mr. Nelson said at that time that he would have nothing to do with Deneau."

Matty and Reidy May Go Also.

If Rube Deneau lands the Brantford job, it is likely that Matty Matteson and Cy Reily will also become members of that team. Matty is a free agent at the present time, but Cy is on the London reserve list. However, as he and Rube are great friends, he may try and secure his release in order to sign up with the Red Sox. Reidy was merely a utility man with the London club last season, and although he played good ball, it is not likely the London Club will make much of an effort to keep him next season. In fact, Reidy himself doubted very much if he would be back with London in 1914 before he departed last month. He is thinking of retiring from the game, and has been planning a trip to Australia. With Reidy and Matteson gone, the London Club will have to secure a brand new catching department next season, and at least two men will have to be signed up.

Canadian Leaguers Have Rugby Team

St. Thomas has a Rugby Club which is largely composed of Canadian League ball players, most of whom played with St. Thomas team. Manager George Ort is Captain of the team, and among his players are Harry Howick, "Midge" Craven, "Bill" Riley and Inker. They have already played a couple of games, and will meet the St. Thomas Collegiate to-day. All are residing in St. Thomas. Ort is switching on the M. C. R.; Craven is in charge of the Grand Central billiard parlours; Howick works in the P. M. shops; Riley manages the Stanley Bowling alleys, and Inker is a brakeman on the M. C. R. Fred Gadaby, the St. Thomas boy, is also a member of the team. The team has already won a couple of games, and is a pretty formidable aggregation.

Canadian League Meets On Friday

The Canadian League will meet in Toronto on Friday next, Oct. 31. The meeting will be an important one, as it is believed that some changes in the circuit will be discussed. President Fitzgerald has been working on the question for some time, and he will likely have something definite to report.

Changes Likely.

TORONTO, Oct. 29.—In connection with the preliminary meeting of the Canadian Baseball League at the Prince George Hotel here Friday it is again stated that the proposal to drop Berlin and Guelph and substitute Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Erie, Pa., teams for next season, is seriously proposed and is likely to go through. The advent of J. J. McCaffery, president of the International League Toronto team into Canadian League circles is expected to make some changes.

RUGBY

Coach Elliott Green of the R.M.C. team left this morning for his home in Peterborough, having had to sever his connection with the Rugby team. Mr. Green could not remain with the team any longer as his holidays were over. He is employed by the General Electric Co. of Peterborough, and was a graduate of the Military College.—Kingston Standard.

FOOTBALL CHALLENGE.

The married football players of this City wish to throw out the following challenge to the single men players of Peterborough.

To play an exhibition match on Saturday, Nov. 8th, on the Exhibition Grounds, the losers of this match to pay for a supper following on with a smoker, each team to have the full team of twelve men including the linesman.

Each player is requested to forfeit to the referee the cost for same before the start of game, winners to receive their money back.

Reply through this paper or to H. Smith, secretary-treasurer Peterborough Nomads Football Club, 247 Westcott street.

Saturday next, Nov. 1st, the final for the medals competition will be played off at 2 o'clock, between the Glaziers vs. Cockneys, on the Exhibition Grounds. All players kindly turn up to time.

MUST DISCONTINUE SUNDAY SHOOTING SAYS INSPECTOR

Game Inspector Watt states that he does not intend to prosecute the three young men whose guns he confiscated on Sunday, but this must serve as a warning to others for any other offenders who may be apprehended will be severely dealt with.

Section 12 of the game laws says that no person shall, on the Lord's Day, hunt, take or kill any game or use any gun for that purpose. The law is quite explicit and its penalties will be imposed upon those who break it.

Mr. Watt states that he has been on the trail of gangs of youths and men who have been going to the woods on Sundays, but it was not until last Sunday that he was able to catch them. They were in the woods near the Beaver Meadow, several miles east of the city. Some eluded him when they saw him approaching, but by discharging his own firearm he removed suspicion and the culprits walked into the trap. Mr. Watt secured two 22 shorts and a 32 Winchester.

The parents of one of the young men pleaded with the inspector and as it was a first offence, he decided to be lenient. However, he forwarded to the department information of the affair, and is awaiting instructions.

Out west of the city a pseudo-inspector is reported to have been at work. He and a friend went out for partridge on the idea that the better the day the better the deed, and secured a fairly good bag. Only one had a gun, and while they were talking together two other parties joined them. The man with the gun said "Well Mr. Inspector, what's this going to cost me?"

"It will just cost you ten dollars," was the reply.

"Well, what about this bunch?" but the others were making off at that stage.

The fake inspector caught up with one of them.

"Don't you know you can't use a gun on Sunday?"

"This ain't a gun."

"Well, what is it?"

"That's a rifle."

"Just for getting smart I'll make this hot for you. I know your name and you'll hear from me to-morrow."

The "inspector" is wondering what effect his threat had.

When it is considered that woods abound on nearly all sides of the city, and that many men are eager to get out for partridge and rabbits, the task of the inspector is no light one.

NIAGARA FALLS AND ERIE NEW LEAGUE TEAMS

OTTAWA, Oct. 29.—The roar of protest from Berlin over the charge that Fort Wayne has drafted Pitcher Fred Bramble with a view to turning him over to the Ottawa Club of the Canadian League, has been followed by another wail from the west end of the circuit. It appears that President Fitzgerald, at the annual meeting next month, will advocate the dropping of Berlin and Guelph and the inclusion of Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Erie, Pa., in the League. He has looked into both prospects and is prepared, it is understood, to recommend the change. The Canadian League magnates will hold an important meeting at Toronto on Friday.

Someone gave the Berlin and Guelph Clubs the tip that they were to be harpooned and the local newspapers are now endeavouring to explain why both towns should be kept in. At Berlin they say they have one of the strongest syndicates in the Association, and that they are prepared to make a generous outlay next Spring for the purpose of putting a winner in the field. They have not yet appointed a manager, but will do so within a short time, and one of the best men in minor baseball.

The Guelph papers point with pride to their showing of last season, and believe that owner Mahoney should be shown every consideration because of his loyalty to the Canadian League in the face of previous reverses. The question of dropping both towns will be decided by the majority vote of the League. Nothing has really been arranged, but it would not be surprising to see Guelph and Berlin left out. Sunday baseball could be played at Erie, Pa., and probably at Niagara Falls as well. Both Berlin and Guelph drew very small crowds in the season of 1913.

TO OPPOSE WILL

KINGSTON, Oct. 29.—Relatives of the late Rev. Father Brohy, who died recently, leaving an estate valued at $177,000, are taking action to oppose the will. It is stated that Father Brophy made the greater part of the money through insurance. Years ago, it is claimed, he insured his life on the endowment plan, and, at the end of the specified time, drew out $11,000. The insurance agent advised him to insure his (the agent's) life and he did so for $75,000. The former died in less than a year's time, Father Brophy securing the money. It is said the will is to be contested on the ground that the testator was of unsound mind when he made it, the greatest part of the estate being devised to the Roman Catholic clergy.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

To-morrow may reflect irregular operations in the stock market, which was subjected to professional raiding on rumours of closing of steel plants. The gold imports news is said to indicate the strong position financially of New York. The buying of good stocks on declines continues to be of the scale down variety and shorts seem to sell into a bag the standards when they pass thir advantage too far. It is commented that the market moves less smoothly than in the past and this is due perhaps to several factors, notably the application of stocks by large interests and investors reducing the floating supply, and also to the restrictions that have been placed about the Stock Exchange, looking to the prevention of manipulation so far as may be possible. Special attention is being directed to S. P., St. Paul, and N. P.; all are purchases on reactions.

The absorption of A. C. P., Rdg., and U. P. by speculative sources is said to be in preparation for a substantial up movement in the near future on favourable currency news expected to develop in the next two or three weeks. R. I. is much more in favour now.

The Effectiveness of the Reproductions Of OLD PERSIAN RUGS

In Their Dignity In There Inviting Charm

Is There Anything That can Compare with Them?

YOU know well what these wonderful Rugs will do for a room—just what a stained glass window does for a church, bringing the glow of romance and the absolute beauty to what was before a common place.

Then Too They are a Hall-Mark of Cultivated Taste

Harmonizing Colourings in The New Linens, Chintzs and Shadow Cloths For Charming Window Drapery. . . .

DO the newly designed and revived Linens, Chints and Shadow Cloths appeal to you. Suppose you know that they are the most popular and strikingly effective for Window Display.

Particularly so this season—because so many extremly unique designs make their first formal appearance.

Does your fancy incline to the modish Fruit, Floral Conventional or exquisite cloudy effects or do you prefer French, Italian, Renaissance or Jacobean period designs.

These we have in fetching colour tones—all of which were purchased in corresponding combinations to gloriously harmonize with the rich Rugs of Persian Origin.

YOUR SUPERB PERSIAN—in keeping with the scheme of the room reflects your own indivuality. No other Rug will be exactly like it, and the years of wear will touch lightly—for it is made to last a life time.

Eminently Suitable for the Dining-Room, Drawing-Room and Living-Room are these Reproductions of the Famous Kirmanshahs

TO her who rejoices in the possession of a handsomely furnished home, the special collection of beautiful reproductions of Antique Persian Rugs—"The Masterpiece of Machine Weaving"—makes very special and particular appeal.

In their artistic blending of rich old colourings and with frequent touches of brighter tones is so handsomely well adapted to use with flowered Chintz or the new elaborate Parisian Shadow Cloth.

The close velvety pile has that suggestion of quiet luxury, typical of such a room, of wide interest—then the superb collection of correct reproductions of antique Persian Rugs!

An example of these Rugs may be seen in our show windows to-night.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Enjoyable Social Entertainment

A Social Association Formed at All Saints' Church

In the Parish Hall attached to All Saints' Church, last evening, a large number of members of the congregation and their friends foregathered to spend what proved to be a very enjoyable evening.

The comfortable Hall was tastefully decorated with flags, the good old Union Jack of England being largely in evidence.

On entering, each visitor was tagged with a letter, such as A, B, C, and so on, there being about a half dozen to each letter. As the motif of this tagging was kept a secret, and as each letter of the series was printed in a different colour, there was something mysterious about the affair and the secret was well kept until a later period of the evening.

The proceedings really commenced by a few remarks, in a happy vein, from the Rev. R. B. Grobb, the Rector, who stated that the meeting was called for the purpose of mentioning the fact that a new Young People's Association had been formed, details of which would be announced later on in the evening, and he then stated that there would be a musical programme and other events, to be followed by refreshments. He also observed that as the seats had not been arranged in a formal manner as at a regular concert, he hoped that the visitors would move around and be social. And, it may be remarked, his suggestion was largely taken advantage of.

The following programme was submitted:

Instrumental—Prof. Schlochow.
Vocal Solo—Mrs. Middleton.
Reading—Miss Jackson.
Piano-forte Duet — The Misses Thompson.

Plate Contest

Vocal Solo—Mr. Chandler.
Recitation—Miss Clarke.
Mandolin Solo—Mr. Woodbine.
Musical contest.
Report of Nominating committee.
Refreshments.

God Save the King.

The instrumental and other portions of the entertainment were well rendered and duly appreciated, encores being in most cases demanded.

At the intermission was held the "Plate Contest." Each member was provided with a carton plate and pencil. The idea was to get as many names written on the plate as might be done within a given space of time. This produced a great deal of fun and proved a happy means of finding out each others' names. A prize was won by Mrs. Farthing, who had been successful in obtaining some sixty-seven signatures on her plate.

When the "musical contest" took place the raison d-etre of the tags was made manifest. All those bearing say A, B and C were called on to the platform, where Mr. Grobb (as chairman), announced that they would sing a certain song on the spur of the moment. This done, other letters of the alphabet were called up and so on until each group of letter holders had sung a song, in each case different. Prizes were given to the group pronounced by the judges to have been the best. This part of the programme was provocative of much merriment.

When the report stage was reached Mr. Grobb announced that it had been decided to form an association to bring various members of the congregation together. Hitherto there had been a Men's Club and a Women's Club, which had been separate affairs. But as each club had found that their most successful evening had been that in which the opposite club had been invited to meet each other, it had been thought better to have one association—a young people's. A young people's association did not necessarily mean that all the members should be young on entry; for there was a sort of magic about it, and by joining elder people would become young by contact with young people, and the more they mixed with them the younger would the older ones become.

The following officers and members of committees were then appointed:

Hon. President—Rev. R. B. Grobb
President—Mr. Roberts.
Vice-President—Mr. MacCrosty.
2nd Vice-President—Mrs. Morgan.
Secretary—Miss Sabin.
Treasurer—Mr. E. Clarke.

Social and Look-out Committee — Miss Dyer (convener), Mesdames Smeaton, Mott, Clarke and Hooper; Misses Rush, Williams, Sisson, Cairns and Browne; Messrs. Dummitt, Lightheart, Dawson and Morgan.

The meetings will take place each alternate Monday, the next being held on next Monday week (Nov. 10) at 8 p.m.

At the termination of this business, refreshments were served and the highly successful and pleasurable evening came to a close at eleven o'clock.

"ECHO" AGREES THAT LANDLORDS DESERVE PITY

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—If you will allow me a little space in your valuable paper I would like to endorse the sentiments of "Recollections of a Landlord." Of all people on "the face of the earth" in my estimation I think the landlord is the most to be pitied. He is certainly "sat upon" by his tenants at all times. He has no rights or privileges. The average tenant considers that he is not getting value for the rent he pays if he does not do considerable damage to the place during his tenancy. Landlord's comments upon the lawn mower question reminds me of a tenant I had once that borrowed my lawn mower, hoe, garden rake, shovel and two or three other implements, broke them all and was highly indignant because he was asked to return them. It makes me hot when I think of all the impositions placed upon the "poor landlord." The time has surely come when there ought to be what might well be termed "A Landlord's Protective Society," especially at this time when Peterborough's floating population is increasing so rapidly.

Thanking you for the above space, I remain in sympathy,

Yours faithfully,
"Echo."

RAILWAY NOTES

There has been some talk of electrifying the accral mountain passes on the Canadian Pacific, but this has yet to be realized. The company has, however, for years had its electric railway—the Galt, Preston and Hespeler Railway, to be accurate—which was the first electric railway in the Dominion.

This line is 14 miles in length. It has its regular schedule; it has freight and passenger departments. The freight is handled at night, which is a mercy to the inhabitants. The passenger service is adequate and rapid. The cars are clean and are built after, as it would seem, the model of those of the Southern Counties Railway—large and comfortable.

Berlin has a population of 17,000 people and is one of the most aggressive cities in the Dominion—forging ahead, as it is, in manufacturing.

Galt has 11,000 people; Preston 4,300 and Hespeler 2,886, and Waterloo 4,260.

It may be taken for granted that the larger question of general electrification has not occurred to the official mind. It is like the coal question.

Every now and then an alarmist figures out that the coal supply of the world is becoming rapidly exhausted, and that in the course of a day or two—or a couple of centuries at the outside—there will be a freezing world, which will not have an ounce of coal with which to boil the matutinal teakettle.

Whereupon another wizard of figures comes out with the announcement that the coal supply of the world will last for 500,000 years, and that we may go to bed and sleep, as far as that issue is concerned.

Electrification has excited considerable discussion in the American press. It is recognized that the railways will come to it, sooner or later—not so much because of coal exhaustion as because electric science, in the course of a few years, will have reached such perfection as to make it predommant in our industrial and domestic life.

When that time comes the problem will be simplified; and the world will see, without surprise, the trains moving at the rate of 100 miles an hour, without visible power to explain the phenomenon. No one will elevate an eyebrow any more than did the British public elevate an eyebrow when, after solemn resolution passed by the wise men of the time in London, it was declared that gas could never be forced through pipes up into the drawing room of John Jones—Mary Jane produced the new illuminant with the aid of a match. When the thing is accomplished the edge of doubt and expectancy becomes blunted.

NEW CONVENIENT TRAIN TO WINNIPEG.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

The popularity of Canadian Pacific service, and the excellence of that road's equipment, has been so greatly appreciated by the travelling public that it has been found necessary to put into service an entirely new Through Standard Express Train between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Commencing Sunday, October 26th, the "Gate City Express" will leave Toronto at 2.30 p.m., and will run daily thereafter, arriving Winnipeg at 8.25 a.m. second morning. The train will consist of the highest-class modern equipment; Observation Compartment Car, Standard Sleeping Cars, Tourist Sleeping Car, Dining Car, First-class Coach and Colonist Car. This will be found the most convenient and best train between Toronto and Winnipeg on account of the daylight departure from Toronto at an hour when the Union Station is not badly congested, and also on account of the early hour of arrival at Winnipeg.

The present "Vancouver Express" will continue to leave Toronto at 10.20 p.m. daily and will consist of the same equipment as the "Gate City Express." This train is the best to take for points west of Winnipeg, but for Winnipeg and east the "Gate City Express" is the right train to travel by.

Detective Weller Has Resigned

The Canadian Pacific Railway are making a re-arrangement of their protective system, as a result of the recent appointment of a new head to that department.

Under the new arrangement there will be no C.P.R. detetcive in this City, but two will be stationed at Havelock, the Company's divisional headquarters. From there they will look after the company's interests in this division.

Owing to the new orders, Detective Weller has been asked by the company to continue his work as C.P.R. detetcive, with headquarters at Havelock. But owing to the fact that he cannot secure a suitable residence for himself and family there, he has decided to resign, rather than move to Havelock. Detective Weller has held the position of C.P.R. detective in this City for the past seven months, and has given good service in that position. He has co-operated in an effective manner with the local Police Department, who will be sorry that he is giving up his position.

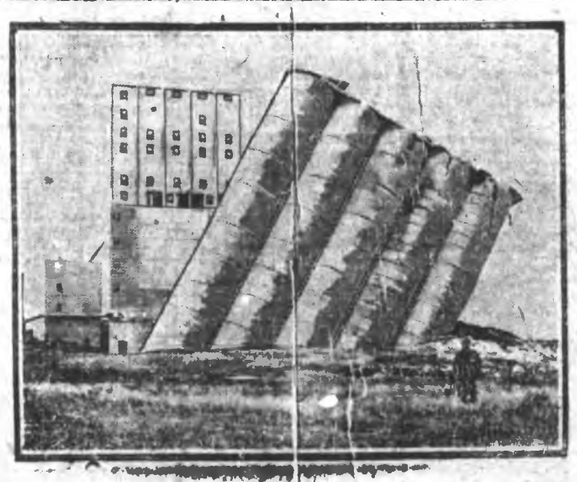
At 7:35 o'clock last evening the chimney of the Foresters' Hall took fire. The Fire Brigade were called and extinguished the blaze without damage.



CANADIAN PACIFIC GRAIN ELEVATOR AT TRANSCONA, MAN.—Grain elevator of the C.P.R. at Transcona, which has within the last few days sunk about 20 feet into the ground, containing about 900,000 bushels of grain. The grain is being shipped quickly to avoid frost and rain.

From the Diary of a Grandmother; being a few extracts from the diary of a grandmother who visits her daughter and her four grandchildren for the first time.

I. INTRODUCING THE GRAND MOTHER.

By RUTH CAMERON

"This is the first time I have written in my diary for eight days. I must think that has happened since I began to keep my diary, forty years ago.

"But then this is also the first time I have crossed a continent, seen a daughter and a grandchild I had not seen for twelve years, and three grandchildren I had never seen.

"It seems unthinkable in these days when big distances mean so little that we have let twelve years go by without seeing each other, but of course Margaret has been tied down by her children, and David and I have lived so long in a small town that we have grown timing out into the big world.

"However, I'm here now and I'm going to make the most of this winter. Just now I'm busy getting acquainted with my grandchildren. There are four of them. Janet, the baby, whom Margaret brought home to us thirteen years ago, is fifteen. She is taller than Margaret, quite as well developed, and decidedly pretty both in face and figure. I was surprised to see that she still wears her hair down her back like a child. Margaret says that is the proper thing now-a-days; 'all the really nice girls do it.'

"Ruth, the next child, is eleven. Richard is nine and David, the baby, named after my David, is only ten months. Ruth is not so pretty as Janet, but very bright and amusing. She's a nervous, high-strung child, and does not seem quite well to me. When I get better acquainted with my daughter I'm going to suggest sulphur and molasses. Richard is four feet of freckled, irrepressible, tow-headed boy, and the baby is a perfect darling. Even without the rest he would be worth coming the four thousand miles to see. It is so many years since I have had a baby of my own flesh and blood in my arms that I long to cuddle him every moment. But he is being brought up in the new fashioned way, so I am seldom allowed to touch him.

"I am glad that I'm here to help Margaret as she does not look well at all. She has a very pleasant, convenient house and a servant to help her with her work. And yet she seems to be completely tired out every night. Much more so, I'm sure, than I was when I was bringing up my children. Of course I only had three children, but then I never dreamed of having a maid; and my sister Mary, with her six children and no help seemed to find life a good deal easier than Margaret does.

"I am going to try while I am here to find out why this is. I have a suspicion already but I won't set it down until I have more grounds to justify it."

In the next article Grandmother discovers that the children of to-day are different from the children of thirty years ago.

FRUIT LAXATIVE FOR MAMMA, DADDY AND THE BABY, "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS"

Better Than Calomel, Oil or Salts, For Liver, Bowels and Stomach

Best Liver and Bowel Regulator for Mamma, Daddy and Children.

If you're headachy, constipated, bilious or stomach is disordered and you want to enjoy the nicest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced, take a tablespoonful of "California Syrup of Figs" to-night and in the morning all the constipation poison, bile and clogged-up waste will gently move out of the system without griping and you will feel splendid.

Every member of the family should use this fruit laxative as occasion demands. It is just as effective for grandpa as it is for baby. It simply can not injure. Even cross, sick, feverish children just love its pleasant taste and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing."

For thirty years "California Syrup of Figs" has been recommended by physicians as the ideal stomach, liver and bowel cleanser. Millions of families who are well informed use nothing else, but recently there has come a flood of spurious fig syrups so we warn the public to ask plainly at drug stores for a 50 cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," and see that it is prepared by "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no cheaper size. Hand back any "counterfeit" with contempt.

Will Christmas Come

Sheeting of Pure Irish Linen

This is two yards wide, and is woven with a round thread into a material so near perfect that it is a pleasure to examine.

It will wear and wash beautifully, and like all good sheeting, is a delight to the housekeeper who uses it.

Per Yard $1.00

Diagonal Tartan Plaids

Material of this kind finds a use in the making of Bath Robes. Kimonas, etc, because it is of that soft cosy nature that one likes to have in one's winter lounging garments.

And this selection at 35c a yard, comes in attractive three toned effects of navy, grey, brown and cardinal, with light shadings of other harmonious colours. It a Scotch material of sound worth, 27 inches wide.

Fancy Linen Luncheon Sets

We have chosen 3 sets from the wide choice in the linen section, and in describing them would say, that for real beauty of texture and finish, and for splendid laundering qualities you will find it hard to equal them at the price. Moreover they are quite new.

The first set has a cloth 36 inches square, in either a pretty coin spot or dainty ribbon design, and hemstitched.

It is of pure linen damask, possessing very substantial weight, the set including six serviettes. This is $4.25

At $3.90 there is a set in plain linen with a scalloped border, and neat embroidery design. The cloth is round in shape, being 36 inches in diameter, while the 6 serviettes are each 15 inches square. This little set expresses very fine taste in table linens.

There is another set of the same round shape and size, only in a fine damask, nicely patterned with a wreath centre, the serviettes being a trifle larger—about sixteen inches square. The price of this set is $3.25

Mrs. Byron Green's Papa Saves Her Dog From Hands Of Official

WELLAND, ONT., Aug. 29. — Col. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, had the unique experience on Monday afternoon of rescuing a pet dog owned by his daughter, Mrs. Byron M. Green, Dorothy Street, of this place, from the hands of the civic dog catcher.

The Minister of Militia was taking a walk up town and was followed by a little spaniel owned by his daughter. He had not proceeded far when the zealous catcher spied the dog and noticed it was without a tag. He gathered it under his arm and whisked it away to the municipal dog pound.

"Here, that is my dog," said Col. Sam hurrying up, out of breath, and taking the little pet out of the arms of its captor, after which he started to leave the building.

"And What is Your Name?"

"Hold on there," came the stentorian voice of Chief of Police Laing, who was coming out of his offices.

"Where are you going with that dog?"

"The dog is mine," returned the Minister.

"And what is your name?" asked the Chief of Police, unaware of the identity of his visitor.

"Hughes," came the terse rejoinder, but then, there are many people in the world by that name.

"Well, you better come in here and get a tag for that dog," continued the Chief, leading the way.

Col. Sam followed him with the dog in his arms.

"Now what did you say your name was?" asked the Chief again as the desk sergeant pulled out the license book and waited with pen poised.

Better Give Me a Tag.

"Hughes, Col. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia," was the exasperated answer so quickly spoken that the amazed representatives of the law hardly knew which way to look or what to say. The Chief then quickly explained that he wasn't aware of the fact that he was dealing with a Cabinet Minister

"That's all right," assured Col. Sam, "always enforce the law irrespective of persons. Better give me a tag." So now among others whose names are recorded in the book as having purchased licenses for their dogs is that of the Canadian Minister of Militia.

Francis McGirr Life Member

Of the Peterborough Protestant Home—Committed Semi-annually

Francis McGirr will no longer respond to the dinner bell at the Chateau-on-the-hill. At the instance of the authorities, McGirr has been transferred to the Peterborough Protestant Home, of which institution, he will become a life member. For years McGirr has been an inmate of the County gaol, where he was periodically committed by Police Magistrate Dumble at intervals of six months. This was done at McGirr's request. The latter evidently preferred to eke out his life within the grey walls of the institution, which sheltered him for many years, rather than combat with the vicissitudes of the world without.

That McGirr was partial to the treatment which was accorded him at the County gaol was evidenced by the fact that he never stayed away from the County institution longer than was necessary to make a trip to the Police Court, secure his commitment papers, a plug of tobacco and return. This was usually accomplished in less than an hour.

$6,000 AIGRETTE WILL PERISH IN FURNACE

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The largest single seizure the Customs Inspectors have made since the new regulations prohibiting the importation of aigrettes went into effect, is on record at the customs house to-day as that of plumes valued at $600, taken from Miss Edna McLaughlin, daughter of a former police inspector here, who arrived yesterday from Europe.

The young woman had frankly declared the fine feather as a part of her apparel, which was valued at $8,000 in all, and was shocked when she learned that regardless of her declaration the inspectors must seize the aigrettes.

She protested that she had bought the plumes in this country but learned to her dismay that only 24 hours before her arrival an order had been issued for the seizure of all such feathers, whether originally purchased in this country or abroad.

Finished with explanations, the inspector finally plucked the costly plumes from the hat they were adorning and sent them to the appraisers' stores. They will undoubtedly, in view of the unequivocal language of the law, be consigned to the furnace in the basement of the public stores.

Stomach, Nerves and Thinker Restored by Grape-Nuts Food.

The number of persons whose ailments were such that no other food could be retained at all, is large and reports are on the increase.

"For 12 years I suffered from dyspepsia, finding no food that did not distress me," writes a Western lady. "I was reduced from 145 to 90 lbs., gradually growing weaker until I could leave my bed only a short while at a time, and became unable to speak aloud.

"Three years ago I was attracted by an article on Grape-Nuts and decided to try it.

"My stomach was so weak I could not take cream, but I used Grape-Nuts with milk and lime water. It helped me from the first, building up my system in a manner most astonishing to the friends who had thought my recovery impossible.

"Soon I was able to take Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast and lunch at night, with an egg and Grape-Nuts for dinner.

"I am now able to eat fruit, meat and nearly all vegetables for dinner, but fondly continue Grape-Nuts for breakfast and supper.

"At the time of beginning Grape-Nuts I could scarcely speak a sentence without changing words around or talking crooked in some way, but have become so strengthened that no longer have that trouble." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

In the general efficiency competition for the Artillery Brigades, the following is the list, showing the standing: The Montreal brigade is first with a total of 1,908.4. Toronto is second with 1,749.2. Ottawa third with 1,723.9, and Peterborough, a new brigade, fourth, with 1,586.4. Gananoque Sherbrooke, Woodstock, Halifax and Sydney all coming in the order named.

In the Battery Competition for general efficiency the 21st Battery 6th Brigade, Montreal, was first with a total of 565.8 points; 2nd Battery, Ottawa, was second, with 499.9 points; 23rd Battery, Ottawa, with 492.7 was third; St. Catharines 7th Battery 4th, with 482.6, and Toronto 9th Battery 5th with 475.9 points, Hamilton being next in order with 455.7 points. Thus the three batteries of this division were close together.

It seems that at last the demands of the officers and men who are entitled to the bounty graned to those taking part in the Fenian Raid by the Government are likely to be settled, as investigating committees have been appointed for several counties in eastern Canada. This will be glad news to many in Toronto.

In future the Department of Militia require nominal rolls of all ranks attending schools of instruction in duplicate. This is destined to show what officers attend regularly and those who do not.

When Major-General W. H. Cotton was appointed Insector-General, it was understood that it was for a year, he having reached the age limit. When the Minister returns it is expected a definite announcement will be made as to his continuing in office or a new appointment made.

Speculation is rife as to who will succeed to the position in case General Cotton is retired. General Lessard is the next in seniority, but being a comparatively young man it would be a pity to place him in a position where he is looked upon as practically on the retired list.

Bishop O'Brien Preached Sermon At Consecration

Of Bishop Brunet in Ottawa on Tuesday—Indicated Growth of the Catholic Church in Ontario

MANY BISHOPS PRESENT

OTTAWA, OCT. 29.—"The growth of Catholicity in Canada in the last century has been marvellous," said the Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien, Bishop of Peterborough, in his sermon at the consecration at the Ottawa Basilica on Tuesday morning of the Rev. Francois Xavier Brunet to the bishopric of the new diocese of Mont Laurier, Quebec.

Many are Present.

A large concurse of laity and clergy—estimated at 2,000—were attracted to the Basilica to witness the most stately and significant ceremony in the Roman Catholic Church.

That ceremony, said Bishop O'Brien, celebrated the birth of a new diocese and it made history. Bishop Brunet had received new powers and his consecration linked them more closely to the primeval Church. He need not say anything to the people of Ottawa on Rome's happy choice of Bishop Brunet for the new diocese.

For years they had witnessed the piety, sanctity, zeal, and wisdom of the bishop-elect. The Archbishop had consecrated one of his own household and a confidante. Sketching the history of Catholicity in Canada, Bishop O'Brien said that 97 years ago there was only one Roman Catholic diocese in Canada—at Quebec—with six priests.

To-day, in Ontario, there were three archbishops and 800 priests for a population of 550,000 Catholics. The founding of a see at Mont Laurier and the consecration of a bishop were signs of the enormous growth of Catholicity. The bishop stood for the universality of the Church and the episcopacy was the personification of the divine constitution of the Church.

Sermon in French.

The elaborate consecration ceremony, with all its pomp and circumstance, and the enthronement of Bishop Brunet were performed by Rt. Rev. C. Hugh Gauthier, Archbishop of Ottawa, who was assisted by Rt. Rev. Elie Latuliffe, Bishop of Temiskaming, and Rt. Rev. J. Ryan, auxiliary bishop of Pembroke.

Clergy Present.

Other clergy present were Mgrs. Begin, Bruchesi, McCarthy, Spratt, McNeil, Legal, Blair, Gabriel, Larocque, Courtier, Brunalt, Scollard, Bernard, McDonald, Fallon, Power, Morrison, Budka, Leblanc, McNally, Blanche and Leroy.

Was Attacked At Her Home

OSWEGO, N. Y., Oct. 28.—A number of Oswego young men attempted to tar and feather Dr. Mary Walker at her home three miles from Oswego, early to-day. The party entered Dr. Walker's yard, and after considerable noise she came to a door, attired in pink silk pajamas.

One of the men caught her arm, but she wrenched herself free and slammed the door. She then telephoned for W. W. Rounds, justice of the peace, but before he arrived the party had disappeared.

Dr. Walker to-day charged that the attempt was instigated by Princess Alexandria Nicholas, a Russian noblewoman, who arrived here a few days ago to undergo Dr. Walker's treatment. The physician and her patient disagreed and since then the princess has been living in Oswego. The princess denied any connection with the affair.

Accustomed as Dr. Mary Walker was to violence in the early part of her dress reform crusade, it has now been many years since she has suffered because of her eccentric attire. And but for a single arrest in Chicago this spring, she had really been subjected to nothing worse than the escort of curious crowds when she appeared in public.

The last arrest was not without an element of humour. For over 40 years Dr. Walker has had the right, granted by a special act won from Congress for her after a long and hard fight, to wear men's clothes whenever and wherever she pleases. But when she explained this to the policeman who took her in charge in Chicago on Feb. 7 of this year, he would have none of it, and haled her to the police station. There the lieutenant in charge released her with apologies.

Scientific Wrinkle Remover Easily Made

(From Ladies' Favourite Magazine.)

A few dermatologists have long held the secret that a certain product known to the drug trade as saxolite, had the property when used in solution, of instantly reducing wrinkles. Any one can readily make this same solution by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. Bathe the face in this—and note the immediate transformation! The skin tightens, becomes firmer—deepest wrinkles at once begin to smooth out. This action will of course also reduce hanging cheeks or double chin.

When the hands show signs of aging, the skin becoming coarse, creased or flabby, bathe them in the solution. Since the recent publication of this formula, men and women all over the country have taken advantage of the information, according to reports, with most satisfactory results.

FINE WATCH REPAIRING

Cheap watch repairing may appeal to some, but generally speaking experience proves work done cheaply is generally done poorly, and in the end is the final ruin of a good watch. We have first-class workmen and do only high-class work. No other place can do any better. Our charges are no higher than others, for good work. If you have a good watch you will find it economical to have us do your repairing.

WEDDING BELLS

CLARKE—O'REILLY.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Martin's Church, Ennismore, on Tuesday, October 21st, when Miss Agnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Con. O'Reilly, was united in the hold bonds of matrimony to Mr. Henry Clarke of Lindsay.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick. The bride, who was neatly attired in a blue tailor-made suit, with hat to match, was assisted by her sister, Miss Mary E., who wore a brown tailored suit with hat to match, while Mr. Joseph Kearns of Lindsay, acted as groomsman. The bridal party entered the Church to the strain of the wedding march, played by Miss Mary A. Crough.

After the wedding ceremony the happy couple motored to the "White House," the home of the bride's parents, where a dainty wedding breakfast was awaiting them. They were accompanied by a host of friends.

The afternoon and evening were spent in games, music and other amusements.

The many beautiful presents signify the high esteem in which the young couple are held. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome gold watch and fob, to the bridesmaid a locket and chain, and to the groomsman a tie pin.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke will reside on Queen Street, Lindsay, and begin their married life with the best wishes of their many friends.

ANNUAL CHASE

The members of the Kake-ki-waganda Hunt Club leave on Thursday morning for their annual chase on the shores of Lake Kake-ki-waganda, near Sudbury. In the party are Messrs. C. S. McClelland, R. A. Elliott, Jas. Storey, Wm. Switzer, R. McCamus, Mr. Stone, Mr. Mitchell, and Mr. G. Marshall of Toronto, Mr. Barnard of Hamilton and others. The party travels by C. P. R. and C. N. R. and will be gone two weeks. Mr. C. H. Cheverill is the Club's chef and will again look after one of the main items of the outing.

ASTRONOMICAL SOCIETY MET

The first meeting of the season of the Peterborough Centre of the Royal Astronomical Society was held last evening in the Collegiate Institute. Rev. Dr. Marsh gave an interesting address and the plans for the coming season were discussed. Mr. T. A. S. Hay was in the chair.

DEER ARE PLENTIFUL SAYS G. W. FITZGERALD

Mr. G. W. Fitzgerald has returned from a fishing trip in the northern part of the county and states that deer are plentiful and that the most of the hunters will visit sections that were untouched by the summer fires. Settlers and others whom he had met stated that the game of all kinds would make things lively for the city people and it is expected that a good supply of venison will be secured. The fish are hitting in great shape.

WHERE DID IT GO?

English Investors Lost $625,000 in Union Life

ERASURES IN MINUTE BOOK

TORONTO, Oct. 30.—That the $785,000 invested in stock in the Union Life Assurance Co. by English investors in 1909-10 found its way into channels other than those outlined in the prospectus especially prepared by two expert English actuaries for the information of the English investors, and is practically a total loss, was brought to light yesterday at the investigation into the affairs of the defunct Union Life Assurance Co. It was shown that of this amount the Union Life had made loans to various companies, amounting to $625,000, and upon this Mr. George T. Clarkson, the permanent liquidator, has placed the indelible stamp "Lost."

While the remaining $160,000 still is to be accounted for, it was stated that when the inquiry is resumed on Nov. 17 evidence of a startling nature would be adduced showing that the balance had likewise found its way into channels which Mr. H. Pollman Evans will be called upon to explain, as a result of the testimony voluntarily given by Mr. Harry Symons, K.C., at yesterday's session. Mr. A. C. Masten, K.C., who is appearing on behalf of the Government stated that he regarded the evidence of Mr. Symons as being merely a stepping-stone to what may be expected when the investigation is resumed.

Another piece of interesting evidence was the disclosures made by Mr. Symons respecting certain erasures in the executive minute book of the Union Life Co. Mr. Symons declared that while he was acting as secretary of the Union Life Co. Mr. Evans made an erasure pertaining to a loan of $81,000 advanced to the Imperial Loan Co. Mr. Symons said he insisted on Mr. Evans initialling the erasure.

DOCTORS DISAGREE.

Russian Experts Clash In "Ritual Murder" Trial.

KIEV, Oct. 30.—The expert testimony of physicians occupied most of the day at the trial of Mendel Beilis, charged with having killed the boy Yushinsky. The experts agreed that at least two persons were implicated in the actual killing of the boy, but were divided on the question as to whether the prime object of the murder was the obtaining of as much blood as possible and the inflicting of torture or not.

The imperial court surgeon, Dr. Pavloff, combatted the theory of blood getting, but admitted that the experts had little on which to base their theories because of the incompetent manner in which the two post-mortem examinations had been made.

Dr. Tutanoff of Kiev University testified that at least two-thirds of the boy's blood had been drawn off. Answering the twenty-three questions given to them Tuesday by the president of the court, the experts were divided on all points except that two or more assassins were involved.

The murder, Prof. Kosoretoff testified, was not committed in a house or the cave where the body was found, but at a place where there was clay, with which the clothes were covered. There was a sensation in court when it was charged that the clay near Vera Tcheberiak's house had not been compared with that on the clothes.

Prof. Kosoretoff concluded with the statement that the hairs found on the dead boy's clothing came from a long curly beard and could not belong to Beilis, whose beard was short, stiff and straight.

WOULD PROTECT CALVES.

Farmers Favor Action to Prevent a Stock Famine.

TORONTO, Oct. 30.—It is the opinion of many that all the choice cattle of Ontario are being shipped to the United States and England since the Underwood law came into force which removed the duty. Good Canadian cattle are being sold in Buffalo for the same price that second grades sell for here. Farmers all over York County say that they cannot purchase heifers or milch cows save by paying an extremely high price. They are in favor of the Federal Parliament passing legislation forbidding the slaughter of female calves under two years old.

UNIONISTS WILL FIGHT.

Will Back Ulster—But Preferably In Election Says Law.

NEWCASTLE, Eng., Oct. 30.—Speaking from the same platform as Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader, Andrew Bonar Law, the Opposition leader in the House of Commons, last night pledged the support of the Unionist party to Ulster even to the extent of forcible resistance to home rule. But his eagerly awaited reply to Premier Asquith's offer of a compromise on Oct. 25 consisted merely of a statement that the Unionists would carefully consider any proposals the Prime Minister cared to make relative to a solution of the home rule problem, if a solution were possible.

Mr. Law expressed the opinion that the only logical way the Government could avoid the responsibility of plunging the country into civil war was to secure a mandate from the people by a general election, which, if it favored home rule, would be acquiesced in by the Unionists.

He said he could not speak for Ulster, but believed that such a result might even settle the question there.

The Unionist leader compared the situation in Ulster to conditions in America preceding the civil war. He said he had urged Sir Edward Carson to attend the meeting so that the pledge which he (Law) had made at the Blenheim Palace rally in July, 1912, to support Ulster in her resistance to home rule might be made perfectly clear.

The speaker maintained that the Government had brought forward its land proposals in order to confuse the issue. If the Government refused to go to the country the Unionist leaders would not decline the invitation to a conference, and would probably consider any proposals made to them and answer them with a real desire to find a solution.

NO PLOTTING HERE!

Gen. Diaz Closely Watched on American Warship.

VERA CRUZ, Oct. 30.—Gen. Felix Diaz, now a refugee on board the American battleship Louisiana, learned yesterday that the privilege of asylum on a battleship carries with it certain restrictions not unlike prison regulations. By order of the admiral, Gen. Diaz is not permitted communication with anyone from shore, without his permission, and the admiral has given Gen. Diaz to understand that such permission will rarely be given.

The enforcement of this order is rigid. "Will you please go below, sir?" said the officer of the deck, saluting the general when he had begun a conversation with a man who had brought a message from ashore.

Gen. Diaz appeared to be annoyed for an instant, but without hesitation complied.

Admiral Fletcher explained that while he was willing to place his flagship at the disposal of Gen. Diaz as an asylum, he did not propose to expose himself to the criticism of making it a place for possible plotting. He asserted his confidence that Gen. Diaz would not attempt to abuse hospitality by meeting friends there and from a safe vantage point indulge in intriguing or conspiracy, but he resolved to take no chances.

With regard to the future, Diaz professes to be through with politics and rebellions and says he will ask nothing better so long as his country is in its present state than to be permitted to live in peace abroad.

WANTS FAIR POLL

Wilson's Mexican Policy Includes an Honest Election

MUST ELIMINATE HUERTA

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. — President Wilson has under consideration a new plan for restoring peace in Mexico which he will discuss with his Cabinet Friday and make it public within a few days.

Officials were reticent as to what it contemplated. As the United States has asked not only the European Governments, but those of Latin America and the Orient to withhold the formulation of their policy toward Mexico until the Washington Government can make known its plans for dealing with the situation, the solution upon which the President and Secretary Bryan are working is believed to be more than any suggestions hereto[illegible]e made for the pacification of the southern republic.

It is thought that in much the same way as President Wilson outlined recently to John Lind the points upon which a satisfactory settlement of the trouble in Mexico seemed to be conditioned he will repeat his suggestions, but will add the stipulation that someone acceptable to all factions be placed in provisional authority to conduct a fair and free election.

The first efforts of the President and his advisers will be to obtain a cessation of hostilities, in order that a constitutional election may be held. This will include a promise from the revolutionists that they will cease fighting temporarily, that Huerta will do the same and that the latter will agree to the holding of an election in which he is to have no part, not even the appointment of the election machinery. The United States will ask for this privilege and authority.

As was outlined in the President's speech at Mobile on Monday, he will try moral suasion first. The seeking of a cessation of hostilities on both sides pending the holding of an election will be the first step in this direction.

Though the State Department has not been informed officially of the reported purpose of Gen. Huerta to declare Gen. Blanquet as having been elected, it is certain that in line with previous declarations, the election of last Sunday will not be recognized as constitutional. The inability of the Huetra Government to conduct a constitutional election it is thought will lead the American Government to suggest a method of holding the elections in which safeguards and guarantees can be given which will permit the constitutionalists to participate freely.

Diplomats generally here believe that before suggestions concerning an election can be carried out, the elimination of Huerta from the situation must be accomplished.

THREE TIMES PUNISHED.

Sentences On Ironworkers Illegal Declares Lawyer.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30. — Contending that the 33 labor union officials, convicted at Indianapolis last December for complicity in the McNamara brothers' dynamite plots, had been "punished three times for the same offence and had been 'railroaded to jail,'" attorneys for the convicted men appealed to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday to have the judgment set aside.

"We will show that these men not only did not have a fair trial, but that they were punished three times for the same offence," said Attorney Zoline. "First they were convicted of conspiracy with Ortie E. McManigal and the McNamaras to violate the federal law against carrying explosives on passenger trains; secondly, they were convicted of actually carrying explosives, and they were convicted in the consolidated offence."

ASKED $11 A MINUTE.

And Jurors Gave High Priced Dentist Almost That Much.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—A sealed verdict for $421.80 was rendered in the City Court in favor of Dr. M. I. Schamberg, dentist, against Malcolm Douglas Whitman, former tennis champion. Dr. Schamberg sued for $500, which he alleged was due for an operation which he performed on Mr. Whitman in May, 1911. The operation required three-quarters of an hour to complete, so his charge was at the rate of $11 a minute. Mr. Whitman refused to pay and offered Dr Schamberg $350.

Old Battleship a Target.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Big guns bombarding a target in the shape of the old battleship Empress of India, the most costly ever fired at, will be watched to-day by Winston Spencer Churchill off Portland. The powerful armor of the Empress of India will make the gunnery test one of the greatest importance.

Twenty years ago this battleship cost $5,000,000, and only recently she was ranked as a first-class battleship.

Buys Wheat Despite Duty.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 30.—In the face of a duty of ten cents a bushel, still imposed, the Washburn Crosby Co., of Minneapolis, in the first move of the kind since the Underwood tariff law was passed, yesterday bought 100,000 bushels of Canadian wheat and will grind it in its mills at Buffalo, N.Y. A certified check for $10,000 was made out for payment of the import tariff.

PREMIERS DISAGREE

Only a Few of Their Resolutions Are Unanimous

PAY FOR LIEUT-GOVERNORS

OTTAWA, Oct. 30.—Although a variety of questions were discussed at the interprovincial conference, which concluded its three days' sessions last night, only upon a few, including the subsidies, an increase equal to 10 per cent. of the customs and excise revenue of the Dominion, was there unanimous agreement. The subsidy decision was probably the feature event of the conference and it is said there is very slight possibility of its being granted.

Unanimous decision was also reached in asking increased salaries for lieutenant-governors and in requesting that the decision in the companies' case by the Supreme Court be considered final.

In regard to the Maritime Provinces' representation and the question of Federal outlays on highways and similar public works there was a division of opinion and resolutions in connection with these matters were withdrawn.

Yesterday's sessions were taken up in a discussion of the lower provinces' claims for conservation of federal representation. Two of the provinces, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, filed arguments in favor of the resolution, while Prince Edward Island made the special plea that eventually there would be no representation at all from that province.

After considering the questions involved, the following resolution was adopted by the conference:

"That this conference expresses the opinion that it does not represent the provinces for the purpose of matters of federal representation and declines to take any action in regard to them."

Premiers Scott and Sifton offered the following resolution, which caused considerable debate:

"That in the opinion of the conference any action by the Dominion Government towards assisting in carrying on works in any province should take the form of increased subsidy."

It was taken as understood, although the resolution did not directly say so, that it was aimed at expenditures proposed by the Dominion Government in connection with the highways bill, twice rejected by the Senate.

Premiers Scott and Sifton urged, in support of their resolution, that expenditures on such works as highways are the exclusive right of the provincial authorities and an invasion of provincial autonomy is otherwise carried out.

In opposition to the proposal it was asserted that the provinces had to acquiesce before such outlays could be made.

Party lines were drawn in the discussion and the resolution was finally withdrawn.

In asking that the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the companies' case be considered as final, as it secures the provinces in their rights of incorporation, a resolution offered by Hon. L. A. Taschereau was unanimously adopted as follows:

"That the contention of the provinces concerning the incorporation of companies having been upheld by the Supreme Court of Canada after a reference to that tribunal at the instance of the Dominion, this conference expresses the firm belief that the decision should be considered as final and conclusive, especially in view of the far-reaching and disturbing impression created in the public mind by the doubt cast upon the powers of the Legislatures with regard to this matter."

After deciding to meet again from time to time at the call of Premiers Whitney and Gouin, but settling no express dates, the conference adjourned. Votes of thanks were adopted to the chairman, Hon. G. H. Murray, and Premier Borden, while Chas. Lanctot, K.C., the secretary, was presented with a beautiful stick-pin.

Premiers Scott and Sifton presented to Premier Borden the claims of Saskatchewan and Alberta for the control of their natural resources, which was not discussed in the conference, yesterday afternoon. This matter has long been politically discussed in the west. There was no definite outcome of the interview with the Premier.

Last evening the Duke of Connaught entertained the delegates at dinner at Rideau Hall.

Nome Is Poverty Stricken.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 30. — The mayor of Nome, Alaska, in a cablegram yesterday to the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, said many persons were destitute as a result of the recent storm that destroyed part of the city and would need financial aid or transportation. He said that $50,000 would be required to carry Nome through the long winter, and asked for Government assistance.

Two Firemen Hurt.

MONTREAL, Oct. 30.—Two firemen were severely hurt and thirty more overcome by smoke at a fire in the premises of the Factory Waste Co. on Colborne street yesterday afternoon. A number of girls employed on the premises only escaped by a narrow margin. The smoke from the waste in the building was very dense.

Killed on Hunting Trip.

MONT LAURIER, Que., Oct. 30.—Stumbling over a tree root yesterday afternoon, Henry Thibault of Dorimier avenue, Montreal, was shot and killed by his own rifle.

Potters On Strike.

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio, Oct. 30. —Clay makers employed in the thirty-five general ware potteries of East Liverpool and Wellsville, O., and Chester and Newell, Va., quit work yesterday morning when they were refused an advance in wages. A number of plants were closed, and if the strike is not settled by nightfall all the potteries in the district will be compelled to shut down, affecting about 5,000 hands.

Thaw Afraid of Matteawan.

CONCORD, N.H., Oct. 30.—Attorneys for Harry K. Thaw yesterday declared that if Wm. T. Jerome will agree to try Thaw on the conspiracy indictment returned in New York, and will not return him to Matteawan, the fugitive is willing to return to New York. Jerome has declared that pending trial for conspiracy he would place Thaw in Matteawan.

Young Man's Mysterious Death.

CHATHAM, Ont., Oct. 30.—An inquest was held yesterday morning into the death of Ray Perneliffe, who was found dead on Delaware avenue in this city last Tuesday night. Perneliffe was about twenty years old and was employed by the city as a teamster. People nearby heard a cry of alarm from the young man, but when they got to him he was dead.

Murder and Suicide.

FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 30.—Dorsey Kelly, 24, a farm hand, yesterday shot and killed Miss Mary Fleming, daughter of his employer, and then committed suicide. Jealousy of the young woman, with whom Kelly was said to have been infatuated, is believed to have prompted the deed.

Striking Miners Return.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Oct. 30.—Coal mine strikes affecting 675 miners in Oklahoma and Arkansas were amicably adjusted Tuesday. Five hundred men returned to the Oklahoma company's mines at Dewar, Okla., and 175 men to the Eureka Coal Co.'s mine at Montana, Ark.

LOOK!

If you were told of a new discovery for the treatment of coughs, colds and bronchitis, as certain in its action on all chest troubles as anti-toxin is on diphtheria, or vaccination on small-pox, wouldn't you feel like giving it a trial? Especially if you could try it for fifty cents!

Pepa is the discovery!

Pepa are little tablets, neatly wrapped in air and germ-proof silver foil. They contain certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapour, and are at once breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the capillaries and tiny air cells in the lungs.

In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Pepa fumes get there direct, and at once commence their work of healing.

Pepa are entirely distinct from the old fashioned liquid cough cures, which are merely swallowed into the stomach, and never reach the lungs. Pepa treatment of coughs and colds is direct treatment.

If you have not yet tried Pepa, cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Pepa Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Pepa at 50c. box.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

"THE MEDIATOR"

By ROY NORTON

He looked guilelessly into the eyes of Murdock and ignored the others.

"Well, we think it's pretty good, replied Murdock. "She seems to be getting along better now that she has that girl from down at the hotel to look after her."

Strangely enough, the prospector was silent in this pass. He studied the ends of his fingers, and looked down at the trenches. The claim-owner spoke to him.

"If there's anything you want over here, Henley," he said, "ask me for it."

"I got everything, except Id like some canned tripe. I'll pay for it."

Harry Martin pulled out his book and made a memorandum.

"Now there's another thing, Henley," he said, "that I'd like to say to you. It strikes me I'm getting the best of this deal. I've got a new offer for you. I want you to take a half-ownership in this claim, and I'll furnish all the working supplies."

'Thanks,' was all the prospector said, thus accepting the gift.

"Well, ain't you goin' to thank him more'n that for us?" Channel Smith, who had been fidgeting around the borders of the group asked.

"What do you want me to do—give it back to him, or hand him a lock of my hair?" Lish demanded, and Channel subsided. Apparently he thought of nothing further to say aside from work. "Since you've taken me into partnership," he said to Harry Martin, "I'll show you what my idea is, so's you won't be wonderin why I've come clean over here to the side of the gulch, to begin sinkin' again. Come here."

They left the others behind, and walked across to the new work.

"There was a right-smart slip here on this bank, some time," Lish asserted, pointing around at the physical chaarcteristics of the hillside. "I sort of calculate it came after the gold was deposited. It's back under the hill there a piece, if I'm right. I've done a lot of minin' one time and another, and I got an idea, Martin, that if there's anything in the gulch it's there. Now about this partnership business, what I want to say is this: If there's anything there at all, it's most likely pretty rich. I took this lay here because I liked the chances of makin' something', and because I can't be a loafer. Not because I was busted. I've a little money. Enough to keep on prospectin for some time to come. So if you give me half because you think I'm broke you don't need to do it. I'm satisfied with the lay, and I don't want you to do anything you'd be sorry for if we hit it strong."

At this evidence of fairness Harry Martin looked at him with a graver interest.

Accustomed as he was, to dealing with men he had encountered few who would have carried the point to such an extreme.

"Henley," he said, "I'm much obliged to you for this talk; but it doesn't lessen my determination, and it makes me hope, more than ever, that you'll succeed. It rather makes me more certain that you bear no ill will for—well—for that first meeting of ours.

Lish looked troubled for a moment then grinned.

"Say," he said, "I'm right sorry for that. I'm one of these fellers that has 'em got him in the end, and I was one of these poor cusses born with real nasty tempers. Things wa'n't very easy for me when I was a little shaver. They used to pick on me because I was a runt. I never wanted to figh', I just had to. I had a wonderful mammy. She used to go to church 'most every Sunday and take me along. My dady was a packer. He drank too much. He knew hosses, and men, and how to fight. The three of 'em got hi min the end, and I was the man of the house. I learned pretty soon that if I wanted to get anything, I'd just naturally have to fight for it. So I fought. Then maw died, and for a long time it looked as if hosses, and whisky, and men that were no account'd get me, the same as they did dad, until one day I took a tumble. It was in a calaboose down in the little jim-crow town in Mexico, that I had time to think it over. Since then I've always let whisky alone, and been just plain friends with hosses, and done all a feller could to cultivate a peaceful spirit. I came here to this camp to stay. I ain't picked no trouble with any man. But it does seem as if everybody was tryin' to make me lose my temper, and you was on of 'em. They's a wallop comin' to you, now that we're pardners. You've been right decent with me, particularly about this claim business, and so, if you want to, you can lam me just as hard as I did you that day, and I won't do nothin', and then we'll be quits. I ain't sure that I wouldn't rather like to have you to do it, so we can start even again. Let her go!"

He stood with his arms hanging loosely at his sides, and his face turned full toward Harry Martin, as if waiting for a blow that should be returned; but Martin only reached over and, with a bellowing laugh, slapped him on the shoulder.

"We're even anyhow," he declared. "And I hope, for both of us, that you find something under the hill. If you don't, I own other ground, and you can tackle some of it on the same terms."

With which charitable arrangement he turned back across the gulch, with Lish meekly following.

Channel Smith was still entertaining the other visitors with accounts of the pans of dirt he had taken from the gulch, and, overhearing him as they approached, Lish learned for the first time that the pans were steadily rising in value, and had now reached a worth of two dollars and forty cents. It did seem as if the old man must have found something, some time; but his hearers were leading him on by easy steps steps to greater exaggeration, and laughing at his lack of memory. They departed before the prospector had a chance to say anything, and then he turned on the Forty-niner and said to him: "Channel, you and me's got to quitlyin' about this ground of ours, now that we're both owners on this gulch. Lyin' ain't no good. You and me's done too much of it. We've done our share. After this let's try tellin' the truth for a while."

Before Channel could end his vociferous and indignant denial that he had ever stretched the truth, the prospector had started across the gulch to his new work, with a feeling that it was quite a fair world, and that, perhaps, there was something under the hill worth having. Channel, angered by the broad back turned toward him, plodded down the gulch toward his own claim, still expressing doubts of the value of "this-here risin' generation."

Quite steadily the prospector worked throughout the day, and when evening came, to Channels disgust, announced his intention to walk across to the Canada Hill and see how Mrs. Higgins progressed in her illness.

"Well," grumbled the old man, "I s'pose I'll have to go."

"I didn't ask you," said Lish, wishing no words.

"Yes, but I reckon you'd feel hurt if I didn't go 'long to kind of take care of you."

"Oh, I think I'll make it all right alone."

"But I'm sore of afraid you'd be lonesome without company."

"Nope, I won't be lonesome."

"Besides, I dont approve much of boys runnin' around late at nights without some of their elders with 'em. Every boy orter be in bed by nine at night. That's always been the way I sized it up."

The prospector looked at the veterand despairingly. He forgot his determination of the day to do no more prevaricating.

"All right," he said, with an assumption of acquiescence. "I reckon you're right. Only I think a workin'man's better off if he goes to bed with the chickens, and birds, and other fool things. I'll just turn in now."

Channel, who had settled himself for a comfortable smoke, after superintending the washing of the dishes, complaining of the way the beans were cooked, and suggesting various improvements, was highly aggrieved.

"It ain't good for young people to go to bed too early," he declared petulantly. "They oversleeps, and then they grows too much. Gets to be big, lo ky gawks. That's one thing that's the matter with me. Went to bed too early when I were a boy. 'Never go to bed before nine,' old Benjamin Franklin said, 'then you'll be healthy, busted, and smart.' He was right, that old feller was."

He looked around behind him at certain slipping of the battered canvas of the tent, to observe that the fly was being tied from inside, and held his pipe in his hand, his mouth open, and his shoulders bent forward.

"Good-night, old feller!" a voice came from within the tent.

He sat and smoked for a minute, then talked complainingly to himself, quavering his woes to the dusk. After a time, as the stars began to appear dimly through the twilight, he got stiffly up and walked to the tent fly. He pulled open one of the latches, and looked inside. The rear end of Mr. Henley's tent had mysteriously become unpegged, leaving a gaping hole beneath, and was quite empty.

The old man looked, agape, for an instant, then quivered with rage.

"Well, drat his imperdence!" he shouted, shaking a fist through the aperture. "For two cents I'd lambast him when he gets home. He's got to move back to that there cabin again, where I can keep an eye on him. The idea of such goin's on! Right here on my gulch, too!"

He trudged off down the trail, and even at that moment David Elisha Henley, two miles away, was inquiring solicitously concerning the health of Mrs. Higgins, and grinning at Maggie.

"The doctor says she's better today," Maggie announced; "but that she'll be sick maybe for some time. It looks like typhoid," and Murdock has been going after everybody about the water, and doing all sorts of things. Had half the day shift working above ground to clean things up, and says he'll throw anybody out that leaves garbage or rubbish anywhere around their cabins. But the doctor says Mrs. Higgins ought to pull through."

"All right," said Lish. "Now I've got that over with Maggie, I thought I'd like to talk to you." And he did. For two hours he sat there, outside the cabin, trying to prove himself a conversationalist, interrupted now and then by the demands of the patient, and all the time exposing new traits of character that puzzled the girl who had previously met no one like him.

"I'll be over every even'," he announced, when he took his departure. She bade him good night as if he were an old and familiar acquaintance, and he trudged homeward in the new moonlight, philosophically wondering whether Channel Smith would be found asleep on the bench in front of his tent.

On the night following Channel declared it his firm conviction that he had been scurvily treated.

"In the fust place," he said oracularly, "it was me what introduced you into good society over there. Secondly, I knowed Miss Higgins before you did, and it ain't proper for you to be gallivantin' over there without me. Third, it's a showin' disrespect for your elders to go to bed and leave 'em sittin' outside. Where in the name of common sense was you dragged up anyhow, not to know better manners?"

The replies of Lish did not appear to satisfy Mr. Smith.

"You just better pack your things to-morrer," he declared, "and move down to the cabin. I won't stand for such goin's on!"

In his indignation he forgot to tarry that evening, and the prospector made his start without interruption. He was not to have an evening with Maggie alone, however, for he found Murdock there when he arrived. They sat and talked, like old friends, and Maggie listened. The mine superintendent was angry because the news had come across the Divide that a stage had been held up, the fourth in three months, and the express looted. He suggested that the company ought to have a man of Henley's quickness to protect it; but Lish shook his head and declared that he was too peaceful for that sort of work; that whenever he heard of a fight, he usually ran in the opposite direction; that all he was looking for was the pursuit of happiness guaranteed by the Declaration of Independence.

On the following night he found Channel Smith there before he arrived and was compelled to listen to the old man's garrulity for an hour, although, with Maggie quite close by his side, he succeeded in holding a few whispered sentences with her. That she agreed with him in regarding the Forty-niner as being something of an unwanted guest soothed his spirit, and made him pleasant to that person on the homeward route.

And thus, for a week, he worned by days, and visited by nights. It was just seven days after he had become a partner in the claim that anyone standing on the bank above him would have discerned a trace of excitement in his manner as he carried a pan of red dirt down to the edge of the creek, where he had hollowed out a little cove to still the brawling current. He squatted down and let the water run over the submerged edge of the gold pan, and then thrust his hands deep into the mud and worked it, friable, between his fingers. A red stream smirched the clear waters of the creek, and were lost in the eddies as it hurried busily down the gulch.

The sun was dropping out over the westward trees of the glade as he swirled the pan and worked its contents finer and finer, and threw to one side the gravel that encumbered it. Now the pan swung gently, sidewise, tilted to the angle taught by long experience. The water was not so freely admitted. He ran the little swinging stream of black sand slowly around the channel. He gave a sudden intake of breath, quick and jubilant, and, seasoned as he was, there was excitement in his manner as he watched; for trailing heavily along after the black rivulet resting in the moisture, ran a stream of slow-moving yellow—the soft, warm yellow that comes from virgin gold.

He straightened up and repressed a desire to shout, to throw his hat, to jump up and down. He had struck the edge of a pay streak, and knew it. His conjectures promised to come true. He hurried over to the tent and got an old tomato can from a little heap outside, rushed back to the stream, washed it out with due care, and dumped the little trail of gold into it.

"Twenty or thirty cents there, if I know anything about it!" he declared aloud, as he ran back up to his pit and dropped into it. He threw aside a few more shovelfuls of earth, and scratched closely to th ebed rock, stopping now and then to inspect it as he did so, but in the dust of ages it refused to show the gleam. This time, down by the creek border, he found it harder to suppress himself, for in the last of the pan's yielding he found coarse gold. He stood with the pan in his hand for a moment, then threw it off on the side, and looked down the gulch.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Severe Case of a Philadelphia Woman—Her Symptoms.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness.

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I threw away the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY JOHNSTON, 210 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Bad Case.

Ephrata, Pa.—"About a year ago I was down with nervous prostration. I was pale and weak and would have hysteric spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my shoulder-blade. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand long enough to do my dishes.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now."—Mrs. J. W. HORNBERGER, R. No. 3, Ephrata, Pa.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

A GAME LOSER.

They were talking in the smoking room about steamship sharpers, and "Alf" Hayman, the impresario, said:

"I'll tell you a story about a Chillicothian.

"A Chillicothian, on the way back home from a summer tour of Europe, shared a stateroom with two men who, he had reason to believe, were sharpers.

"He believed they were sharpers because they were continually proposing the most tempting bets to him—bets where it seemed impossible for him to lose—and, yet, as soon as he put up his money, the two men took it away from him.

"So he came to believe that the bets were crooked. Nevertheless they were all so tempting that he couldn't resist them, and finally his funds got down to $8.50.

"On the last day of the voyage he said to the two men:

"'Well, fellows, you've cleaned me of everything but my honour and $8.50, and I'm willing to risk the $8.50 on a last bet with you, provided you'll let me decide what the bet is to be.'

"They agreed for they were curious and there was little to be lost.

"'Well, fellows,' he said, 'this is the bet. I'll bet you $8.50 that, as we sail up the bay I'll yell louder than the ship's steam whistle.'

"He looked in their astonished faces and added.

"'Of course I'll lose, but by gosh, I know the whistle can't be fixed.'"

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Masser, Consecon, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

The Top Hat.

Although the beginning of the "cylinder of civilization," as it has been called, can be traced back to the Elizabethan era, it is only about seventy or eighty years ago that the top hat of the present day reached its final shape. Since then it has altered slightly in the dimensions of the crown and the curl of the brim, but the hat itself has remained essentially unchanged. The top hat seems to have had its beginning in the habit of gallants in the Elizabethan period of cocking up one side of their broad brimmed, high crowned felt or beaver hats and securing them with a jewel. The French court later developed this into cocking up three sides of the hat and fastening one with a loop of ribbon. From this fashion came the cocktade, now used only by grooms and footmen. The silk hat of today was born in France and supplanted the now nearly extinct beaver hat of practically the same shape, though considerably larger.—London Standard.

Blind Swimmers.

The man who is unfortunate enough to lose his sight or to be born blind is, says a medical authority, severely handicapped on dry ground, but he can, if he is a swimmer, find his way easily enough in the water. Blind people generally have a keen sense of hearing, and they can steer themselves in the water by sound as well as an ordinary man by sight. If they are swimming toward a certain point a whistle from time to time will enable them to reach it with unerring accuracy. This fact has been proved by some interesting experiments. A race between blind men and ordinary swimmers on a lake resulted in a victory for the former. Normal swimmers lose much time in raising their heads for the purpose of keeping their eyes on the winning post. This also prevents them from concentrating all their attention on speed.—Exchange.

Back Was Lame For Two Years

Stomach Troubles and Weakness of Kidneys Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

There is an enormous amount of suffering from kidney and liver derangements and stomach troubles that could easily be avoided by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. If you could only realize the scores of everyday ills that arise from a sluggish condition of the kidneys, liver, and bowels you would not be long in giving this medicine a trial.

Mrs. Edward Stewart, New Richmond West, Que., writes: "I want to tell you how thankful I am for using your Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for stomach troubles and backaches caused by weak kidneys. I was unable to wash any clothes for over two years on account of my back being lame. I read the Almanac and began using these pills. Two boxes made a complete cure. I can do my own washing and other work now, and want to say to lady friends that they do not know how much I appreciate Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills".

UNCROWNED KINGS

A Number of Britons Have Little Monarchies of Their Own

Apart from the fact that he was the most successful chocolate manufacturer in the world, the late M. Henri Menier had another claim to distinction. He was monarch of Anticosti, an island in the mouth of the St. Lawrence, 135 miles long by 50 miles broad, which he purchased in 1896 for £135,000. M. Menier's object in purchasing the island was to transform it into the biggest private game preserve in the world. He had it stocked with all sorts of animals, and had two armed steamers to protect the island and its fisheries.

Anticosti, however, is but a small island kingdom when compared with some of those scattered around the shores of the United Kingdom which are owned and reigned over by private individuals. Lewis, in the Outer Hebrides, whose ruler is Major Matheson, boasts an area of 437,321 acres, and a population of nearly 30,000 people. Indeed, it is the largest island in the United Kingdom next to Ireland. On its extensive moors and forest land the red deer still roam, while its magnificent lochs are unequalled for fishing.

A few years ago Lord Strathcona purchased from the heirs of Sir John McNeill the island of Colonsay, which is eight miles long and from one and a half to three miles in width, while the island of Rum, or Rhum, is reigned over by Sir John Bullough. On the latter island are some of the finest herds, and it provides some of the best shooting in Scotland. The place, indeed, abounds with every variety of game, which is zealously guarded by its owner.

In the Outer Hebrides is another island kingdom, the island of North Uist, belonging to Sir Arthur J. Campbell-Orde, who served with great distinction in the South African War. It has an area of 76,000 acres and a population of nearly 4,000. No one can land or reside upon the island without the owner's permission, while it is also free from taxation—or, rather, no rates or taxes can be levied without the consent of the ruler.

Girl's Nerves Fully Restored

Was Never Able to Obtain Lasting Benefit Until Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Was Used.

Too many girls grow up with weak, anaemic bodies and exhausted nervous systems. Indoor life and too much application in school are sometimes the cause.

The blood needs enriching and the nerves need strengthening by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This food cure is doing wonders for many thousands of girls whose parents had almost despaired of their ever developing into strong, healthy women.

Mrs. J. Bagnall, 305 Woodville Avenue, Toronto, writes: "My daughter suffered from nervousness since childhood, and any medicines she tried did not do any lasting good. We read in the papers about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and my daughter used it with wonderful results. This treatment has built up her system and so strengthened the nerves that she feels like another girl".

FREAKISH PHOTOS

Moonlight Effects Obtained by Taking the Sun.

TRICK OF THE GHOST FAKE.

"Spook" and "Vision" Pictures Only Require a Little Care and Simple Apparatus, and It Is Easy to Photograph a Man Inside a Pint Bottle.

Moonlight effects in photography are generally gained by trickery. Of course it is possible to take photographs by moonlight, the exposure varying from thirty minutes to two hours. The results, however, are rarely satisfactory, owing to the movement of the shadows producing a blurred effect in the finished print. To obtain a moonlight picture of the approved sort—a fine cloud effect with the moon casting a long line of brilliant light upon water—special preparations must be made.

A rather cloudy sunset must be chosen. Then when the sun drops low on the horizon and is partly obscured by the cloud bank one seizes the opportunity to secure a snapshot (the lens being well "stopped down") right into the eye of the light. The plate thus obtained should be slightly underdeveloped. If all has gone well the resulting negative will supply a picture exactly resembling a moonlight effect, and by carefully gumming a small circle of opaque paper upon the film one is able to print out the "moon" into the bargain.

Photographs in which the snow appears to be falling are usually produced by artificial means. If the subject is to be a portrait the sitter should be garbed appropriately and placed before a wintry background. When the negative is obtained it should be dried and well varnished, then placed flat upon a table with the film side uppermost. Take a soft toothbrush charged with rather thick india ink and carmine mixed up with water and draw it over the teeth of the comb, which should be held some little distance from the negative. If this operation is carefully managed the result will be an irregular spattering of the pigment upon the varnished film, and when this is dry a print will be produced which looks just as though the negative had been taken in a snowstorm.

Photographs of the class in which ghosts or visions appear may be "faked" in several ways. The first of these may be described in the duplicate exposure method. Suppose, for example, we wish to photograph a man inside a bottle which will hold no more than a pint of liquid. To accomplish this apparently impossible feat proceed as follows: First photograph the bottle standing upon a dull black support and with similar background. While focusing take care to mark out what will be the bottle's boundaries on the plate by fixing little pieces of gummed paper to the ground glass screen of the camera. Then get your man to stand or sit in a chair upon a black cloth with a smooth black curtain behind him. Focus upon him so that he falls within the boundaries of the bottle, this being easily managed by means of the gummed paper guides. Finally expose the plate which has already been used to photograph the bottle, and when this is developed your friend will duly appear—inside.

This method will be found in practice to explain many pictures which at first seem very astonishing. To make a "vision fake" arrange a little scene, such as a bare room with an empty hearth, with your model sitting listlessly in the foreground. Make your first exposure on this scene, being careful to mark out on the ground glass screen the space into which the vision must fall. A dark curtain or dark woodwork should occupy this space in the first picture. Now procure a sheet of dead black paper, mount it evenly upon stiff card and with a little Chinese white sketch out an appropriate vision.

If you cannot do this yourself get an artist friend to help you, but see that the sketch is placed in the correct spot—i. e., the spot which you have arranged for it to occupy in the finished picture. When the sketch is finished set it up before the camera, focus and see that it falls within the required boundary upon the screen. Then expose again the plate which has already done duty and—if no miscalculations have been made—an interesting "vision" picture will result.

The ghost "fake" may be made in exactly the same way, only in this case an appropriate scene would be a deserted churchyard, with your model posing in an awestruck attitude beside a tomb. In all photographs of this kind the reader should bear in mind that a dead black background does not appreciably affect the sensitized plate, but a show plate should be used whenever this is possible, as by this means any slight tendency to "fog" will be obviated.—Scientific American.

Returned the Compliment.

Shortly after the workmen had finished the landlord took especial pains to show to each tenant the bill for doing over his flat. The householders regarded that attention in different lights, according to the improvements they had fought for and got. Some looked frightened, thinking it portended a raise in rent, some apologetic, others defiant. The third floor right man was noncommittal. Three days later he called at the landlord's office and showed him a slip of paper. It was a bill for six shirts, some socks and ties, a hat and a blue serge suit.

"What's this got to do with me?" the landlord asked.

"Oh, nothing," said the man. "Just an interchange of courtesies. Nothing like being neighborly, you know."

PAIN IN MY BACK IS ALL GONE

Since I Got a Box of Gin Pills

CHURCH ST., CORNWALLIS, N.S.
January 23rd,

"About a year ago, I was suffering so much with a dreadful Lame Back and Hips, that I could not stand up straight. I was informed by a friend about GIN PILLS. I got a box. It helped me immediately. I have taken about twelve boxes and the pains in my back and hips are all gone. I cannot speak too highly of the wonderful effects of your GIN PILLS".

BURGLAR PROOF

The Bank of England Is Guarded by Men and Machinery

The Bank of England is quite the best guarded institution in the world. No burglar or bank thief has ever succeeded in making it part with a cent.

The great outer doors are so finely balanced that a clerk can, by pressing a knob under his desk, instantly shut them in the face of anyone making a dash for the street. They cannot be opened except by special machinery. In recesses near the doors are hidden four guardians, who, without being seen themselves, watch all visitors through mirrors.

Special and costly precautions are taken to guard the bullion department, where the gold is stored. It has been stated that the whole department is submerged every night in several feet of water by machinery. The same machinery would be also set in action automatically, if at any time during the day the place was tampered with.

THINGS HE DIDN'T KNOW.

They Were Many, but That Didn't Keep Him From Giving an Opinion.

A well known architect was summoned as a witness in a Long Island court in a suit over the cost of a building. The lawyer whose duty it was to cross examine started in to attack the credibility of the witness.

"Do you know how much a hundred these bricks cost?"

"I do not."

"Do you know how much this cement cost per bag?"

"No."

"Do you know how expensive sand is down here?"

"I can't say that I do exactly."

The lawyer looked at the witness with fine scorn.

"And yet you pretend to come here and qualify as an expert. How can you give any kind of an opinion on how much this building ought to have cost when you don't know the prices of the material it's made of?"

The witness looked at the lawyer with a flash in his eye that boded ill.

"Well," he said, "I don't know the price of needles nor the price of thread nor how much cheap cotton material costs, but I don't hesitate to express a solemn opinion that that suit of clothes you're wearing cost about $5.50."—New York Post.

CROOKED BILLET INN.

London's Oldest Public House and Its Romantic Interior.

The Crooked Billet, an inn which stands upon Tower hill, boasts itself, says the London Graphic, as the oldest public house in London. How far back its history goes it would be impossible to say. The records are wanting, but there is every reason to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved.

In the principal reception room are to be seen some magnificent oak panelings, a quaintly carved freize above the door and a no less richly carved mantelpiece. The ceiling is covered with a number of strange devices, with a female head—believed to represent Queen Elizabeth—in the center. The windows looking out upon the street are fastened with shutters clamped with huge iron bars.

There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet. The place was known in those days as "the old house at the bottom of the Minories."

Choate and Depew.

At an annual dinner of the St. Nicholas society Ambassador Joseph H. Choate was down for the toast "The Navy," while Senator Depew was to respond to "The Army."

Depew began by saying: "It's well to have a specialist. That's why Choate is here to speak about the navy. We met at the wharf once, and I never saw him again till we reached Liverpool. When I asked how he felt he said he thought he would have enjoyed the trip over if he had had any ocean air. Yes, you want to hear Choate on the navy."

Choate responded: "I've heard Depew hailed as the greatest after dinner speaker. If after dinner speaking, as I have heard it described and as I believe it to be, is the art of saying nothing at all then Dr. Depew is the most marvelous speaker in the universe."

Wagner Worship.

"There is no such worship of national genius in America as prevails abroad," said a recently returned tourist. "In Germany, for instance, at the opera the scale of prices varies according to the composer, Wagner, of course, commanding the top notch admission. But the most peculiar feature of this musical adoration is that it affects the toilets as well. With the elaborate gowning of a New York audience in mind, I approached our landlady as to the propriety of appearing at the opera in such a makeshift costume as my tourist wardrobe afforded. 'It depends entirely upon the composer you intend to hear, fraulein,' was her astonishing reply. 'For some your present attire would be perfectly proper, but if it is the great Wagner you are to hear'— She broke off, but an expressive shrug of the shoulders told plainer than words that it would be an affront to his ashes to appear in anything but the most stunning and up to date evening gown."—New York Tribune.

When Thanks Were Given.

Many years ago a noted chief of the tribe of Chippewa Indians while hunting wounded a deer and followed it for miles. The chase was long and very severe, and the Indian was in the last stages of exhaustion from fatigue and lack of food and water when he found himself on the top of a wonderful mountain, at the foot of which nestled a beautiful lake crystal clear. From the surface of the lake trout leaped, and upon the shore lay the deer he had hunted. Here were food, water, fish and fuel for cooking.

Raising his hand and facing the setting sun, the exhausted chief exclaimed, "Ish-pem-ing," which in the Chippewa tongue means "heaven" or "the place on high."

The story was remembered, and the name given by the Indian was adopted by the white settlers when the present city of Ishpeming, Mich., was formed.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Not Enough Practice.

"Oh, Johnnie, Johnnie," said the aunt reproachfully, "why is it you never remember to say 'Thank you?'"

"I expect it's 'cause I don't get things given to me often enough for practice," answered the young diplomat, hopefully eying a box of chocolates.—Philadelphia Ledger.

LAMP SHADE EFFECT.

The Salient Costume Point Is the Flare.

SUIT OF BLUE CLOTH AND SATIN.

Costume, suit and wrap fashions for the fall season are characterized not so much by novelty of form as by novelty and beauty of materials and colorings. The oriental form is still maintained, but the eastern influence is lessening considerably and is already on the decline from a novelty standpoint. Women of good taste are demanding liberation from too uniform a dress, and there will be more individuality than heretofore from the Paris dressmakers. Each big maker will stand for what is his conception of the proper dress for the fashionable woman of 1913-14. Despite this variety, however, there is an accordance. Thus, while some makers show long coats and others short jackets, the two seemingly opposed forms are brought into harmony through the fact that in the long coats there is nearly always a break at the waist line, brought about by a girdle, the cut of the vest, etc. One of the new ideas is the hip flare or lamp shade effect. The charm of this costume is the lamp shade effect in the coat and on the skirt. The model is developed in blue cloth and satin, and the collar and cuffs are of sealskin.

The Accommodating Salt.

There isn't a better friend in the household than common salt, and one can't begin to remember the half of the things it will gladly do for us if but given the opportunity.

Salt sprinkled over a carpet after it is swept will brighten the colors and kill germs.

A pinch of salt in the water will help to keep cut flowers fresh.

To clean a white knit sweater or shawl put it into a flour bag containing equal parts of flour and salt and shake well. No washing will be required after this process.

For cleaning enamel bathtubs, etc., rub with a cloth saturated with kerosene, upon which has been spread a layer of salt. Afterward rinse tub down with warm, soapy water.

Before washing soiled handkerchiefs allow them to soak in cold water into which has been put a handful or so of salt. This makes them much easier to wash.

Before washing new goods let stand in salt and water to set the color.

For killing plantain leaves or weeds keep wetting with a strong solution of salt and water. Rock salt or table salt may be used. If preferred, the salt may be sprinkled on the weeds and then wet with a hose. Rock salt is the better of the two for the latter method.

Salt in the bottom of the shoes in winter will help the circulation and prevent the feet from getting cold. This precaution is quite common and effective among Maine woodsmen.

A quarter of a teaspoonful in a quarter of a glass of water taken a half hour before breakfast is a good laxative and generally beneficial.

The hands of fainting persons are often rubbed with salt to help the circulation.

But of the uses of salt there seems no end.

Tastes of Kings

A most abstemious man, King George, according to Court gossip, is not very fond of champagne or heavy wines, a light wine or a whisky and soda being more to his taste. His appetite, however, is always good, and unlike King Edward, who hated long meals, his present Majesty likes to dine well and leisurely. He is very fond of creams, sweets, ices and fruits, and above all good English cheese. King Edward, on the other hand, preferred savories.

Telephone Girl's Coiffure

Fraulein Irene Tresth, a young woman employed as a telephone operator, won an action in the Berlin courts for damages for summary dismissal against her former employer. The case arose out of the style of coiffure adopted by the lady which involved the wearing of a bandeau covering her ears. As she refused to dress her hair in a fashion to permit of the receiver being applied direct to the ear, her employer dismissed her on the spot. The young lady appeared in court with a bandeau, which only allowed the smallest portion of the lobe of the ear to be seen, and the judges after solemn deliberation found that a coiffure after the style of Cleo de Merode was not sufficient reason for dismissing an employe without due notice.

Adventure in Small Boat

Fears were entertained for the safety of an Orkney man, James Stout, who put off alone in a small boat, stating that has was going to the Faroe Islands. He was seen five miles off Papa Westray rowing out to sea, and a boat's crew which put off to endeavor to bring him back, lost sight of him in the darkness during a gale. He appeared at Marwick, after spending three days in the open boat without food or water. He obtained some food from a house, and again set off to sea. Two days later he arrived at Tongue, Sutherlandshire.

Detective Stories by a Real Detective

Clever Thief, Who Stole Famous Clark Diamonds, Leads Sleuths a Merry Chase

By George S. Dougherty.
Second Deputy Police Commissioner of New York.

(Copyright, 1912, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

GEMS worth a king's ransom—valued by diamond experts at $50,000, but priceless in the estimation of their owner, because of sentimental reasons—lay buried in a rude box in Morningside Park, in New York city, for months while detectives whom I led scoured the country at large for a tangible clew through which I could fasten the crime upon the thief who abstracted them from a vault, a man I suspected and shadowed from the day of their taking, but who had kept up a brave front to the end. These, in a nutshell, are the facts surrounding the theft of the jewels of Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark, the capture, release, recapture and conviction of "Billy" Coleman, the thief who so slyly stole them and who subsequently led me one of the merriest chases of my professional career.

Had James Fenimore Cooper imagined, when he wrote "The Pathfinder" and his other interesting "Leather Stocking" tales of adventure, the scenes of which were laid on the shores of Otsego Lake and right where Cooperstown, N. Y., is now located, that more than forty years later a mysterious gem robbery would occur there, how he would have revelled at the thought of writing this story, with its many peculiar intricacies and frequent lively action! There are few or none of us residing in or about New York who are not familiar with the history of the Clark family—of the very best American origin. William A. Clark was one of the men who financed and introduced the sewing machine into the American household, and long before his death acquired vast wealth, which he bequeathed to his wife and children. The Clarks practically alone erected the great Singer Building, in New York city. Mrs. William A. Clark, long after her husband's death, married Bishop Henry Codman Potter, forming one of the most benevolent couples to grace New York society. For years the Clark family has owned a vast country estate in and near Cooperstown. There was never a more courageous or daring gentleman rider of high class jumping horses than Mr. F. Ambrose Clark, the oldest son. At his mother's home he maintains a private race course, takes keen delight in breaking hunters, and has bred some of the very best cross country horses in America. In the good old racing days when the "jumpers" started once every racing day at Morris Park, Sheepshead Bay and Saratoga, Mr. Clark was sure to have a good one in at choice odds, and backers were always sure to get a good run for their money, a good price and usually be down on a winner if Mr. Clark was "up."

Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark also was a remarkably clever and daring rider of hunters. In the summer much of their time was spent at the beautiful Clark homestead. Arriving there in the early summer of 1904, young Mrs. Clark brought her jewels with her. So valuable and beautiful were they that it was deemed advisable to keep them in the great vault and safe in the office of the Clark estate in Cooperstown. Of course they reasoned the jewels were really safe in madam's jewel case at home, but how much more secure they would be in the estate office! So there they were taken—a treasure box valued at $50,000—and packed safely and securely away in a locked jewel casket with some valuable papers.

Employes in the estate office were cautioned to carefully place them in the most secure compartment in the vault. What an imposing structure the Clark estate office building is! A one story white marble structure of Colonial design with great marble columns in front of it, it could readily be taken for a public library, a bank or a government building. It stands alone on a knoll and has a long row of marble steps leading to the big double front doors. There are a side and a cellar entrance. Inside is the usual dignified office. The clerks are behind massive screens and railings and right in the middle of the room stand the big double doored vault and burglar proof safe. If a professional thief sized the place up from the exterior he would not consider it good "picking" for his line; but if he saw the inside—especially the vault and safe—he might decide to take a chance at it.

The same routine was followed in the estate office on the morning of July 7, 1904, as occurred every other weekday. The manager came a little later than the office staff, but by nine o'clock every one was ready to transact whatever business came in.

It was customary for all the estate office employes to leave the building for luncheon at noon. Cooperstown is such a quiet, well behaved town—on a branch of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad—that no one had ever heard of a crime being committed there. The court house and jail are there and the judges and sheriff all live there. It was unusual for merchants to lock their store doors at midday while they went home for the noonday meal. The last employe left the estate office at twenty minutes after twelve o'clock. At one o'clock, when all returned to their desks, everything appeared in apple pie order. In fact nothing unusual was discovered until five o'clock in the afternoon, when the jewel box was found in the cellar of the estate office. It had been forced open with sharp instruments that belonged to the building—a chisel and hatchet. The thief had evidently wounded him or herself, because there were many stains on a detective sent over from the Pinkerton agency to investigate a crime he was likely to lose.

HE APPEARED TO BE SEARCHING FOR SOMETHING.

There appeared to have been a struggle. There were small footprints, from the heels of a woman's shoe apparently. Then there were larger footprints on the cellar floor. A white muslin flour sack that belonged in the cellar was spattered with stains. Yes, the thief had wiped his or her hands on the bag.

That was all any one could tell me when I arrived at Cooperstown to investigate. They confidentially whispered to me and sincerely advised me how the crime had been committed and by whom. Inside job, or inside assistance was the cry. "There's a woman in it, sure as shooting," one would say. And every one told me to look for some one with a cut on his or her hands. The thief must be in town yet, was the cry. Positively a job by "local talent," I was told. How would a stranger know those costly jewels were in that safe and when he could steal them unless some one who worked in the office had tipped off the whole thing?

And again, didn't the job show great familiarity with the surroundings? Who'd know where to get the chisel and hatchet but some one who knew that cellar?

Why, the wise, shrewd, calculating natives had me half convinced that their theories were correct, but fortunately I possessed much valuable experience and knowledge of the methods of the high class professional criminal. Could he not turn this trick single handed at noontime? On the face of it, did not the job have all the earmarks of a first class bank sneak or "cheel" man? But if the trick was turned by an old timer it was so cleanly and cleverly done that an experienced detective could pick the man among dozen or so in a jiffy. I was with Pinkerton men then, and I had the names and pedigrees of the best all round thieves at my finger tips, whether they were in or out. "Workers" or "squared up." And when I got to see [illegible] I was positive the one of "Billy" Coleman [illegible]. That's the man I want to see." Another witness corroborated her identification.

It is no [illegible] for a crook to be on the street, and a detective must get him closer than that to hold him on a criminal charge. Closer than that I could not go. Still, with his criminal record and the identifications, a warrant was issued for his arrest, charging him with the robbery. I was not altogether sure he had committed the crime. I had seen mistakes made in identifications, but with the warrant we could pick him up in New York, learn if he had any "fresh cuts on him," fetch him to Cooperstown and have the citizens see him. A lot of things could happen. Again I might locate "Billy" in New York, put some good clever "shadows" on him, and this way I might trail him to "the goods" and then have it "on him good" if he was the thief. The more I thought of the job, the identifications and circumstances surrounding the crime, the more I liked the "Billy" Coleman clew.

I told the authorities to hold the warrant until Coleman was located, when they would be notified. Meanwhile, a description of the stolen gems was sent broadcast. A large reward was offered for their recovery and the arrest of the thief. The New York newspapers were ablaze with accounts of the robbery, photographs of the Clarks, &c., but finding "Billy" Coleman was no easy task. He was a New York man, but he was a great traveller as well, usually making the big cities here or abroad his headquarters. I roamed the streets of New York searching for him. One night in Seventh avenue, near the Thirties, I saw a one-time side partner of Coleman. I trailed him, and, sure enough, we met "Billy." We trailed him until he went to his home, away uptown, on the west side. Other detectives relieved me in the morning, and night and day constant surveillance was kept up, but we never made a suspicious move.

He met thieves. Used to take his wife and her dog, a little black and white fox terrier, out for a walk at night. Sometimes they dropped into an Episcopal church. When I told Bishop Potter this he had a hearty laugh. He used to joke with me about it and asked me if I thought one Episcopalian would rob another. Without permitting Coleman to become suspicious a cautious examination of his hands was made by us with field glasses to see if he had been cut, but there were no signs of it. We speculated as to whether it would be wise to arrest him, take him to Cooperstown, and if he was turned out or released, thus satisfy him that we were mistaken about him—throwing him off his guard so we could trail him again. That sounded good, so on July 26, 1904, Joe Dowling and Adolph Oppenheim, Headquarters detectives, arrested him. By the way, Dowling is one of the detectives under my supervision in the New York Police Department now. And a corking good "fly cop" he is, too.

After the arrest Billy was sent to Cooperstown. Not a clew was found in New York to justify any suspicion that he had committed the robbery. Not a mark was found on Coleman. Altogether the case against him looked terribly weak. I talked with the old fellow. Of course, he said he was innocent. Never had heard of Cooperstown in his life. His arrest, he said, was an outrage. He was identified by the two Cooperstown witnesses as the suspicious stranger seen hanging around the Italian's fruit stand opposite the estate office about noon the day of the robbery. But the problem was too knotty for the magistrate. He passed it along to the Grand Jury, which convened in October, 1904. I could not strengthen the evidence, as there were no new witnesses. I testified before the Grand Jury, told the story of the crime as it is told here. They had the jewel case, the hatchet and chisel and the linen flour sack all covered with stains. The Jury put it up to me that if Coleman was the guilty one where did the stains come from?

I remember the foreman of the Grand Jury asking me if I had found any evidence that Coleman had any fresh cuts on his hand, face or body when he was arrested nineteen days after the crime was committed. I was forced to admit there were none. The jurors examined Coleman minutely. All concluded I was mistaken and overzealous and the old fellow was released. A big fuss was made over him when he got out. Some folks put fresh apples in his pockets and gave him all kinds of edibles, and when he left the village he was a real hero. The detectives, like those in the play, were the "know nothing boobs." But Billy liked me because I frankly admitted to him that my case against him was weak, and I blamed his arrest on the natives who had identified him. We journeyed to Oneonta together, followed cautiously by two Pinkerton "shadows" whom I had secretly sent ahead of me to Cooperstown to trail Billy in case he was turned out, which I hoped would occur, so that the loot might be located. In fact, when I testified before the Grand Jury I purposely admitted a weakness in my case.

No one would ever have suspected the two trailers. They looked like local "rubes." The District Attorney, a fine fellow with a Vandyke beard, who did a lot of clever summing up before the Grand Jury, told me when I asked him who my two men were that they were farm hands from up country—hop pickers, perhaps. When I left Coleman at Christopher street he was satisfied I was convinced of his innocence; there were no hard feelings between us. The faithful "rubes" (Pinkerton men in disguise) followed him to the Christopher street "L" station, where I lost sight of them.

The constant surveillance of Coleman was kept up in and out of New York city continuously from October, 1904, until January 3, 1905. He didn't make any false moves to speak of in November or in the early part of December, but in the latter part of December he made mysterious visits to Morningside Park—always very early in the morning. He appeared to be searching for something. At a quarter past six o'clock one morning in January, 1905, I went to West 135th street, near Eighth avenue, dug through the snow to the ground and dug some distance in the ground, but did not locate what he was looking for.

At first we thought he was trying to find out if he was being watched, because he went to very lonely and unfrequented places early in the morning, but after he had stopped digging in the snow in West 135th street "Billy" McDonald, Montgomery Wade and I went there and dug. We searched and searched, and finally located his plant. There eighteen inches below the surface in a Mason fruit jar, wrapped in the thinnest of white rubber, were the Clark jewels, almost all intact, excepting a few loose stones "Billy" had removed and realized on for running expenses. After removing the stolen gems from the jar the following note was written and inserted in the jar, which was reburied:—

"At 6:45 P. M., Monday, Jan. 9, 1905, this jar was removed from its hiding place at the base of the fourth pillar of Creighton's Iron Foundry, north side of West 135th street, between Eighth and Central avenues, by Geo. S. Dougherty, W. H. McDonald and Montgomery Wade, and taken to a vacant room on the southeast corner of 153d street and Eighth avenue, where its contents, consisting of diamonds, pearls and other jewelry, were removed. [Signed.]

"GEORGE S. DOUGHERTY,
"W. H. McDONALD,
"MONTGOMERY WADE,
"of the Pinkerton National Detective Agency."

In Coleman's room some of the loose diamonds were found buried in the earth in rubber plant jars and one large diamond was sewed in one of Coleman's four-in-hand ties. He was a wonderful "hider."

At my request Detective Sergeant Michael J. Cooney, now an acting captain in the New York city detective force, rearrested Coleman. With the jewels in my possession and after a little moral suasion Coleman confessed to the robbery.

"I was out in the cherry valley hunting for some soft 'jog' (meaning bank touch) a few months before this robbery," Coleman told me, "and I spotted this 'mark.' I honestly thought it was a country bank. When I ran up to sneak the place I consulted the trolley time table and found the cars ran on a half-hour schedule from Cooperstown to Oneonta. I watched the building till every one left it. I sneaked in the front door, which was unlocked; went to the vault, the doors of which were closed. The combination lock, however, was on the half turn. I opened it. The safe door was the same way, and when I looked in it was the first inkling I had that it was not a bank. There was no money in sight. I spotted the jewel case, took it to the basement, where I found the hatchet and chisel; forced it open, took the contents and a bundle of valuable papers, beat it out of the side door and caught the half-past twelve o'clock trolley to Oneonta."

"But, 'Billy,'" I asked, "where did all the stains come from?"

"Why, George, I worked so fast to finish the job and catch the trolley that I suffered a hemorrhage from the nose. My clothes were covered with stains, but fortunately they were black and they did not show."

The humane nature of Bishop Potter and his wife were in evidence when 'Billy' came up for sentence on March 13, 1905. With his long criminal record, Coleman as a second offender could have been sent to prison for life. But had he not confessed to his crime? Had not the jewels been recovered? Had he not exonerated every employe in the estate office, and was he not entitled, we agreed and argued, to some consideration?

So he was sentenced to only six years and five months in the Auburn State Prison by Judge Sewell.

The Clark family through charitable institutions they were interested in supported Coleman's wife while he was in prison, but she died before his release, and when he came out they gave him a new start in life. But this did not last long, for he is now finishing a four year and six months' term of penal servitude in the United States prison at Atlanta, Ga., for the theft of a big bundle of postage stamps at Baltimore.

Coleman was a remarkable criminal and in his time stole upward of a million dollars, but he gambled and squandered every dollar of it. He spent half of his seventy-four years in prison. He told me he never in all his criminal career committed a single act of violence. His love for his wife was pathetic and pure. She was a good, Christian woman, and while she lived she did all in her power to reform him and she stuck by him in all his troubles and weaknesses. He was a queer character, for he would not harm a flea, but he could never resist the temptation of turning a big trick if the chances were at all favorable.

London Has One Animal That Doesn't Drink

AN animal that never drinks has arrived in London. Undoubtedly it is the first and only one, and all London is rushing to see it. Naturally such a curiosity is confined in the zoo.

"Wot a hun'appy beast it is; no wonder its bristles stick out like that," remarks a man who has just drawn the back of his hand across his mouth.

"'E do look drier than me Sunday 'at," assented his companion.

Temperance advocates use the newcomer to point a moral and adorn a tale. "Behold the lesson that he teacheth. Never a drop passes his lips. Would that there were men in London that could say as much!"

It remains to be seen whether this Brazilian tree porcupine will take to drink now that he has been separated from his South American habitat and brought to the gloomy and chill purlieus of London. If he does demand drink, what will he choose? Maybe some of the curious visitors will surreptitiously ply him with a little ale or gin or some other London beverage to see its effect upon an animal that has never had a drop of anything to drink.

In his native Brazil this animal feeds upon the bark and leaves of trees, and the natives are very fond of its flesh. It has a prehensile tail which serves as a fifth hand.

Aeroplane for Safety, Not Speed.

IF safety rather than speed is the desideratum in flying, the Dunne automatic-stability aeroplane is undoubtedly one of the most valuable contributions to the air craft that have been made.

An expert is quoted as saying:—"It is necessary not to be too enthusiastic about the Dunne biplane until it has been further developed. The inventor himself admits that in its present stage it is capable of considerable improvement; yet one can easily appreciate the fact that when the ideas have been realised a very great advance will have been made. In its present form the chief objection to the Dunne machine is that it is heavy and comparatively slow, but it undoubtedly fulfils the inventor's claims to automatic stability. Those claims are that the machine cannot be turned over to a dangerous angle in the air and that any one with sufficient sense to drive a motor car can drive it. It is necessary to realize that any well designed modern aeroplane will right itself if blown over sideways by a gust provided it has room to fall and straighten out afterward. The point about the Dunne is that the same gust that blows it up on one side passes on and blows it up on the other side as well, so that instead of rocking wildly from side to side and dropping a considerable distance before it rights itself, the Dunne merely rolls gently and rises and falls almost on an even keel. Consequently the pilot does not have to fly the machine, he merely directs it. The difference is very much that between a rolling skiff which has to be balanced by the occupant and a life boat which balances itself."

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

QSESTION OF AGE

"I'm too old," protested Eggert. He said it in the comfortable tone of a bachelor who is quite aware of his attractions. One never hears a short, fat, ugly man insisting that he is too old—it is always some one like Eggert, who is tall and broad-shouldered and square-chinned and has invitations out to dinner seven nights a week.

"Now, Mr. Eggert," cried the eldest Allwood girl, using her eyes upon him with great effect. "You too old! The idea! Why, everybody dances nowadays. I saw Mr. Betz, the president of the bank, dancing at the Country Club last night—and he is heaps and heaps older than you! Why, he must be 30 years older!"

"Oh, no!" cried Eggert. But he beamed "When you're 42 it is pleasant to be thought a mere kitten beside a man of 58. My dear child, I never learned to waltz and two-step in my youth, so how on earth do you expect me to tie myself up in contortions doing anything so intricate as the tango?"

When you are 28 it is pleasant to be called a dear child. Ethel Allwood used her eyes again.

"It's better not to know the waltz when you learn to tango," she told him earnestly. "Truly! And you'd be a fine dancer, I know! You're naturally graceful! Please come to my dinner party at the club the next informal and—and I'll teach you myself."

She made the offer as though it was a sudden, flashing inspiration.

"I haven't the nerve," confessed Eggert. "I'd be scared."

"No, you wouldn't," Ethel told him. "You'll see all sorts of people learn it in the corridors and on the terraces where they won't attract attention! Nobody will pay the slightest attention to you. I'd love to do it. Really I can't see how you've gone out as much as you do and escaped learning it before."

"Nobody has cared whether I knew it or not," said Eggert, with becoming mournfulness. "And nobody cares—"

"Nonsense," said Ethel Allwood. "You can't put that over! I'll wager that your wastebasket is full of dance invitations."

"Maybe," said Eggert, "but they haven't taken the trouble to say they really wanted me. I thought I was just asked to fill in. I've refused and refused, and they said, 'How queer!' and never understood that it was because I felt too old."

"I wish you'd stop talking about being too old," Ethel Allwood said pensively. "It's so foolish! And you've got to let me teach you!"

"I'd get stage fright," said Eggert.

"You owe it to yourself," went on Miss Allwood, severely. "The way to keep young is to act young! The idea of you sitting around and letting old bank presidents tango around you like small boys"

"I'd do almost anything for you," admitted Eggert, with a sigh.

"Next Thursday—at 7 o'clock—at the club," said Miss Allwood, severely. "And see that you wear dancing pumps!"

"Come right along," Ethel Allwood told him after dinner on Thursday night. "There's nobody here at this end of the corridor. Look—you step this way—and then like this and—"

Grasping her firmly, Eggert swung her, gasping, out on the floor in the midst of the wildly dancing throng and led her skillfully through the mazes of the dance.

"My goodness!" Ethel Allwood gasped when finally he let her stop after 10 minutes of as mad circling and grapevining as had ever come her way. "You know how to do it! How did you learn? Who taught you? Why did you deceive me so?"

Eggert led her through the open double doors out upon the cool terrace. "I just wanted to find out," he confessed, somewhat hurriedly, "whether you did think I was too old—for falling in love, as well as the tango! I was scared! Ethel, will you marry me?"

"And now," said the eldest Miss Allwood some moments later when she had made it plain to him that he was a very juvenile person, "now just tell me right away—what girl taught you the tango—horrid creature!"

This Home-made Cough Syrup Will Surprise You

Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly. A Family Supply at Small Cost.

Here is a home-made remedy that takes hold of a cough instantly, and will usually cure the most stubborn case in 24 hours. This recipe makes 16 ounces—enough for a whole family. You couldn't buy as much or as good ready-made cough syrup for $2.50.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. This keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste—children like it. Braces up the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

You probably know the medical value of pine in treating asthma, bronchitis and other throat troubles, sore lungs, etc. There is nothing better. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this inexpensive remedy have made friends for it in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

THE MAGNIFICENT HIMALAYS.

Where the Peasant Eats His Bread at Peril of His Life.

The Himalayas lie in their recesses of snow and forest some of the fiercest of earth's creatures. Their naked peaks glitter a hundred miles away, and their unfathomable ravines and forests even the Indian sun leaves damp and cold. The trees are sublime in their profusion and in their beardings of mosses and creeper drapery, and they throw out wildly contorted arms across immense gulfs in which the eagles skim. Amid it all the narrow paths so twining, now caving deeply into a hillside, then coming out suddenly upon a corner that dominates a depth of immense profundity in which the very air seems to assume a tint of blue. At these corners cold winds come rushing by, edging along the cliffs, and salute one with the tang of the far-off snow. Elsewhere, where the track winds into the re-entrant of a ravine, the air is still, the sun is hot, and from the depths below creeps up, as through the mouth of some alchemist's funnel, the subtle odor of the pines. You may see a hut far down, with its row of terraces of cultivated land cut out of the steep above it, and a cow or buffalo grazing there, while a semi-naked urchin lolls beside it.

The forest is full of citizens, furtive, busy, and watchful. You know not what strange, wild creature slinks from your path as it hears your footfall, nor if there be not a panther watching you with stealthy eyes from the shadow of an overhanging rock.

The magnificent hill pheasants glide like shadows into the undergrowth as you draw near. To a stranger this is all romance, but to the poor peasant it is sadly workaday. It is not only by the sweat of his brow that he must eat bread, but at the peril of his life. No place is so devastated by wild animals. They take their toll of his flocks and herds—aye, and of his family.

Man-eating tigers infest this region, Leopards are extremely bold, and seem to have no fear of man, though they seldom attack him. One, however, was destroyed this year, the famous Almora leopard, which within five years had taken 300 human lives.

New Port Found.

The romantic discovery of a new port, to be called Port Harcourt—after the British Colonial Secretary—is reported from Nigeria, British West Africa. The new port is to be made the terminus of the new trunk railway into the interior, the construction of which will form one of the most important features of Sir Frederick Lugard's administration of Federated Nigeria. Lieut. Hughes, the commander of the Government yacht Ivy, recently found a hitherto uncharted creek which showed the surprising depth of fifty feet of water alongside a precipitous cliff 45 feet high. He returned with the Director of Railways and the Director of Marine, and by means of a rope they ascended the cliffs and cut through almost impenetrable growth twelve feet in height. Lieut. Hughes then climbed a tree to view the country. A few people were seen, and it was discovered that no white man had been there before.

WOMAN BUILDS HOUSES

TILBURY HAS REMARKABLE CITIZEN IN MRS. PHANEUF.

After Making a Start as a School Teacher She Turned to the Trade of a Carpenter and Began to Erect Dwellings—Now She Has a Theatre of Her Own—Does Everything Herself.

In the extreme south-western corner of the Province of Ontario, in the County of Kent, there is situated the little town of Tilbury, distinguished chiefly at the present moment for its smallness of size and the magnitude of its aspirations, aspirations which no doubt have quite as good a chance of being realized as have the similar aspirations of a thousand similar little towns dotted over the great Dominion, says Mrs. Donald Shaw in Toronto Saturday Night.

But if there is one citizen who will force Tilbury forward towards the realizations of its aspirations, the ultimate of which is to be classed as a "city" in the near future, that person will be Tilbury's most interesting resident, Mrs. P. L. Phaneuf, a woman who is the possessor of no remarkable and uncommon personality that it seems odd it should be left to an English journalist and a stranger to the town to chronicle her achievements.

Mrs. Phaneuf is a woman of whom the world should and probably will hear more—whether this be or not, at any rate the world at large cannot fail to be the better and the wiser for knowing of her existence and the work that she is carrying out.

Thrown on her own resources at an early age with no asset beyond that of an excellent education, Mrs. Phaneuf first of all devoted her time to school-teaching, yet so intense was her love for the hammer, the chisel, and the saw, that she gave up all her spare time to doing repairs for the farmer with whom she boarded and his neighbors.

Later, marriage brought to her the responsibilities of wife and mother, but in a few brief years she found herself again dependent upon her own exertions to support not only herself but three little children.

With the launching of her family came the widening of the scope of her ability. Relieved of the necessity of earning a daily wage, she was able to turn her attention to the acquisition of property and the development of the town in which she had made her home.

To Tilburyites, the squarely-built, simply-clad, energetic figure with its intelligent face, its firm humorous mouth, and its kindly eyes, is so common and every day a sight that no one amongst them looks upon their chief citizen as being at all out of the common order. Nevertheless, it remains a fact that Mrs. Phaneuf is not only a very remarkable woman, but also one who is doing perhaps more to build up her own little corner of the world on scientific and enterprising lines than any man amongst them all—and withal she keeps her own unassuming self reliance, neither advertising herself nor apparently realizing that she is doing a work which few men and not one in a thousand women could accomplish, quietly, unostentatiously and thoroughly.

It was Mrs. Phaneuf who decided that Tilbury, the "rising town of the Southwest," should have its picture theatre, and as no one else saw that it was wanted, why, she just built it herself. The last time I interviewed her she was nailing square tin plates (I do not know the professional term for them) on the outside of a long wooden building in which there is a nightly show of up-to-date cinematograph pictures. I sat on a ladder laid lengthwise, while Mrs. Phaneuf hammered murderous nails into her edifice and at the same time discoursed to me with placid cheerfulness and directed the operations of three or four carpenters engaged in a similar task to her own. I noticed that it was she who knew where to put the ladders and how to put the tin plates on and that they obeyed meekly and without question.

A day or two later the energetic lady was working on the roof itself and tradition has it that it is no uncommon thing for her to don workman's overalls when occasion demands and to carry a bricklayer's hod. After this, can anyone say that women are incapable of carrying out men's work if their taste and inclination lie that way?

Mrs. Phaneuf's picture theatre is built on thoroughly modern lines with a sloping floor, plenty of exits, and efficient ventilation and lighting. Before its advent it was a tradition in Tilbury that the electric light could only be obtained between the hours of 6 p.m. and midnight. But it needs a woman to overcome such fallacies. I was amused just before I left the town, when in an "ice cream parlor," to observe that all the electric lamps were on, and to hear a customer enquire the reason.

"Oh, there's a matinee at the Star," was the answer by the waitress.

So, there is a matinee at the Star every Saturday, and there are up-to-date, educational and topical pictures shown there and the prices are reasonable. Also there is a big illuminated electric Star outside the building to indicate its whereabouts and there is a gramophone with its horn projecting into the street which plays popular tunes during the daytime and no doubt brings in many extra nickels and dimes to the energetic lady who conceived the idea of establishing the novel method of advertising.

But wherever she may be, whether in her own house, in a business office, on the roof of a building which she is constructing (her own house, by the way, was built, plastered and painted with her own hands), whether working, or directing, supervising or merely talking over mundane affairs, Mrs. Phaneuf carries with her the same atmosphere of calm self pose and reliance, of self control and an assurance which is neither aggressive nor unfeminine, but simply the result of proved mental and physical capacity to carry out the work to which she has devoted her time and energy.

THE MODERN CARPET OF BAGDAD

THERE are few people who do not know the story of the wonderful carpet on which the owner had but to sit, wish to be at some place and, lo! immediately he found himself there.

Some agents of this nature would be appreciated by many a manufacturer in jumping the demand for his product into a thousand places, a thousand miles away from his factory. Apparently to such a man there is no means of "getting there" and placing his name and his goods right into that territory, except by slow, laborious bit-by-bit acquaintanceship—and mouth-to-mouth testimonials.

But he has overlooked the modern Carpet of Bagdad.

It is Newspaper Advertising.

Fanciful you say?

Did you ever hear of Edwards' Soups? Well, the genial old cook who forms the trade mark just jumped right from Ireland to a thousand places in Canada in a week—on the Carpet of Newspaper Advertising.

Ever hear of Tillson's Oats? The "braw Scot" who stands for this product stepped over night, as it were, from a small town in Ontario to practically every town and village in Canada.

Wrigley's Gum—Sunshine Furnaces—Comfort Soap—all have taken advantage of this Modern Carpet of Bagdad—Newspaper Advertising.

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency.

A list of capable advertising agents will be sent you on request, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 29, Lumsden Building, Toronto.

TO THE MANUFACTURERS OF CANADA:

If you have a name and a product that you wish placed in demand throughout Canada, take advantage at once of the modern carpet of Bagdad—Newspaper Advertising.

The Necessary Other Fellow.

Hon. H. A. Powell of New Brunswick tells a story of a case tried in a magistrate's court in that province where a firm named Johnson & Co. were the plaintiffs.

After the jury retired to consider their verdict, one of them asked: "Who's this 'Co.' they talk about?"

"Oh, Johnson makes the machines and 'Co.' sells them," explained a fellow-juryman.

Two Islands To Rent.

Islands are to let in the Atlantic. The British Colonial Office are inviting tenders for a license conferring the exclusive right to occupy the Nightingale and Inaccessible Islands and Gough Islands for whaling, sealing, and getting guano. The islands in question are, it may be remembered, a small group, of which Tristan de Cunha is the principal, in the Atlantic, midway between Cape Colony and South America. The licensees have to undertake that whenever they despatch a vessel to or from the islands it shall touch at Tristan da Cunha for mails and goods, and that they will maintain good order on the islands. This should not be difficult, as the population of the chief island, Tristan da Cunha, is only at the most probably 100 souls, while, according to the Colonial Office list, "there is no strong drink on the island and no crime." The people live under the moral rule of their oldest inhabitant. The population consists of descendants of the remnant of the military force which held Tristan da Cunha in the days of Napoleon, certain shipwrecked sailors, and wives who were imported from St. Helena.

WHOOPING COUGH

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly completely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

SHE TOOK THE WHEEL.

Captain's Wife Prevents Wreck By Her Heroic Action.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—A woman's daring in a terrific hurricane off Cape Hatteras saved the big American bark John Ena from destruction and the lives of the crew of thirty-seven men. The heroine is the wife of Captain Charles V. Olsen.

On Oct. 21 the bark, which had been within 100 miles of this port three weeks ago, and had been blown back nearly to Bermuda, ran into a hurricane off the coast of North Carolina.

Startled by a particularly heavy sea, Mrs. Olsen saw the scared sailor at the wheel desert his post. She rushed on deck and crept along until she clutched the wheel, swung the heavy wheel over and brought the ship about. Capt. Olsen worked his way back over the wreckage and found his wife clinging to the wheel.

POWER IS TURNED ON.

Elmira Citizens Out In Force To Welcome Hydro.

ELMIRA, Ont., Oct. 30.—Yesterday was a great day for Elmira. The formal turning on of Hydro-electric power, to which the residents have been looking forward since the Niagara current was installed in Berlin three years ago, took place yesterday afternoon. Despite the unfavorable weather, a large gathering of citizens and representatives of sister municipalities were present.

A feature of the celebration was the Made-in-Elmira Exhibition, showing the products of the village's industries, and an electrical demonstration of household utensils and farm machinery in the skating rink, where 1,000 people assembled.

In the evening Hon. Adam Beck officially turned on the power before a crowd that filled the rink. He predicted still further achievements for Hydro and said the next one would be Hydro radials.

Lawyer Again Arraigned.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. — Burton W. Gibson, the New York lawyer, twice tried for the murder of his client, Rossa Menschik Szabo, and freed months after the second jury had disagreed, was arraigned here yesterday to plead to four indictments charging him with rifling her estate.

Arthur Stepley Dead.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Arthur John Stepley, who for many years was a prominent figure in British Columbia, died at Stourport last night.

Razing a Skyscraper.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The first building ever erected around a skeleton of steel, the forerunner of the skyscrapers, which are in almost every American city, is to be torn down. The structure is known as the Tower Building, but this has become a misnomer. When it was erected in 1889 at No. 50 Broadway it was the marvel of the city, being eleven storeys in height.

Mrs. Nelson Shaw Freed.

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 30.—At the assizes yesterday Mrs. Nelson Shaw, of Point Ann, who was committed for trial on July 11 last on a charge of attempting to poison her husband by placing oil of cedar in his dinner pail, was liberated, the grand jury finding no bill.

GETS SEVEN YEARS.

Counterfeiter Escapes Because He Has Tuberculosis.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—"Dr." Muret, the fake dentist, found guilty of counterfeiting, was yesterday sentenced to serve a term of seven and a half years in the federal prison at Atlanta by Federal Judge Hunt. Muret was arrested soon after Father Hans Schmidt confessed to the murder of Anna Aumueller.

Muret told Judge Hunt that if he would suspend sentence on him he would leave the country at once, as he wished to return to his mother in Germany. The Tombs' physician testified that Muret was suffering from tuberculosis and the sentence was made comparatively light.

Muret might have been given 30 years.

Miners Celebrate First Strike.

HAZELTON, Pa., Oct. 30.—Hardly a wheel turned yesterday in the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania. The miners celebrated Mitchell Day, in honor of the anniversary of the successful termination of the strike of 1900, the first conducted in the hard coal belt, under the leadership of John Mitchell, the president of the Mine Workers of America. The struggle won for the men a ten per cent. wage increase and other concessions.

Up Goes Living.

The cost of living index number took another jump upwards last month from 135.9, the figures for July, to 136.2. In August, 1912, the figures were 133.3, so that there was nearly a three-point increase in August of this year compared with the same month a year ago. "And," say the officials at the Labor Department who compile the average cost of prices every month, "the prospects for any pronounced drop in the average cost of the commodities classified under the list of necessities of life, are not very bright."

GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL, GLOSSY HAIR! NO MORE DANDRUFF—25 CENT DANDERINE

Hair Coming Out? If Dry, Thin, Faded, Bring Back Its Colour and Lustre

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

Not a Complete Surprise.

When William R. Hearst bought the old New York Journal one of his managing editors, Julius Chambers, invited Hearst to dinner with him.

They went to a downtown French restaurant. Chambers had ordered the dinner, which was a good one, and Hearst and he had a pleasant time. Along toward the close of the meal Chambers said: "Now, Mr. Hearst, I am going to give you a treat. I have ordered something you probably never have eaten or seen."

Chambers nodded to the waiter, who brought in some French artichokes.

"You see," explained Chambers, "these are a great delicacy. You pull off the leaves and dip the ends in the sauce and eat the ends only."

Hearst smiled a little and followed directions. As they progressed Chambers said complacently: "Pretty good, eh? I don't suppose you ever saw an artichoke before."

"Well," Hearst replied, "I can't go so far as that. You see, Chambers, we had 400 acres of them growing the last time I was out at our California ranch."—Saturday Evening Post.

Fans in the Eighteenth Century.

A letter in the London Spectator dated May, 1711, gives a most interesting description of an academy where ladies could be drilled in the proper use of their fans and initiated into the mysteries of "the angry flutter, the modest flutter, the timorous flutter, the confused flutter, the merry flutter and the amorous flutter." In the eighteenth century at dancing assemblies in London, Bath and other places of fashionable resort gentlemen chose their partners by "lottery of the fan." The fans of all the ladies present were placed in a hat, whence each gentleman had the privilege of selecting one, the lady to whom it belonged becoming his allotted partner for the evening. Of course such a custom entailed a great study of fans on the part of the gentlemen. Boswell, Steele and Pope found something to say about the fan, and Gay, enlarging upon the efforts of his predecessors, wrote a long poem in praise of the fan, attributing its invention to Venus.

How Brazilians Bag Wild Fowl.

From "The Log of a Rolling Stone," by Henry Arthur Broome, comes the following curious mode of bagging wild fowl in Brazil by way of economizing ammunition:

"The expedient is to get hold of a very large pumpkin and, after scooping out the meat and seeds inside, to cut two little eyeholes in it and then place it on the hunter's head. He then wades through the sedge and flags into deeper water up to his neck, where the wild fowl are feeding, who gather that it is merely a pumpkin innocently floating on the surface. The hunter then soon gets into the midst of his quarry and, seizing them by the legs pulls them quietly under water, where he tucks them under a belt fastened round his waist, and as their companions presume that one unfortunate bird after another is only diving for food the hunter gets a waistful in no time and returns well satisfied to the shore."

Would Woman Be Less Quarrelsome?

"If men indulged in the unsportsmanlike tactics employed by women in the social and organization game they would not only lose all chance at the coveted office, but they would probably be well beaten up for their actions. The woman is cruel, discourteous and unfair to her sisters because she knows another woman will not strike her. It would be so unfeminine!

"Have you ever listened while the women and girls of a household repented the tale of their experiences at the Ladies' Aid society, the Whist club, the Altar guild, the Lunch club? Do you hear how many aprons were made for the next sale, what finesse was displayed in playing a certain hand at bridge, how the guild has decided to redecorate the chancel or the latest discoveries in domestic science made by the young cooks? says the Pictorial Review.

"Not at all. The burning question in almost every case is the inefficiency of some officers or the unwarranted power wielded by others. Consider how many good movements have been launched in your town, only to die an untimely death because the organizers fell to quarreling among themselves."

Lace Underskirts.

There are ever so many dresses for young girls with straight or slightly draped tunics opening over underskirts composed of three or four ruffles of soft lace. These ruffles are sometimes made of fine net edged with a thread in some bright color which is repeated in the sash, or used as a narrow velvet piping for the neck and sleeves. This edging of a couple of strands of colored silk or thread forms a very pretty finish for net ruffling.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 50 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Gave Him a Hint.

Miss Carter had not been successful in bringing young Dodge to her feet and in consequence felt a little spiteful toward him. One evening they were having quite a serious talk in the library.

"Do you think," asked the young man, "that men progress after death?"

"Well," responded the girl, "if they don't it would almost seem useless for some of them to die."

Made the Most of It.

Louis—Bertie is the meanest man on earth. I bet him a new hat one day last week. I bet the bet and today received a bill for a sum big enough to buy five of the best silk hats in town.

CURIOUS CHARMS

We are apt to talk about the curious old charms that were formerly in vogue among the peasantry, and ignore the fact that in many parts of rural England such charms are still practised as remedies for various diseases and dangers.

At Whitby, for example, the fishermen always carry a "Thor's hammer" when they go out to sea—a small hammer-shaped bone that is looked upon as a safeguard against drowning. Round about Flamborough Head there are few cottage kitchens in which a witch cake does not hang as a general preventive for danger. The cake is circular shaped, with a hole in the middle and spikes all round it. Once a year it is burned, and a new cake substituted in place of it.

In East Anglia it is usual to find house doors frequently decorated with an old iron key—a charm which East Anglians believe robs the evil one of all his powers. The Norfolk country folk, too, still keep up the very old local custom of carrying flints to guard their person against lightning.

FRIEDRICH WILHELM

Crown Prince of Germany. This young man, who will some day be Kaiser in the ordinary course of events, has frequently demonstrated by running counter to the wishes of his royal father, that he has a mind of his own. The average citizen of Berlin, however, knows him best as a reckless automobile driver. There is no speed limit placed on the cars of the Imperial family, and the Crown Prince tears through Unter Den Linden, the finest business street in the German capital, as if it were a race course.

ROYAL LINEN

Two Servants Are Kept Busy Looking After the Linen Room

Two of the servants at Buckingham Palace are known as "linenmaids," and they have nothing to do but look after the linen room where all the Royal household linen is kept.

The linen room at the Palace is a big apartment. Round its walls are linen cupboards or presses which contain hundreds of tablecloths, teacloths, serviettes, sheets, and all the other usual linen of a well-stocked household.

The two linen maids see that a clean tablecloth and clean serviettes are served out for every meal at the Royal table. And for every article of clean linen they give out they mast make an entry, in a special book kept for the purpose, as well as entering up everything they receive back dirty.

The used linen is put in a small room, next the clean linen-room, and stored in long, deep baskets. This linen is sent to the laundry every morning. The laundry bill for the Royal household comes to the huge total of $30,000 a year, nearly $600 a week!

This linen has to be carefully washed, for some of it is extremely valuable. Many of the tablecloths, for instance, have been in use for over a hundred years, and are made from linen which it is impossible to obtain nowadays. Each tablecloth has the Royal arms woven in its centre and at each corner.

THE STAGE COACH

Old Scotch Coaches Travelled Very Slowly

The passing of the last stage coach in Scotland seemed like the end of a very ancient institution, but it is by no means so ancient as one is apt to think it. At the close of the eighteenth century stage coaches were still rare beyond Edinburgh. Not until 1806 were they tried between Perth and regular mail coaches between Inverness and Aberdeen were not established before 1811. The times of the old coaches were those of a leisurely age. Forsyth, an Elgin merchant who traveled by the Fly coach in 1791, records that while out of York he had done done 150 miles in twenty-four hours, north of Edinburgh he did only eighty-four miles in nineteen hours. In Forfar the four horses covered thirteen miles in three and a half hours.

Rheumatism
A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It

In the spring of 1907 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know for over 3 years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but each relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bed-ridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be the long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write to-day.

BEATS ALL RECORDS.

"Barney" Mullin of Ottawa Holds the Belt for Tabloid Journalism.

No resident of Ottawa will ever have obliterated from his or her memory the scenes of the great fire which swept the west end of the Capital and the transpontine city of Hull on April 26th, 1900. Fifteen million dollars' worth of property was destroyed and seven lives lost in the awful conflagration. The wife of a laboring man on Inkerman street, Hull, was getting dinner shortly after eleven o'clock and some wood piled too near the stove ignited. The surrounding houses being of frame and a strong wind blowing at the time, soon caused the blaze to spread. Bernard Mullin, official court reporter for Carleton and Hull, was then a member of the staff of The Ottawa Free Press. In his visits to Hull he gathered what news he could pick up and was paid at space rates for his contributions. There had been little doing in the neighboring city for a few days, and Mr. Mullin decided on the morning in question that it was not worth while for him to make a trip across the Ottawa river. When the fire broke out he 'phoned over to the police station for particulars, and was told that the blaze was a small one and would soon be extinguished by the brigade. So every one else thought at the time, "Barney," as he is familiarly known to scores of Ottawa and Toronto newspaper men from his long connection with the press, scrawled out a five-line item in reference to the fire, and left about twelve o'clock for his home in the extreme west end of the city. He did not come on duty again until the next morning. Meanwhile the fire had increased in fury and sweep until every man on the staff was placed on the assignment in order to get as many details as possible for the early afternoon edition.

The late John A. Garvin, former president of the Ottawa Press Gallery, was then city editor of The Free Press, and, when "Barney" walked in next morning, he called him over to the desk. Said he: "Mullin! I wish to congratulate you on the splendid and complete manner in which you covered the great fire. You know the creation of the world was told in six hundred words, but your marvellously condensed report beats that all hollow. Yesterday the loss was fifteen million dollars and seven lives were snuffed out, and yet you dismissed the whole thing in a five-line paragraph before going home. I think that your work will stand as a record for all time."—Toronto Saturday Night.

An Anecdote That Traveled.

Here is a story which belongs to Toronto, but which, strangely enough, only got into circulation after an ocean voyage. An anecdote appeared several months ago in The Musical Times, a British publication, which concerned an organist who had his program printed every Sunday and distributed through the church. One Saturday, a prominent member of the congregation died, and the organist thought it necessary to make an alteration in his music. He telephoned the printer and instructed him to put, after the sermon, "Funeral March by Chopin."

Next day the slips were distributed and the members of the congregation found to their amusement the announcement that after the sermon they would have "A Few Remarks by Chopin."

One of the Toronto papers happened to copy this little story. A few days afterwards the editor learned that the incident was a true one. He received several letters with the information that the program had been prepared for the congregation of St. James Square Church on the occasion of a special service. — Saturday Night.

Warned Against Old Swindle.

The Postoffice Department at Ottawa has issued the following warning to Canadians:

"Letters from the 'Spanish prisoner' are actively circulating in Canada. These letters are mailed at Madrid, Spain. This fraud is manysided, as in the latest case it is a Russian banker who is in prison. At other times it is either a French or Spanish character, but the essential part of the fraud is the same, viz., that the prisoner has an immense sum of money deposited in hiding, and generally an interesting daughter, and on certain conditions he is willing to share his treasures with and entrust his daughter to the person in whom he is confiding. Of course, as a preliminary and evidence of good faith a certain sum of money must be put up by the correspondent, and one gentleman in Prince Edward Island was induced to part with $700 in this way. The case is a pure fraud and the public are warned against it."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1913

ACQUITTED ON THE CHARGE OF MURDER

After an All-night Session Jury Declares That Mrs. Eaton Did Not Murder Her Husband, Admiral Eaton.

VERDICT EXPECTED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Oct. 30.—After seven months' imprisonment on a charge of having murdered her husband, Rear Admiral Jos. C. Eaton, by poison, Mrs. Jennie May Eaton stepped from the court house here to-day a free woman. It was before day-break when the jury filed in about five o'clock after deliberating in their room since eight o'clock last night. During th night there were sounds of a hot argument from the jury room. When they came in and announced an acquittal Mrs. Eaton gripped the arms of her lawyers and sank into a chair. She was hastily motored to her home in Assinippi where her crippled daughter and aged mother awaited overnight to hear the news. Mrs. Eaton, who was thought wealthy when her husband died, is practically penniless. Public opinion, which condemned her at first, has swung her way and is now quite sympathetic toward her. The verdict was as expected in the light of later evidence.

Bank Clerk Is Still The Muzzled Ox

Says Writer in London Truth —Honesty is Being Enthroned in Wall Street

STOCK MARKET TOPICS

Toronto brokers used to talk about bear features. Now a market factor must be regarded either as an ultra bear or an ultra bull feature. The accent is on the ultra.

The Wall St. Journal says: Bankers writing to connect regional reserve banks with the infernal regions need not expect to have their views published here.

A sporting note informs us that lovers of tobogganing are to be deprived of one of the chief sources of that thrilling winter amusement so popular in certain circles.

This will be regretted by a large number of enthusiasts, according to a Montreal writer, but it is understood that the Lamb's Club had decided to retire from tobogganing for the coming season in any case.

Last season the sport was carried to such an excess that the feeling was unanimously voiced that an interregnum of at least one season would be to the advantage of all concerned.

And so day by day, little by little, haltingly it may be, but surely financial evils are being uprooted, broad-based honesty is being enthroned and the gap between the insiders and the outsiders bridged.

So writes a New York man. What will happen to the brokerage business when it comes true and Wall Street loses all its glamour and charm? It won't be any more interesting than an imitation chop suey restaurant.

Young J. P. Morgan, when asked by two of his over-ambitious junior partners to O.K. a new venture th y wanted to float, is reported to have laid down this ultimatum: "No! This firm is to do a banking business — a conservative banking business."

London Truth returns to the subject of bank clerk's pay in a recent article.

The writer says: "The bank clerk is still the muzzled ox that treadeth out the corn. He is muzzled because he thinks it derogatory to his dignity to organize for the improvement of his position. Doctors may adopt—as they did a little while ago—all the methods of trade unionism, striking and picketing included, in a fierce fight over fees.

"Lawyers, school teachers, journalists—these and many other classes may band themselves together in societies and unions. The bank clerk may have his grievances, but he will not take the only effective steps to remedy them."

LOCAL MAN TO WED IN BUFFALO

Special to The Examiner:

BUFFALO, N.Y., Oct. 29.—Miss Kate Genevieve Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Jones of No. 220, Oxford Avenue, will be married early in November, in Buffalo, at the home of her parents, to James G. Cary of Peterborough, Ontario, Canada. Mr. and Mrs. Cary intend to make their future home in Peterborough.

PAVEMENT MUST BE KEPT CLEAN

Sweeper Will Be Put at Work and Litter Must Be Removed

TROUBLE FOR OFFENDERS

The asphalt pavement will have to be treated with the respect and consideration that any new toy deserves and, furthermore, its completion must be a last reminder to certain persons that Peterborough is really a City, although the small-town idea seems to stick like a thirsty leach.

The Board of Works, therefore is considering the following suggestions:

The sweeper must shine in use, not rust in desuetude.

In other words, the pavements must be kept immaculately clean.

Stone or other heavy objects that drop from wagons must not be allowed to remain. The contractors state that the pavement will not be injured by passing heavy loads.

Refuse and waste paper are not to be thrown on the street. This has been done in the past in the face of a by-law that should have been enforced.

Mayor Bradburn—"One store on the main street has established the custom of throwing greasy water on the street, although they have a back door outlet to a lane."

Ald. Buller — "I have seen one merchant throwing plain swill on the street."

Mayor Bradburn—"Well, they've got to stop."

Waste paper will be hunted down in every direction. Mayor Bradburn said he liked Port Hope's idea of having tin boxes for waste paper at different points along the streets.

All told, the streets have to be treated like a new rug.

Evidently Alderman Buller is a sound sleeper. He said he never hears the noise of engines and trains in the G.T.R. yards, although neighbours have told him that their slumbers have been interrupted. Mayor Bradburn introduced the subject by stating that a citizen residing in the vicinity of the G. T. R. complained to him about the noise. Their patience is near the breaking point.

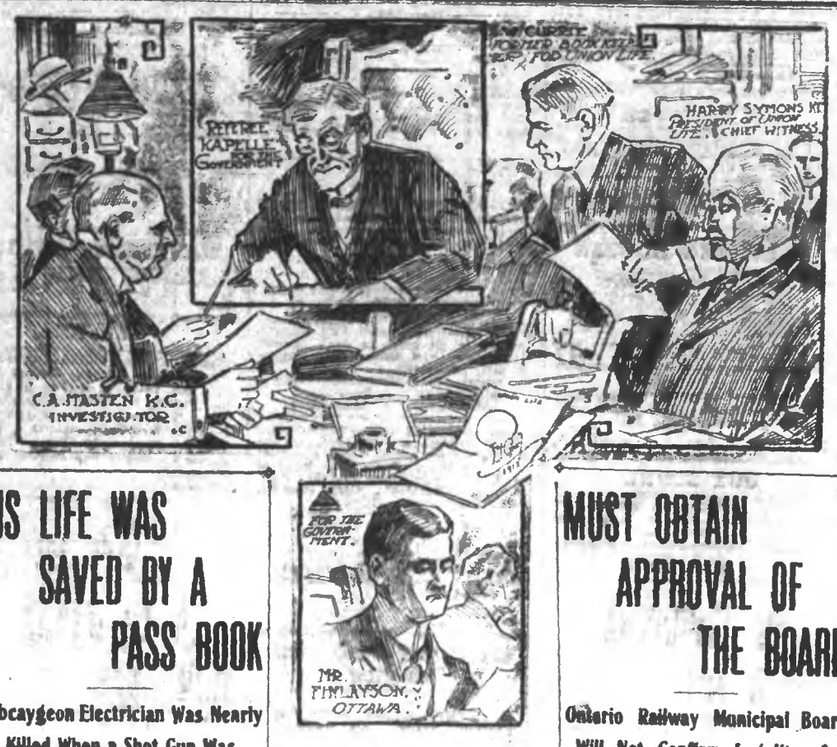
Ald. Buller—"I was speaking with Mr. Dan McMillan and he states that the Company are considering the advisability of moving the engine house away from the centre of the City and this will put an end to the alleged nuisance. However, there is no promise of the immediate execution of the work.

BIG DEMAND FOR SEATS

The famous musical comedy hit of three continents, "The Quaker Girl," plays at the Grand on Saturday next.

Judging from the advance sale which opened this morning there is little doubt but that this famous entertainment will be accorded the popularity it deserves for its coming has been eagerly awaited and its wonderful success in London, Paris and New work is by this time known to all who patronize the theatre.

The music is by this time familiar to everyone and it has been played and sung throughout the country at large, and it is a certainty that a large audience will leave the theatre after the performance humming the irresistible "Come to the Ball" waltz. Mr. Victor Morley will be seen in the leading role, when "The Quaker Girl" is presented here.



Going Into the Much Mixed Affairs of the Union Life—Whose shareholders and policy-holders are all over Canada. It was brought out that the now defunct Union Life paid dividends out of deficits and that stock in the National Agency, one of the affiliated companies of the Union Life was sold in the Old Country and is now practically worthless.

HIS LIFE WAS SAVED BY A PASS BOOK

Bobcaygeon Electrician Was Nearly Killed When a Shot Gun Was Accidentally Discharged

A SERIOUS WOUND

LINDSAY, Oct. 30.—Word comes from Bobcaygeon of a serious shooting accident, whereby R. H. Clarke, electrician at the "Little Bob" power house, was severely injured. It is learned that a young man named Hudson, who hails from Orillia, and who is visiting at Mr. Clarke's noticed a bird close by, and while drawing his shotgun quickly to his shoulder the weapon discharged. The shot entered Clarke's side, tearing a gash four inches deep. Clarke and Hudson succeded in taking out a large number of the shot, while the physician who was called recovered twenty more grains. The wound is quite serious, and but for a pass book, which Clarke carried in his pocket, might have proved fatal.

Woman Lost All Of Her Money

With Which She Had Started Out to Make Provision for Her Ailing Child—Family is Penniless

Any one finding a purse between T. H. Hooper's confectionery store and Perry street, containing a little over ten dollars in bills, will have an unusual opportunity to bring cheer to an unhappy Perry street family.

The circumstances connected with the loss of the money are peculiarly distressing. The mother of the Perry street family, after a gruelling effort, had managed to save enough money to pay part of the doctor's bill, due for professional attendance on one of the family. She left home last night with the intention of settling all or part of it, and buying some inexpensive dainty for the sick child.

However, when she reached Hooper's confectionery store she discovered thats he had dropped the purse containing the money. A search of the route by which she came was of no avail, and this morning she told her story to the police and newspapers, with tears in her eyes.

The money was in a purse, which is inside a black leather bag with nickle trimmings. Besides the money was a receipt from Turnbull's and a lodge book of the Canadian Order of Foresters. When seen this morning the woman was afraid to return home on account of the loss of the money, she having left the house at 8 o'clock to avoid disclosing the fact to her husband.

If the finder will leave the money at the Examiner Office or Police Station, needless to say they will be doing much toward alleviating the sufferings of this family.

Will Receive Consideration

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 30.—One likely result of the inter-provincial conference which closed yesterday is that Prince Edward Island is likely to receive some form of special treatment from the Government. It is realised that the Island surrendered more than the other provinces at the time of Confederation, and now runs the risk of having its representation in the Commons practically wiped out.

HEAVY WAGGONS DAMAGING ROADS BY MUCH TRAFFIC

Homewood Ave and Water Street North Example of Destructiveness of Narrow Rimmed Wheels

WILL HAVE TO BE REPAIRED

The destruction of streets is an unending trouble with the City. When labourers are not sinking picks and shovels into newly doctored highways some other influences are at work. The continued passage of waggon wheels is the latest destructive force that has cut deeply into parts of Water and Homewood Avenue which were believed to be in the best of condition.

When the City opened the gravel pit at the north end of the City, teams soon began hauling the material to all parts of the City. Thus, up and down Water Street went the heavy loads, one waggon following in the wheel marks of the of the previous one until the street was gouged beyond recognition. On Homewood Avenue a similar experience has been met. The earth from the excavation for the big Turnbull store is being drawn to a vacant lot on Homewood Avenue and the waggons have played the game of "follow-your-leader" so successfully that Mayor Bradburn gets a pain every time he looks at their deadly work.

Ald. Buller—If the government had stopped the manufacture of narrow rim tires three years ago when they considered it, there would be nothing but the wide tires passing over the streets and we would have none of this trouble. The tires of a buggy and a waggon are not of proportionate width when you consider their average respective loads.

Mayor Bradburn—It just means that we will have to go to work and repair these roads again next spring.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The senior gymnasium class had a bumper crowd out last night, 33 men enjoyed the class work and basketball.

The following men were appointed captains for basketball teams by the members of the class, and are requested to meet Friday evening at 7.0, to choose teams: W. Kew, A. Theobald, A. Shilleter, W. Flowers, P. Foster, A. Flowers, H. Mulhern, C. Stuart.

Yesterday was physical examination for the boys of the junior class, when Dr. T. P. McCullough examined the entire class.

Thursday and Friday, December 4th and 5th, has been selected as the dates for the great hayseed carnival.

Tuesday, November 18th is the date of the senior banquet, which will be held on the gymnasium floor. Every effort will be put forth to make this occasion a brilliant success. Prominent speakers have been secured and an orchestra will furnish music.

MUST OBTAIN APPROVAL OF THE BOARD

Ontario Railway Municipal Board Will Not Confirm Legality of Waterworks By-law

EXTENSIONS COMMENCED

Letters have been received by the Water Commissioners bearing the letter-head of the Ontario Railway Municipal Board, and referring to the confirmation of a by-law that was adopted on August 29th. The by-law is designed to authorize a debenture issue of $20,000 for Waterworks extensions, which include the construction of new water mains. The Ontario Railway Municipal Board state that the City erred in not obtaining the approval of the Provincial Board of Health before passing the by-law. The matter has been referred to the City Solicitor.

Work has already commenced on the new extensions in the form of a large feed main leading from the Waterworks pump house to Smith Street. It is probable that the plans for the extensions will have first to receive the approval of the Provincial Board of Health, before the Municipal Board will confirm the by-law.

A WAY TO SAVE GARBAGE TINS

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I am a practical man and have a practical suggestion to make. I am also a man of taste and smell, and my taste and smell are offended garbage mornings by the grotesque disfigurement of the boulevards by all sorts of ramshackle, dinged and battered receptacles set out in ghastly array to contain garbage, which they often don't contain, but allow to slop over on the grass. This offends my taste, and the smell of the often uncovered, rotting kitchen filth that taints the air, offends my smell.

I know these things are difficult to avoid and to cure the nuisance the cause must be removed. The real cause seems to b the carelessness of the garbage collectors. Vessels containing garbage are so roughly handled in emptying that they don't last long, and ratepayers naturally get tired of buying new ones, so they utilize all the cast-off tinware, biscuit tins, hat boxes and soap boxes available.

My suggestion is that the garbage collectors might instal a derrick on their waggons so that proper and decent garbage vessels may be gently hoisted and emptied into the waggons without being banged into ruin upon the edges of the waggon box.

Something should be done to bring the collectors to a sense of their duty of emptying vessels containing garbage without destroying them. We recognize the benefit of garbage collection, but we don't want to abate one nuisance by creating another, as is done by littering our boulevards with scrap tin, ricketty boxes, and broken victuals. Under the circumstances we must add another woe to Inspector Spence's burden by asking him to look after our buckets and boxes, and by getting the Property Committee to look after our property, and not to allow our garbage tins to be banged about in a way that would be the envy of a professional railway baggage smasher.

Yours truly,

Citizen.

Peterborough, Oct. 30th.

SHOULD BE TAKEN OUT OF POLITICAL FIELD

Independent Observers Claim That Both Parties Are Beating About the Bush in Regard to Home Rule Question.

NEWSPAPERS COMMENT

Special Cable to The Examiner.

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 30.—(Special Cable)—That the present Parliament has a plain mandate from the people backed up by a three figure majority and should settle the Irish Home Rule question for all time. This is the principal argument the morning of the government supporting newspapers against Leader Bonar Law's suggestion that there should be a general election before the Home Rule Bill is presented to Parliament again.

There is also considerable comment among the independent observers of this question on the fact that both Asquith and Bonar Law have been beating around the bush, on the question of settlement. The question is asked if it is not high time to take up the matter from a standpoint of national integrity rather than party politics. There are some members of both parties ready and anxious to join some kind of compromise party that has this for its object and fight for the settlement on a sound national basis.

Tom Richardson, M.P. (Labour) — For Whitehaven in the British House of Commons. He is now in Canada and will talk to mass meetings of labour men at various points.

FARMERS DAMAGE AUTOMOBILES NOW

Tore Fender From Mr. G. A. Gillespie's Car While He Was Lighting Lamps

OTHER CASES REPORTED

Driving in close to his automobile while he had stopped to put a match to his lights, a farmer tore the back fender from Mr. G. A. Gillespie's car on Alymer street south last evening. The farmer was walking his horses going south and appeared to be out some distance from the car. But he deliberately drove toward it until the horse's nose brushed the hood. The hub of the rear axle caught the auto's back fender and with a twist it was wrenched off. The farmer broke his team into a run and drove away. Mr. Gillespie was particularly grieved for the reason that he has always recognized the rights of farmers on the roads, and has been extremely careful to respect them.

This is not the only case of this kind, for a young lady driving her car a few days ago, is reported to have been treated in a similar manner.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

Examiner Special:

UNION STOCK YARDS, Oct. 29. — Receipts were large, 167 cars; 4,677 cattle, 4,065 hogs, 1,973 sheep and lambs, 560 calves.

Cattle.—There were many buyers of cattle, besides the local dealers, Geo. Campbell, of the Nelson Morris Co., Chicago, besides many more Americans, were actively engaged buying different classes of cattle. There were buyers for all classes and an exceedingly active market being the result.

Choice butcher's steers, $7.25 to $7.50. Good butcher's steers, $6.75 to $7.25. Medium butcher's steers, $6.25 to $6.75. Common butcher's steers, $5.50 to $6.00. Choice butcher's heifers, $7.00 to $7.25. Common butcher's heifers, $6.25 to $6.75. Choice cows, $5.75 to $6.50. Good cows, $5.25 to $5.50. Canners, $3.00 to $3.50. Medium cows, $4.50 to $5.00. Cutters, $4 to $4.50.

Feeders and Stockers.— There were many stockers and feeders on sale, but there were plenty of buyers, both American and Canadian, and all offerings no matter what quality or class, were readily bought up at firm prices.

Choice steers, $6.30 to $6.70. Medium steers, $6.00 to $6.40. Stockers, 500 to 800 lbs., $5.25 to $6.75.

Milkers and Springers.—The demand for choice milkers and forward springers was very strong at $65 to $100 each. Bulk sold at $70 to $80 each.

Calves — Light receipts caused a strong market.

Choice veals, $9 to $10.50; good, $8 to $9; medium, $7 to $7.50; common, $4.50 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.— Moderate receipts caused an active market at steady prices.

Sheep, $4.75 to $5.20. Culls and rams, $2.50 to $4.00. Lambs, choice ewes and wethers, $7.30 to $7.60.

Hogs.—Receipts of hogs being light, the market was very firm at the following prices:—

Selected, fed and watered, $8.25 to $8.20; f.o.b. cars, and $8.50 weighed off cars.

DUNLOP STREET IN MR. GATES' HANDS

Says Sidewalk is Not Wanted. Others Demand It

Somewhere in the stretch of country between Auburn and the city proper there is a street designated Dunlop.

Alderman Anderson put it on the map or rather drew attention to its existence by asking that a plank sidewalk be laid along it.

At the Board of Works meeting Wednesday night he asked Alderman Buller if anything had been done for the residents.

"Residents," said Alderman Buller, "as far as I can learn there is only one resident and he says the street is on private praperty. His name is Jimmy Gates; he has a shoe shine shop like that. 'He has a shoe shine shop on Charlotte street. He said that Alderman Anderson had been trying to get a walk for the street but there would be trouble if it is laid. He said he'd vote for Alderman Anderson just the same, but he wanted to hear no more sidewalk talk.

Alderman Johnston—I think you are trying to put one over on the East Ward representative.

Alderman Anderson—That's a different story from what he told me. And there are other parties, Mr. Mundon and others who have asked for it.

Alderman Buller—But Gates says the street is on his property.

There was a further discussion and it was decided that Alderman Buller and Alderman Anderson would see the Dunlop street citizen with a view to reaching an agreement.

OUR HUMILIATION.

Little Canadians will now be happy over having another plea for humiliating Canada, besides the plea that Canada cannot build battleships—won't be able to build them, according to Mr. Borden, within a quarter or half a century. New Zealand has declared for a navy of her own, like Australia, and such as the Laurier Naval law provided for. Now, New Zealand is only about 100,000 — 104,751 — square miles in area, with a population of a little over a million—with about a three-hundredth of the area of Canada, and one-seventh of her population. Yet, this plucky and manly little country has decided to do her own fighting and not as Little Canadians and the Borden Government want to do—hire the mother country to do our fighting. New Zealand has adopted the Australian naval policy, and the Australian policy is the same as the Laurier naval policy and the policy adopted unanimously in Parliament by Conservatives and Liberals in 1909. It was a manly, self-reliant and, at the same time, truly imperial policy. The Borden naval policy of contribution humiliates Canada in her own eyes and in the eyes of the world.

NOT GUILTY.

Conservative journals, in order to gain favour with the farmers are claiming that the Liberal Senate killed the Highways Bill—to devote a million or so to good goods. The fact is that the bill was not killed by the Senate, but that, as Sir Wilfrid Laurier pithily points out, the Borden government committed infanticide by killing its own baby. The Liberal party in Parliament favoured, as they favour and generally father, all good progressive measures, supported the principle of a generous vote of money for highways; but objected to outraging constitutional principles by taking the expenditure of the money from the control of Parliament and turning it over to the committee of Parliament, called the government, to distribute by order in Council. In introducing the Highways Bill into Parliament the Minister of Railways and Canals said that the money would be distributed to the provinces on the same basis as the provincial subsidies This promise was broken in the bill, which at later stages provided that the distribution of the money should be taken from Parliament and done by the government with the possibility of employing it as a means of gaining political support in the manner of its distribution. The people send members to parliament to carry out their wishes; and a government is only the instrument of carrying out the wishes of the people as expressed by Parliament. When the government seizes the right of Parliament to control public expenditure it is doing a vicious thing. The Liberal Senate did not kill the Highways Bill. It assented to five clauses and suggested an amendment to another, providing for the distribution of the money to the provinces according to population, as in the basis of our representation. The Borden Government peremptorily rejected this proposal and the bill lapsed—in effect the government strangled its own bill. If the government had not, in fear of losing the power of using the money granted for highways to promote party advantage, refused a proper amendment to the bill providing for proper distribution of the money, the bill would have passed, as it will pass next session, if introduced and made conformable to promoting the public, instead of party interests. The Liberal Senate can justly plead not guilty to the indictment of killing the Highways Bill. The Borden Government itself is the guilty party.

AHAB AND NABOTH.

Lloyd George's land scheme or his plan to get the land of Great Britain within reach of the people for whom God made it, may be regarded as chimerical and utopian, but at least one lordly landed proprietor has taken it seriously it is reported that the Duke of Sutherland has, as a reply or offset to the government land plan, offered to sell the government 200,000 acres at $10 an acre. This ducal offer may be merely a "red herring," but it emphasizes the gist of the land situation. By which right does one man hold such immense areas of the peoples' land, that he can coolly and perhaps contemptuously offer for sale from one corner of his vast estates, a little patch of 200,000 acres equal to the average area of a Scottish county, and bigger than the whole County of Peterborough. By what right has he this land in possession? Who gave it to him as a preserve for grouse and red deer and foxes, while people all round are starving or forced to leave their native heath and remove to other lands?—

And God said, Behold I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of the earth, and every tree in which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed: to you it shall be for meat.

But how shall man have the "herb bearing seed" unless he has a place to grow it, and how can he have a place to grow it in Scotland or England, or Ireland, where countless acres are kept locked from the people, or where landlords have the power as they have exercised it, to drive out crofters, level their cottages, turn their gardens and fields into deer parks and create a wilderness inside a circle of starving peasantry? Such conditions must be corrected. Fancy the whole of the County of Peterborough in the hands of one powerful landlord, with all the present happy owners of farms, struggling tenants at high rentals; and fancy the fancy of this landlord to evict every tenant and convert it into a deer park, and you have some idea of the conditions that prevail, and have prevailed in the Old Country, where the landowner can destroy cottages, drive the occupants into exile, and convert the land into a wilderness. This is the condition Lloyd George's land scheme is intended to correct. His plan may be denounced as injustice to the poor landlords, but is it an injustice to the people who, according to God's plan have a right to the fruits of the land? The landlords have only a robber baron's right to the land, while the people have a divine title. The ducal Ahabs who have seized Naboth's vineyards, must be made to do something like the fair thing.

SETTLE BILINGUALISM NOW.

The Whitney Government is confronted by a situation of the utmost difficulty at Ottawa in connection with bilingual schools.

The regulations governing schools are not being observed in Ottawa, and the Government has suspended the payment of its usual grant. The school authorities instruct the pupils to walk out when the inspector walks in.

The situation is serious for the reason that both parties to the dispute may remain obdurate and a permanent deadlock result. The school grant paid by the Province is a relatively small part of the cost of up-keeping a school. If the regulations are disregarded the usual grants will not be paid, but the local taxpayers may volunteer to make good the shortage in order to enjoy the luxury of flouting the regulations and conducting their schools as they choose. No end of vexing complications might result.

We have no wish to criticize the Government in this matter. The regulations ought to be enforced, and it would appear that the Government is involved in difficulties by enforcing them. The Legislature exists for the purpose of discussing and enacting regulations.

In Toronto the average man's opinion is that our estimable French fellow-citizens in Ottawa have been looking to the Whitney Government to wink at a snug little arrangement by which strict regulations would be passed to please Ontario at large, while these regulations would, in effect, be ignored to please the French-speaking electors. It looked for a time as if that would be the course pursued. It would be a bad policy and one that would accumulate trouble against a future day. The present is as good a time as any to press this issue to a solution.—Toronto Star.

THE GOVERNMENT'S BI-FACIAL BI-LINGUAL SCHOOL POLICY

Mr. Rowell Develops Whitney Government's Circular Movements in the Matter of Bi-lingual Schools

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Oct. 29.—"Hon. Mr. Lucas, at Bolton, asked if we were going to support the Government in its policy towards bilingual schools," said Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., M.P. P., in answer to an inquiry, "I ask Mr. Lucas which of the Government policies is it that he means. In the last two years they have made a complete circle several times and one never knows what the Government's policy on this question is going to be from day to day. On the other hand the Liberal policy enunciated in 1911 and emphasized at my Massey Mall meeting in November of that year, remains the same to-day, in 1913, as follows:

"To provide, through adequate training schools, a sufficient supply of competent teachers and thus insure under proper regulations that the pupils in every school in the Province shall receive a thorough English education."

"It is plainly apparent that the Government, by its wobbling and inconsistent course, has put itself into a bad hole, and it is equally plain that they are making frantic efforts to get us to help them out of this hole. Our course, however, is to stand by our own policy, which, we believe to be right, and which we have kept without change in these two years since I have been leader."

Mr. Rowell gave an unqualified denial to Mr. Mr. James' insinuation that he was really behind the Ottawa School Board agitation. "Mr. Lucas' story is childish," said Mr. Rowell. "If he knows the situation as he should, he knows that such is not the case. I have had no communication with the men in Ottawa either direct or indirect.'

In proof of his assertion that the Government had no stable policy on the bilingual question, Mr. Rowell gave a number of quotations. In 1911 Hon. Mr. Foy declared: "There cannot lawfully be any bilingual schools in the Province of Ontario, and if any are found they must cease to exist, and care should be taken to make all schools conform to the law."

Within a day or two Hon. Dr. Reaume, in referring to Mr. Foy's announcement, made the following comment: "That was made on Mr. Foy's own hook and was an expression of his personal opinion on the subject. You know, I find the biggest opposition to bilingual schools is where people have not got them and consequently do not know much about them. However, the Government has taken a stand. Sir James Whitney's attitude is that while English should be made the language of the schools, as far as practicable, and while every child should receive an English education, we are not against the French-Canadians and Germans having their children started in their mother tongue as a means to an end, and having their mother tongue taught in the schools as a subject when so desired by trustees representing the people of the school section." And a day or two later, "The Hon. Prime Minister (Sir James Whitney) said to me: 'Go and tell the elctors of that district (Prescott), that the teaching of the French language will not be abolished in he Province of Ontario!" At the same time the Prime Minister was declaring: "There are no bilingual schools in this Province."

In 1912 the Whitney Government put into force the famous regulation 17, which aroused the opposition of the French-Canadians, and which the Government declared loudly they were going to stand by to the end. In the North Grey bye-elections, for example, Hon. Mr. Lucas was emphatic in his statement that this regulation would not be interfered with. In September, this year, however, the regulation was changed to such an extent that the Orange Sentinel, a number of Orange lodges and several Conservative newspapers have declared that it was a complete backdown on the part of the Government, have censured them for this action and have demanded in no uncertain terms the resignation of Hon. Dr. Pyne. "And now," said Mr. Rowell, "Mr. Lucas asks if we are standing behind the Government's policy. I ask again, what is the Government policy."

Mr. Rowell said that if the Government should ask him for advice he would do as he had done in similar circumstances in 1912, when he was asked in the House what he would do about the question: "I said then that my advice would be to call for the resignation of the Minister of Education as being the man responsible for the present condition in which thes schools are. That advice I repeat to-day."

What Has Caused Industrial Gloom In Old Cobourg?

The World Has An Answer That May Reply to General Conditions Existing in the Country

From the present indications this will be a hard winter for many people in Cobourg, as well as other towns. The Crossen Car shops have practically closed down, although it is not known how long this condition of affairs will continue. The employees state that they have no information as to when the works will resume again, but we hope that they will open up before long. The Matting Factory plant has been moved to the Woollen Mills and we understand that the latter is not carrying on as extensive an industry as formerly in woollen manufactures. All this has a gloomy look for Cobourg during the coming winter.

We do not remember such dull times and depression under the Laurier Government, but we do remember, as will also our citizens, that previous to the general election of 1911, letters from Mr. John Dick and Mr. W. J. Crossen were publicly circulated in which they expressed most strongly that dire results would follow the adoption of reciprocity. Mr. Crossen stating that probably it would be the means of forcing him to move his works to the west.

On the contrary reciprocity would not have affected his business as it would not affect manufacturers. It would have affected only producers of natural products, thereby increasing the wealth of that class, and putting in circulation more money in this country to assist in carrying on his and other manufactures.

Reciprocity is not responsible for the present stagnation of trade. In spite of the bumper crop in the west this year, the outlook in Canada generally for mechanics and artisans is gloomy in the extreme. From Toronto, Winnipeg and other large centres comes the information that thousands of unemployed men are walking the streets seeking vainly for work. Such a condition of affairs has not prevailed in Canada since the gloomy years of the early nineties when Sir John A. Macdonald's highly protective policy was in operation and just before the downfall of the Conservative Government.—Cobourg World.

EASILY IDENTIFIED.

Congressman Seaborn Ruddenbury of Georgia gently smiled when the talk topic dwelt on the lord and master of the domestic ranch. He said he was reminded of little Johnny's visit to the Zoo.

While rambling around among the animals with his father one afternoon, so ran the story of the Congressman, little Johnny came to the miniature lake, on which two swans were swimming.

"Papa," said Johnny, pointing out a chubby little finger out over the lake, "is that the father swan or the mother swan ?"

"Which one do you mean, Johnny ?" asked the old man, glancing in the direction indicated by the boy.

"I mean the one over there," answered Johnny. "The one with all the feathers pecked off his head, and isn't allowed to have the biscuit or nothing."

"Yes, my son," promptly rejoined papa, with a suspicion of a sigh—"thats the father swan, all right."

BRITAIN'S NEWS IN SHORT ITEMS

A stack of wheat believed to be of record size was erected in one day in a field at Steeple Morden. Containing the produce of one field of 400 acres, the stack was 200 feet long. Over 200 men and boys, four elevators, and a great number of horses and carts were employed in its construction.

Not a Sea Serpent

Rivermen, lightermen, and tugmen who engaged in an exciting hunt on the Humber thought they had discovered a sea serpent in mid channel off Hull. It turned out to be a bullock, which swam strongly and evaded capture for some time. It was eventually lassoed and towed ashore.

Cat Causes a Fire

Fire broke out in a singular way in a dwelling house at Clyde street, Port Glasgow. A hot cinder alighted on the top of a cat lying in front of the hearth. The animal darted under the bed, and the cinder fell among some clothing and set the place on fire. The brigade was called out, but before their arrival the flames were extinguished.

Psalms Sung to Battle Tunes

Lady Frances Balfour, in opening a bazaar in aid of the endowment of St. Stephen's Church, Inverness, spoke strongly in favor of retaining their metrical Psalms unaltered. She preferred the most rugged of their metrical Psalms, scored with the history of their Covenanting forefathers and every one sung to battle tunes that had made for freedom and liberty.

Relic of Siege of Derry

Mrs. Courteney, while on a visit to some friends at the residence of the late Mr. James Ash, Faughanvale, County Derry, found a small silver-mounted cup of antique pattern which would appear to have belonged to the family or descendants of Colonel Sir Thomas Ash, who was one of the commanders in Derry during the siege.

Boat in a Gale

When out in a motor boat off Lough Corrib, Mr. Woollner, an English visitor with his wife, niece, and the daughter of a friend, were caught in a fierce gale, and only reached the island of Inishgill with the greatest difficulty. Owing to the wildness of the weather and the roughness of the sea they were unable to leave the island for two days.

Queer Hiding Place For Money

During the hearing of a case at Clones Petty Sessions against a lad named Dawson, charged with stealing hay, District Inspector Egan said the accused was convicted for the larceny of $7.50 at Ballybay. When first searched the money could not be found and the Bench dealt leniently with him. The police subsequently made another search, and found the money between his big toe and the toe next it.

Stole on a Walking Tour

At Dundee Thomas Ward and Thomas Carberry, two Glasgow lads, were convicted of a series of thefts. The couple set out on a walking tour, and on the way they stole a variety of articles, including boots, clothes, articles of cutlery, jewellery, and sums of money, the thefts being committed in Glasgow, Bishopbriggs, Dalbeath, Springford, Markinch, Cupar, and other towns. Sentence of three years' detention in the Borstal Institution at Polmont was passed on each.

Sanatorium Funeral Expenses

Before the Berwickshire Insurance Committee at Duns an interesting question was raised in connection with the payment of the funeral expenses of a sanatorium patient whose relatives refused to pay. Captain Balfour said they had to consider if their money was not to be administered on behalf of persons who were alive, and not when they were dead.

According to the Local Government Board, the local authority, which was the county council, would have to pay.

Fallen Pictures Omen

Mr. Frederick Littlewood, J.P., aged seventy-three, of Milton Regis, Kent, an ex-chairman of the urban council and a very prominent public man, died as the result of an apoplectic seizure. When Mr. Littlewood had the first stroke four years before his portrait was found to have fallen from the wall. When he had the second stroke another picture in the same room fell to the ground, and on the morning of Mr. Littlewood's death, on entering the council chamber an official found that another picture had fallen and the glass was smashed to pieces. The coincidence was referred to at a meeting of the council.

Saved by a Dog

An Englishman named Dawson fell into a gorge while crossing the St. Bernard Pass, and, being unable to move, was in danger of death from exposure and hunger had not a St. Bernard dog discovered him. The dog returned to the high road and barked at some passersby until he attracted their attention and induced them to follow him.

The orange came to Europe from Africa about the year 1600. It was not known in England till the sixteenth century, and was first planted in Australia in 1788.

"Farm and Dairy" Live Stock, Produce and Grain Market Report

Toronto, Monday, Oct. 27.—Our new trade relations with the United States are still the absorbing market topic in so far as farm produce is concerned. It is clearly evident from the tone of the city press that lower duties on food stuffs entering the United States is going to be met by lower duties on food stuffs entering Canada. Prices, particularly of meat products, have been steadily advancing. Consumers have good reason to believe that free food stuffs would give them many compensating advantages such as early fruit and vegetables at a more reasonable price. It will be interesting to watch developments in the next few months.

The volume of trade moving is satisfactory, and although money is still very tight, first mortgages being given at six and one-half to seven per cent, commercial men are inclined to take a more hopeful outlook.

WHEAT

There is a brisker demand for Western wheat on this market, particularly for local needs. It is reported that farmers in the United States are holding their wheat, and that the advancing price is due to brokers buying to cover shortages. There is a large surplus of wheat in sight, and higher quotations do not seem to be justified. Local quotations are: No. 1 Northern, 86½c; No. 2, 84½c; feed wheat, 56c to 70c; Ontario No. 2, 81c to 83c outside; 86c to 90c on track.

COARSE GRAINS

Farmers do not seem to be disposed to part with their coarse grains, and accordingly trade is quiet. Quotations as compared with last week, trend upwards. Oats, C.W. No. 2, 38c; No. 3, 35c; Ontario No. 2, 32c to 34c outside; 36c to 37c here; corn, 70½c; peas, 90c to $1; barley, 47c to 48c; rye, 69c to 69c. At Montreal quotations are: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 40½c; extra No. 1 feed, 40c; No. 1 feed, 39c; local oats, 38c to 39c; corn, 72c to 73c; barley, malting, 66c to 70c; feed, 56c to 57c; peas, $1.90 to $1.95; buckwheat, 65c; rye, 73c to 75c.

HAY AND STRAW

United States buyers are operating freely, particularly in Quebec province. Quotations are now $1 to $1.50 above the levels that prevailed previous to the change in United States tariff. Quotations here are: No. 1 baled hay, $14.50 to $15; No. 2, $11 to $14; No. 3, $9 to $9; baled straw, $8. Montreal quotations are firm as last week's level: No. 2, $13 to $13.50; No. 2, $12 to $14.50; No. 3, $10 to $10.50.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES

Apples, bbl., 35c to 50c; bbl., $1.50 to $3; pears, bbl., 30c to 50c; grapes, 4-qt. bkt., 20c to 30c.

EGGS AND POULTRY

There is a good firm demand for eggs in wholesale lots. Wholesale dealers are selling to the retail trade as follows: New laids, 35c to 35c; fresh, 30c to 32c; storage, 28c to 29c. Receipts of new laids have almost ceased, and storage stock have been largely drawn upon. At Montreal the market is firmer, the scarcity of new laid eggs being particularly apparent. New laids have advanced to a dozen, grocers paying 40c a doz. for them; No. 1 storage stock, 27c to 27½c.

Receipts of dressed poultry are increasing and generally the quality is anything but satisfactory. Wholesale quotations are: Dressed fowl, 12c to 15c; live, 9c to 11c; spring chickens, 17c to 20c; live, 14c to 16c; geese, 12c to 15c and 10c to 12c; ducks, 12c to 14c and 18c to 20c; turkeys, No. 1, 23c to 25c and 20c to 22c; No. 2, 18c to 20c and 15c to 17c.

POTATOES AND BEANS

Wholesale dealers are quoting Canadian potatoes at 85c to 90c a bag. An active trade with the United States has already started. Supplies of potatoes at Montreal are coming in heavily from Quebec and New Brunswick. Green Mountains are quoted at 87½c to 70c; Quebec grades, 60c to 65c.

Prime beans are here quoted at $1.75 to $2. At Montreal dealers are asking $1.85 to $1.85 for three-pound pickers.

DAIRY PRODUCE

The most interesting development in the dairy produce trade in the past week has been the increased demand for cheese from the Old Country. Prices locally have not advanced. Butter is in good demand, with receipts constantly declining. Storage stocks are now being drawn upon. Dealers quote dairy prints at 28c to 29c; creamery prints, 27c to 28c; solids, 26c to 28½c; inferior, 25c to 25c. Cheese is rather dull, new large, 14½c to 15½c; twins, 14½c to 15c; old, large, 15c to 15½c; twins, 15½c to 15½c.

HORSES

This is a dull season for horses, but heavy drafts are moving quite freely. Demand comes principally from the lumber camps. Odd lots are crossing the line to the United States. Heavy drafts, 1,400 to 1,700 lbs., $225 to $275; farmers' chunks, 1,200 to 1,400 lbs., $175 to $175; aprroos, $175 to $225; good drivers, $150 to $200.

LIVE STOCK

Those who have been predicting a falling off in the high prices that have ruled consequent upon free entry to the United States markets, will find little to encourage them in the trading of the past week. Prices have advanced in some lines and are firm in others. Cattle have been crossing the line steadily. In fact on some markets this week the majority of the cattle were purchased on United States account. Not only have stockers been going over, but prime steers have been marketed to advantage in Buffalo. The consignment of cattle from Montreal to southern points in the last week totals over 90 cars.

Receipts have been fairly large on this market, but the quality is not satisfactory, a large part of the run being poorly fitted. Anything well finished was taken up greedily. Quotations average about as follows: Export cattle, $7.60 to $8; medium, $7.10 to $7.50; butchers, choice, $7.60 to $7.75; com. to good, $6.50 to $7.10; bairers, good to choice, $6.60 to $6.75; medium, $4.50 to $5.50; cows, choice, $5.75 to $6.30; com. to good, $4.75 to $5.75; butchers' bulls, $4 to $6.85; feeders, $6.25 to $6.60; stockers, $4 to $6.10; canners and cutters, $2.75 to $4.60.

Choice milch cows are quoted $60 to $100; com. to med., $40 to $45; springers, $40 to $100. Veal calves go at $8.50 to $10; inferior, $4 to $6.

Wether lambs are in good active demand at $7.50 to $7.75; buck lambs, $6.75 to $7; ewes, $4.50 to $5.25; bucks and culls, $3 to $4.50.

Hogs have advanced slightly and are now quoted $8.50 to $8.75 f.o.b.

Montreal quotations are as follows: Good steers, $6.50 to $7; fair, $6.25 to $6.50; lower grades, $5 to $5.75; cows, choice, $5.75 to $6; com. to good, $4.25 to $5.50; feeders, $5.60 to $6.75; common bulls, $4.25 to $4.50; cows, $3.50 to $3.75. There is a good demand for sheep and lambs from local buyers. Lambs, $6 to $7; sheep, $4 to $4.65. Grass fed calves, 5½c to 4½c a lb.; veal calves, 6½c to 7½c.

Buffalo quotations: Best Canada steers, $7.25 to $8.25; choice handy steers, $7.75 to $8; fair to good, $7.25 to $7.50; best cows, $6.25 to $6.75; butcher cows, $5 to $6; butcher heifers, $6.60 to $7.75; stock heifers, $4 to $6; feeding steers, $6.25 to $7.25

MONTREAL HOG MARKET

Montreal, Saturday, Oct. 25.—The feature in this department of the trade this week was the more pronounced strength in the live hog situation owing to the limited supplies coming forward, and prices showed a further advance of 25c a cwt., with a good demand from packers, and sales of selected lots were made at $8.25 to $8.75 a cwt., weighed off cars. This, with the advance recorded at the beginning of the week, has helped to strengthen the market for dressed hogs considerably, and packers, in order to make ends meet, have been forced to mark up prices $1 a cwt., with sales of abattoir fresh-killed stock at $14 to $14.50.

EXPORT CHEESE TRADE

Montreal, Saturday, Oct. 25.—There was a stronger tone to the market for cheese this week and prices showed a slight reaction from those current a week ago. The offerings at country points were selling freely at from 12½c to 13½c, the higher price being paid generally for colored cheese, which seemed to be in greater demand than white this week. The trade generally feels that this is the last spurt of this season and that, unless there is a continued strong demand from the other side, prices will gradually recede from now until the last of this season's cheese are marketed. Receipts are slowly but steadily falling off, and reports from various parts of the country indicate an early closing of the factories, on account of the shortage of milk available. The increasing demand for beef cattle will probably have the effect of wiping out a portion of the dairy herds and the outlook for the future in the dairy industry is not at all bright.

The market for butter is rather easy owing to the poor quality of the receipts during the past few days, the cold weather apparently affecting the quality of the milk; and, as a consequence, the butter coming in is very irregular. Finest September made creamery is quoted at 28c, finest fresh receipts at 27c to 27½c, with under-finest quoted at 26c to 26½c.

CHEESE MARKETS

Stirling, Ont. 21.—430 boxes offered; 265 sold at 12 11-16c; balance at 12½c.

Campbellford, Ont. 21.—240 boxes boarded; 200 sold at 12 11-16c; 120 at 12½c; balance unsold.

Peterboro, Ont., Oct. 22.—Cheese sold 12¾c to 12 13-16c and 12⅞ all colored, amounting to 1,007 boxes

ASSAULT CASES AWAITING TRIAL

Charles Creger of Harvey Township is the complainant in a couple of assault cases that will be tried by County Police Magistrate Edmison, at an early date. The defendants are Peter Graham and George Brownlee. A charge of using grossly insulting language has also been registered against Graham.

BOARD OF WORKS DEALT WITH LONG LIST OF QUESTIONS

Ownership of the Streets, Permission to Tear Up Roadways, Crossings to Be Laid and Many Other Matters Received Attention

REGULAR WEEKLY SESSION

The Wednesday night meeting of the "Willing Workers," sometimes known as the Board of Works, was held on Wednesday night with Alderman Buller in the chair. Mayor Bradburn and Aldermen Johnston, Duffus, Gillespie and Anderson were present.

Ald. Buller—"What can we do regarding a sidewalk on Elias Avenue. There are two houses up there and we should do something for them?"

Mayor Bradburn—"Could we not put in a temporary board walk; they will only be there a short time?"

Ald. Buller—"The street has to be all filled in. It is not fit for vehicular traffic. They are just now filling in the street."

Ald. Anderson—"It is a wet place as it is, I believe."

Moved by Ald. Johnston and Ald. Anderson that temporary board walks be erected for these houses.—Carried.

An account from the Fire, Water and Light Committee was held over until the contra account is made out.

Mills Bros., contractors, of Toronto, wrote enquiring into whether the work on the outfall sewer will be done by contract or day work.

Moved by Mayor Bradburn, seconded by Ald. Anderson that the City Clerk write, stating that no decision has been made yet in this regard.

White Elephant Echo.

Willis Chipman wrote asking that his account for $723 for engineering work on the Romaine Street "White Elephant".

Ald. Buller—"What are we going to do with this?"

Ald. Anderson—"Pay it, if it can be properly adjusted."

Engineer Parsons asked for the particulars about which the letter concerned.

Ald. Buller — "Everybody in the City knows it. He was going to give us a job."

Mayor Bradburn—"He gave us a job, all right!"

Ald. Buller—"He was to give us a proper job. He knew the character of the soil and intimated that he was the man for the work; and he turned out to be the man that didn't do it. You have seen how the work fell through."

Mr. Parsons—"And that cost $35,000?"

No action was taken regarding Mr. Chipman's communication.

Mr. J. C. Matchett wrote, asking for two weeks' holidays, beginning on November 1st.

Moved by Ald. Gillespie, seconded by Ald. Anderson, that this be granted, the holiday period to be determined by City Engineer Parsons.

City Streets And Who Owns Them

"We can't start anything without asking some one for permission," began Alderman Buller in a brief philippic at last night's Board of Works meeting, upon the privileges which certain companies have been granted over the use of the streets.

The question arose out of the reply from C. F. Sise, general manager of the Bell Telephone Company, to the effect that the company would, next spring, lay the conduits on George and Charlotte streets as requested by the city, if permission were granted to use certain lanes for poles.

Mayor Bradburn—We can't give rights over any lanes, we haven't got them to give.

Alderman Buller—A city should not be tied up in this way. The matter should be taken up at the Convention of Municipalities until this burden is removed from the people and not have outsiders coming in and doing as they like with the streets.

Mayor Bradburn—The municipalities must simply stay with it until something is done. I was at a meeting of municipal representatives and we were assured that something would be done in this direction. It is just a matter of keeping it.

Alderman Gillespie—Is this the result of the municipality giving away rights years ago?

Mayor Bradburn — Not exactly. The Dominion Government granted rights to the Bell Telephone Company and others years ago when they were making a beginning. They gave the companies rights to go anywhere.

Alderman Gillespie—Then the Dominion Government should return to the municipalities the rights they should have and which were given away over their heads.

Alderman Buller—Every municipality has had this trouble and they are all eager to go into it and get it cleaned up.

Mayor Bradburn stated that the matter should be taken up during the winter and an effort made to secure a satisfactory agreement. This was decided upon by a motion of Mayor Bradburn's, seconded by Alderman Johnston, and City Clerk Armstrong was instructed to write the company stating that the Council cannot take up the question of lane privileges over which it has no rights.

The Underground Work A Tangle

The question of laying municipal conduits was raised at the Board of Works meeting following a statement by the City Engineer that there is a network of gas, water and wire mains under some of he principal streets. Mr. Parsons said that recently near the corner of George and Dalhousie streets workmen laying a surface drain had to jump a gas main. Similar situations had been experienced in other locations, and it was an impediment that should not be encountered.

Mayor Bradburn—Are the companies providing blue prints showing the locations of their mains? I don't think the gas company knows where some of their mains are.

Mr. Parsons spoke of a case where a gas main had been found and the company's men said they did not know it was there. The discussion concerned the exact location of the mains.

Mayor Bradburn—There should be a record of all the underground work so that the engineering department will know just where they are.

Stuck Pick in Cable.

Alderman Johnston—A workman on a gas service on Charlotte street stuck his pick into the hydro cable.

Mr. Parsons staed that no permission had been given to do that particular piece of work.

Alderman Johnston—It is the same old trouble of companies digging up and putting down where ever they please.

Alderman Buller—We have no objections to their doing the work. But the City Engineer should be advised in every case, and if it is necessary to warn the men about any main or wires it can be done in time.

Alderman Johnson stated that he did not know whether any material damage had been done the cable.

Alderman Duffus said he could have sailed a vanoe on Stewart street, south of Perry. He suggested a catch basin for the surplus water.

Alderman Buller reminded Mr. Parsons that a catch basin is needed at the corner of Townsend and Stewart.

On the motion of Aldermen Anderson and Gillespie a catch basin will be placed on Rogers street in front of Mr. Sam Taylor's residence.

Alderman Duffus reported that Aylmer street between London and Dublin streets needed attention. Catch basins are adjacent but have not been working overtime.

Alderman Buller to Alderman Johnston—You want to get an auto. You haven't had a list in here for a long time. But this has been up before.

Alderman Johnston — Alderman Duffus is right. The street needs attention there.

Alderman Johnston's Demand.

Alderman Johnston put in another plea for Dennistoun avenue. But the chairman and the Mayor chorused "overdraft," "too near the end of our tether."

Alderman Duffus—But we promised those people the road would receive attention.

Mayor Bradburn instanced numerous other stretches of highway that are showing signs of dilapidation and suggested that the work be left over until next spring.

Alderman Johnston then produced a request for a sidewalk on George street, located near Dennistoun Place.

"Too late in the season," said Alderman Buller.

"But you have other crossings to be done yet. The weather shouldn't stop you."

"These others have been in first," said Alderman Buller.

Alderman Johnston—But the people of that section desire a crossing.

The Mayor — There are far too many crossings now.

Alderman Johnston—There is a distance of two blocks without a crossing.

Alderman Buller suggested a plank crossing, but it was decided to put in concrete if the weather permits.

Crossings will also be attended to at the G.T.R. station and on Water street, at the north side of Hunter street.

Sewer Will Have To Be Lowered

A communication from Bennett and Goodwill regarding a sewer recently built on Dickson street stated that it was a foot higher than the cellar floor in the residence of the Misses Dickson.

It was stated that the cost of lowering the sewer to the desired depth would amount to $500 or $600. Mayor Bradburn suggested that it be left until next year and provision be made for the work in the estimates. It was decided, however, that the City Engineer bring in a report of the cost, and the work may be undertaken this fall.

A letter from the Toronto Savings and Loan Company stated that they would hold the city responsible for any damage caused by water flowing over the curb and into their property on the south side of Hunter street just west of George street.

Engineer Parsons stated that there was five inches between the centre of the gutter and the edge of the grating. The sidewalk sagged at that point as at many others.

Alderman Johnston—The walk was put there to meet their wishes and it seems strange that they should turn around in this way and try to make the city responsible.

Mr. Parsons said he considered it safe, and Mayor Bradburn suggested the grating be filled up with cement. He agreed to see Mr. Thompson before any action was taken.

Small Items That Received Attention

Alderman Anderson reported that nothing had been arrived at in regard to the straightening of Clifton street.

On Sunday, Oct. 26th, anniversary services were conducted by Rev. P. B. Thornton, of Barrie, in the Omemee Presbyterian Church. Large congregations listened with rapt attention to the addresses at 11 a.m. and at 7 p.m., delivered by our old Omemee boy. The choir rendered special music at each service. On Monday evening a fowl supper was served in the basement of the church, where tables were set the whole length of the room. The fowl, pastry, cakes, and so forth that go to make up such a good meal, were delicious and there was plenty of them. The waiters were all very attentive and looked to it that everybody had their wants satisfied. After the supper a programme was given in the body of the church, which was well filled with people from all the surrounding district with their visitors and friends. Rev. Mr. Pogue, of Peterborough, gave his celebrated lecture on "John Wannamaker," the Philadelphia merchant. Short addresses were given by the other clergymen of the village, Rev. J. F. Chapman and Rev. Mr. Earle; also the Omemee quartette, which is always a treat. This is a popular annual affair, and no doubt will not be forgotten when another year rolls 'round.

Try This Treatment For Hairy Growths

(Helps to Beauty)

A single application of a paste made by mixing together a little powdered delatone and water and applied to objectionable hairs for about 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off, takes with it every trace of hair or fuzz. The skin should then be washed to free it from the remaining paste and it will be firm and spotless. This is a quick painless treatment, but its success depends greatly on using fresh delatone, which can be purchased only in original packages.

BRIDGENORTH HUNTERS LEAVE FOR THE WOODS

Examiner Special:

BRIDGENORTH, Oct. 29.—Dandelions are to be seen in bloom any day.

Mr. Hughes Charles was the first to move to the Park last spring, and will be the last to move away. He is still a resident in the Park.

The Rev. Mr. Crews preached the anniversary services in the Methodist Church which was filled at both services. The thank-offering amounted to $373.

The farmers are busy taking in turnips. There is an average crop and the weather is good for handling them.

The Bridgenorth Hunting Club leaves to-morrow morning for Stony Creek. It is comprised of William Kelly, Noble Kelly and Dr. Kelly, Fred. Harry and James Jopling, W. J. Telford and Leonard Dobson.

Messrs. James Grant and Russell Ball leave on Friday for Beaver Lake. They are old hunters and will not be affected with "buck" fever.

NO CONFERENCE WILL BE HELD

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Oct. 25.—It is not expected that the conference with the Ontario Premier and his lieutenants proposed by Trustee Genest, in connection with the Separate School Bilingual question, will materialise. Sir James Whitney, it is believed, has no intention of reopening the vexed question with Mr. Genest.

COMMENCED APPEAL

CHICAGO, Oct. 29. — Frank M. Ryan, who is sentenced to a seven year term, and other convicted and sentenced officials of the structural iron workers, to-day commenced their appeal to the United States' Court of Appeals here against the legality of their convictions. The cases will take some days. In the meantime Ryan and most of his friends are out on bail.

FINE WATCH REPAIRING

Cheap watch repairing may appeal to some, but generally speaking experience proves work done cheaply is generally done poorly, and in the end is the final ruin of a good watch. We have first-class workmen and do only high-class work. No other place can do any better. Our charges are no higher than others, for good work. If you have a good watch you will find it economical to have us do your repairing.

The Parlour Should Be Made Beautiful with A Persian Rug

Some very fine pieces of Furniture are also to be seen on this floor.

We would remind you that we carry a complete stock of Wallpaper and Beds.

No matter how richly appointed the room may be, there is added a certain quiet elegance when the floor is covered with the beauty of a Persian Rug.

Woven in the varied and lovely designs, which for lack of proper description we call "Oriental" they possess that complete fitness—to which no other carpet can lay claim—for the adornment of our best rooms.

And a number of these handsome Rugs—choice reproductions of hand made examples now priceless—are to be seen upon the third floor in all the elegance of their soft colourings.

There are six or more different sizes, the smaller ones being $9.90, while the others range upward in price to the largest, which is $95.00.

On the same floor is a fine collection of the less expensive Rugs such as; Wiltons, Axminsters, Velvets and Tapestrys, which cover so wide a field of choice surely that we should have no difficulty in meeting everyones exact need.

TO-DAY'S POLICE COURT NEWS

Charles Parks appeared in the Police Court this morning, charged with being drunk and disorderly in a public place. He pleaded not guilty, but on the evidence of P. C. Reid, who arrested him, he was found guilty and assessed $2.

Edward Murphy pleaded guilty to being drunk and disorderly last night. He was fined two dollars.

Alexander McManus, who was drunk while in charge of a rig, last night, pleaded guilty to the charge preferred against him, and was assessed $5.75.

"We cannot have people's lives endangered by reckless driving," said the Magistrate. McManus, however, was endangering his own safety more than any one else's for in driving up the paved part of George Street he turned on to the right-hand side, and nearly collided with the cement mixer, steam roller and other pieces of apparatus.

Richad Heard, who was with McManus in the rig, was fined $2 for being drunk in a public place.

GEOGRAPHY CLASS AT MARKET TO-DAY

At the market this morning conversation momentarily switched to the industrial capacities of labours. One philosopher contended that the Macedonian was a better workman than the "Eyetalian." No one offered to argue the point.

"But where is Macedonia?" asked one.

"Its out in the eastern country somewheres," was the answer.

Said another—"I've heard of that country, Maledonia, but Macedonia is a new one to me. The Maledonians are grand workmen."

Some wanted to know whether Maledonia was on Mars or Jupiter, but a load of Shearer cheese arrived and broke up the meeting.

No Parcel Post For Some Time

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 30.—It will be some time after the opening of the new year before the system of parcel post, authorized by the bill passed by Parliament last session, goes into effect in Canada. The officials of the Postoffice Department have been hard at work upon the scheme, but they have been handicapped by the lack of adequate postoffice facilities in many towns and cities of the Dominion.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY WILL HAVE A SURPLUS

East Peterborough Society Will Have a Balance of $275—Increase in Membership

THE ANNUAL MEETING

Secretary Roxburgh is authority for the statement that the East Peterborough Agricultural Society will have a surplus of about $275.00 at the end of the year after meeting all expenses. This is particularly encouraging for the officers and directors, and will provide funds for suitable fittings for showing exhibits in the new armouries at Norwood, and other improvements that will likely be taken up at the Society's annual meeting in January. With the Society accorded for the days of their fair the use of the armouries, which will be a magnificent structure when fully finished, besides their own buildings they will have accommodation to be proud of. Also taking into consideration the increased entries and exhibits this year, the future of the Society is very promising.

The number of membership fees retained this year is 92 as compared with 75 last year. $1,160.00 will be paid in prize money. The largest amount of prize money awarded to any one party was $54.75, Messrs. Wm. Wilson & Son being the recipients, while Mr. Adam Humphries came second, securing $49.

WEDDING BELLS

DODGE—BENNETT.

On Tuesday, Oct. 28th, at All Saints' Church by the Rev. R. B. Grobb, Miss F. Bennett of London Colney, England, to Mr. T. Dodge, of Peterborough. The young couple will reside at 575 Bethune Street.

KEEN—LOWE.

A pretty weding was celebrated at 1.30 p.m. on Wednesday, October 29th at the residence of Mr. Joseph Lowe, Mount Pleasant, when his daughter Jessie was united in marriage to Mr. Geo. H. Keen. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. J. Keith, in the presence of relatives and friends. The bride wore white silk brocaded crepe de chine trimmed with shadow lace and pearls, and carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. The flower girl, Miss Mary Lowe, carried a shepherd's staff and Miss Evelyn Bland carried the ring on a white satin cushion. Both the attendants were dressed in pink voile with lace trimmings.

The bride's travelling suit was of navy blue serge and she wore a black velvet hat with flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Keen left on the five o'clock train for Toronto en route to Buffalo and New York.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold bracelet watch, and to the little attendants gold bracelets.

HARVEY TOWNSHIP RESIDENTS APPEAR IN COUNTY COURT

On Charge of Assault—Endearing Personalities Exchanged by Counsel—Altercation Arose Out of Action of Complainant, Who Impounded a Couple of Colts.

The impounding of a pair of colts by Charles Krager of Harvey township and a subsequent altercation on Thanksgiving Day culminated in the principals being called upon to appear before County Police Magistrate Edmison. The trial, in which Krager was named as complainant, and Peter Graham and George Brownlow, defendants, took place this afternoon in the County Court. Two charges were preferred against Graham, one of using profane language towards complainant, and the other of assault. A charge of assault was also registered against Brownlow. The latter was employed by Graham on his farm.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for Krager and Mr. F. D. Kerr acted on behalf of the defendants.

Lurid verbosity and questionable personalities, the latter exchanged by the legal lights, featured the proceedings. Mr. Kerr compared Mr. Gordon's voice with that of a fog horn, while the latter retaliated by saying Mr. Kerr talked like a pea-hen. The Court interfered and suggested that counsel omit personalities.

Krager was accused of impounding a couple of colts, and on Thanksgiving Day the three principals in the case met, and according to the evidence, the lurid language referred to was accounted for.

The Evidence.

The first case called was that of Krager versus Brownlow, in which the latter was charged with assault. Complainant testified that the alleged assault occurred on Thanksgiving Day. Witness was driving a milk waggon out of Graham's yard when defendant jumped on behind, and making his way to the front end of the waggon, proceeded to attack Krager. Witness denied having done anything to provoke the assault. Witness had his coat torn in the melee. The garment was produced in Court. Krager asserted that he was afraid of Brownlow and desired to have both defendants bound over to keep the peace.

Delbert Junkin, cheesemaker at the North Harvey factory, where the fracas terminated, gave evidence relating to the arrival of the men at thef actory. He did not witness the altercation.

At this juncture Mr. F. D. Kerr, counsel for the defendants, appeared and requested the court to accede the privilege of cross-examination. Mr. G. N. Gordon objected on the grounds that Mr. Kerr was thirty minutes late, and that the witnesses in the case were desirous of leaving town on the 4:30 train for Bobcaygeon. The court allowed five minutes for cross-examination.

Afraid of Brownlow.

Cross-examined by Mr. Kerr, complainant claimed that he was afraid of Brownlow. He admitted having had a fight on a public highway with a man named Girven about a year ago. He denied having challenged Graham to fight some months ago.

To Mr. Gordon Peter Graham denied having shut the gate so as to prevent Krager from leaving the yard while Brownlow climbed on the waggon.

George Brownlow regaled the court with his version of the case. Witness was employed by Graham. He claimed that complainant hurled a vile epithet at him.

Peter Graham, President of the North Harvey cheese factory, was named as the defendant in the next two cases. The charges were classified as one of assault and one of using abusive language, respectively.

Krager asserted that Graham and his hired man (Brownlow) threatened to kill him unless he made certain admissions respecting the colts. Krager said that he was unaware the colts were in Graham's possession.

Delbert Junkin proved to be an unwilling witness. To Mr. Graham he stated that he had no desire to become implicated in the case any more than was necessary. The complainant collected milk for the factory of which the defendant was President.

The case is proceeding.

A Worthy Object

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The National Council of Women of Canada has been asked to bring the following appeal to the notice of the general public in the hope that a hearty response may result.

The "Over-Seas Dail Mail" of London, England, is making an effort to distribute Christmas gifts among the very poorest children in London, and we are asked to make the scheme known to your readers.

It is intended also in this connection to hold a Doll Show at Westminster, opening on December 9th, in which there will be a Dominion Section and the dolls and toys shown there will afterwards be given as Christmas gifts through school teachers, hospitals, etc., to those very poor children who would otherwise be forgotten.

It is believed that this will serve two purposes. It will help to give very real pleasure to many poor children who otherwise would go without Christmas gifts. It will further remind the thousands who visit the Doll Show how warm a place the children of London still retain in the hearts and affections of fellow countrymen and countrywomen across the seas.

Any who are willing to help this good cause are asked to send either dressed dolls, or small sums of money, direct to "The Editor, Over-Seas Daily Mail, 2 Carmelite Street, London, E. C., England," before November 30th. The dolls are to have the words "Dominions Section" firmly attached to each with a piece of tape.

In the hope, therefore, that Canada may be well represented in this effort, I remain,

Sincerely yours,

Emily Cummings,

Corresponding Secretary, National Council of Women of Canada.

SAVED BY LACK OF HEROES

Of all the innumerable disasters that have occurred at sea, probably only one, the burning of the Volturno, that brought into peril a large number of women and children, gave rise to anything except eulogy because almost all of them were saved. That there were only ten fatalities among the weaker and more helpless passengers of this vessel, while 128 men were lost, including thirty members of the crew, does not constitute the heroic record it would otherwise be because of the fact that by the greater part of the deaths were those of the men who crowded into those four ill-fated boats when they offered what then seemed to be the only means of safety.

So, by a peculiar and probably unprecedented chance, it happens that, had the mortality among the women and children been greater, more of self-sacrificing devotion could have been credited to the men, as well as the maintenance of better discipline on the Volturno's officers. That truth is not affected by the circumstances that two of the boats were lost at the ship's side, with only one survivor, and the occupants of the other two rowed away over the stormy sea, never to be seen or heard of again. As it turned out, those who died would all have lived had they remained on the ship, while if the places in the boats they seized had been given to women and children more of the latter would have perished.—New York Times.

J. A. RUDDICK TAUGHT NEW ZEALAND

The Art of Making Cheese Too Successfully

A despatch the other day announced that we were in danger of losing our primacy in the British cheese market to the New Zealander. That primacy was probably due to a large extent to the immense advertisement we gave ourselves by making the biggest cheese in the world. That cheese was manufactured in the fall of 1892 in the Canadian Pacific Railway Station shed at Perth, Ont., and was sent to the World's Fair in Chicago the next year. It weighed 22,000 pounds and required for its making the equivalent of the September milking of 10,000 cows. After the fair was over the cheese was shipped to England, where it was widely exhibited and called attention in a startling manner to the cheesemakers of Canada. Their offices had already made a prominent place for itself in the English market; but that place was enormously enlarged as a result of the unique advertisement which was fully supported by the quality of the Canadian article. The man who had charge of the making of that cheese was John Archibald Ruddick, then a member of the staff of the Dairy department for the Dominion, since 1905 the dairy and cold storage commissioner and official chief of the dairy interests for Canada.

At the time he superintended the making of this great cheese, Mr. Ruddick had for a decade been a figure in the cheese-making world of Canada. He was at the time just thirty years of age, having been a Scotch-Irish and United Empire Loyalist stock in the rich County of Oxford. It was natural enough that he should turn his attention to dairying and make a success of it, for Oxford has long been one of the premier counties of the Dominion in cheese and butter making. It was not Oxford, however, which gave him his chance, though it did lay a strong foundation of knowledge for him. It was under the Lancaster in the eastern end of the province that Mr. Ruddick got his most valuable experience and made his name. When twenty years of age he entered the service of Macpherson, as manager of one of his factories and for years before 1888 he was superintendent of a combination of sixty factories, which MacPherson then controlled in Glengarry and in Huntingdon, P. Q.

Soon after this it was that Mr. Ruddick entered the service of his government as a member of the staff of the Dominion Dairy Commissioner. The three years he was a travelling instructor of the Eastern Dairymen's Association, and at this time did much to spread improved methods of cheese and butter-making among the farmers of Eastern Ontario. When Queen's University established its dairy school in 1894 he was made superintendent and remained in charge of the fortunes of the institution until four years later, the school in the meantime having been taken over by the Ontario Government.

Those who claim to know have to lay some of the blame for the competition on the shoulders of Mr. Ruddick. When he severed his connection with the Kingston dairy school in 1898, it was for the purpose of entering the service of the New Zealand government, where he remained for three years, and did as much to lay the foundation of the cheese industry in that colony. Mr. Ruddick, by the way, is only one of a number of Canadians who have been engaged as experts to build up the dairying interests in other countries. New Zealand has taken for a time no less than three other Canadians for that purpose, while even Great Britain and the United States have drawn upon our cheese and butter to assist them in improving their methods.

Mr. Ruddick's life has in a remarkable manner paralleled the period of growth in Canada. This is particularly true of cheese-making, with which line he has been most closely associated. When he was born about fifty million pounds of butter were being made in Canada, but the cheese product amounted to only about four million pounds. This, of course, was chiefly for home consumption, the output of dairy products on a considerable scale not arising till five or six years later. The total amount of butter made in Canada at the time of the last census has not been figured out, but ten years earlier it was one hundred and fifty million pounds. This is a three-fold increase, and probably in 1910 it was nearly four-fold. The growth of the cheese production has been much greater, it being over two hundred million pounds in 1907 an increase of fifty-fold.

BEST LAXATIVE FOR BOWELS—"CASCARETS"

They Clean Liver, Sweeten Stomach, Stomach. End Sick Headache, Bad Breath, Indigestion, Constipation

Get a 10-cent box.

Are you keeping your bowels, liver, and stomach clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters?

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets thoroughly cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken or cause any inconvenience, and cost only 10 cent a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

BOGUE IS STILL MISSING

Police Still Searching for the Former Peterborough Boy Who Mysteriously Disappeared

BUFFALO, N.Y., Oct. 29. — Although the police here have incessantly been on the lookout for James Bogue, the young paying teller of the London (Ontario) branch of the Bank of Toronto, who mysteriously disappeared from the Empire Hotel in Niagara Falls on Oct. 10, no trace of him has yet been secured.

John Pringle, manager of the London branch, states that Bogue had not returned to London.

Mr. James Bogue, of this city, is an uncle of the missing boy.

USEFUL RECIPES

Baked Suet Pudding.

One cup sweet milk, 1 cup chopped suet, 1 egg, 1 teaspoonful soda, 2 of cream of tartar, 1-2 cup (scant) of sugar, 1-2 cup raisins; stir quite stiff with flour; bake 1-2 hour.

Hickory Nut Cake.

One and one-half cups of sugar, 1-2 cup of butter, 2 cups of flour, 3-4 cup of sweet milk, 2 eggs, 2 teaspoonfuls of baking powder, 1 cup hickory nut meats, chopped.

Cream sugar and butter, add eggs, then milk, flour, with baking powder sifted in, and lastly stir in the nuts, which have first been well dredged. Bake in loaf in moderate oven.

Veal Loaf.

Three pounds of raw veal chopped very fine, butter the size of an egg, three eggs, three tablespoons of cream or milk. If milk, use a small piece of butter. Mix the eggs and cream together. Mix with the veal four pounded crackers, one teaspoon of black pepper, one large tablespoon of salt, one large tablespoon of sage. Mix well together and form into a loaf. Bake 2 1-2 hours, basting with butter and water while baking. Serve cut in thin slices.

THE EARTH IS FOR MAN'S USE AND BENEFIT.

IS CITY HOLDING UP THE BRIDGE? "VERITAS" SAYS SO

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—The work of re-constructing the C.P.R. bridge at present under way is liable to be held up and indefinitely postponed. Why? Simply because some of those who run the Town think that a swing bridge is absolutely necessary.

I have heard many diverse opinions anent this and the Majority seem to think that a swing bridge is being advocated to satisfy a few. If a swing bridge were erected the most natural place for it is on the two centre spans, but some of our City Fathers say that the span nearest the station is the place for it. Unless some agreement is quickly reached a deadlock will ensue, resulting probably in the present bridge being left as it stands.

SUFFERERS FROM PILES! ZAM-BUK HAS CURED THESE!

Friction on the hemorrhoid veins that are swollen, inflamed and gorged with blood, is what causes the terrible pain and stinging and smarting of piles. Zam-Buk applied at night will be found to give ease before morning. Thousands of persons have proved this. Why not be guided by the experience of others?

Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask., writes: "I must thank you for the benefit I have received from Zam-Buk. Last summer I suffered greatly from piles. I started to use Zam-Buk and found it gave me relief, so I continued it, and after using three or four boxes I am pleased to say it has effected a complete cure."

Mr. G. A. Dufresne, 183-185 St. Joseph Street, St. Roch, Quebec, P. Q., writes: "I can highly recommend Zam-Buk to everyone who suffers from piles."

Magistrate Sanford, of Weston, King's Co., N.S., says: "I suffered long from itching piles, but Zam-Buk has now cured me."

Mr. William Kenty, of Upper Nine Mile River, Hants Co., N.S., says: "I suffered terribly from piles, the pain at times being almost unbearable. I tried various ointments, but everything I tried failed to do me the slightest good. I was tired of trying various remedies, when I heard of Zam-Buk, and thought as a last resource I would give this balm a trial. After a very short time Zam-Buk effected a complete cure."

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for skin injuries and diseases, eczema, ulcers, varicose and diseases, eczema, ulcers, varicose veins, cuts, burns, bruises, chaps, cold sores, etc. 50c. box from all druggists and stores or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful imitations.

From the Diary of a Grandmother; being a few extracts from the diary of a grandmother who visits her daughter and her four grandchildren for the first time.

II.

Grandmother makes some discoveries about the manners of the children of to-day.

By RUTH CAMERON

"I have read so much about the deterioration of children's manners that I ought not to be surprised to find that my own grandchildren are by no means well bred according to the standards of a generation or two generations ago; and yet I am surprised. Seeing these things in your own family is so much more real than reading about them. "This morning Margaret called Ruth from above stairs. Ruth was reading a book .Without looking up from her book or making the slightest move to go to her mother, she hollered—yes, that is the only suitable word,—'What.' Not 'What is it, mother?' or even 'What, mother,' mind you, but just the one word. I expected to hear Margaret reprove her sharply, but instead she merely called again, and Ruth put her finger in her place in the book and went slowly up the stairs.

"I simply cannot imagine my mother that way, nor indeed can I iamgine Margaret responding to me in such an ill bred manner.

"Children in my own day—it doesn't seem possible that it's nearly sixty years ago, but it is—used to say 'Yes, ma'm' and 'No, sir'; and in my children's day children said, 'Yes, mother' and 'No, father,' but my daughter's children speak to her or their father just as they do to each other. I suppose I shall get used to it, but it certainly seems strange at first.

"There was a time, too, when a child who interrupted or contradicted his parents was in danger of a good, thorough spanking. I just wish my own dear mother—I remember she was considered entirely too lenient by her mother—could sit at the dinner table one night and listen to her great grandchildren.

"Ruth chatters like a magpie, interrupting anyone and everyone; all the children contradict their mother with the utmost freedom, and somewhat less boldly, their father. Now and then they are brought up sharply by a petulant rebuke which sounds more like one child quarrelling with another than a parent correcting a child, but for the most part nothing is said.

"I know I am old fashioned, but I never quite realized how much so until I heard my grandchildren talking a brand new language which has come into being since my youth.—modern slang. In my day boys sometimes used slangy expressions, girls never; but Janet and Ruth can fully hold their own with Richard. It is actually difficult for me to understand what they mean a good deal of the time. Even Margaret and Richard senior laughed at my blank face when Janet said to Richard, 'What do you mean you lost your dog?' They tried to explain it to me but I cannot say I see much sense to it.

"I have been looking back over what I have written, and I seem to have done nothing but find fault with my grandchildren. I am ashamed of myself for they have been very sweet to me. I am going to look this book up in my drawer. You see, Diary, I have kept all my criticisms for you. I think that is the best place for grandmother's criticisms."

LINCOLN CITY'S GOAL-KEEPER ESTABLISHES A RECORD

Played in Thirty-eight Second Division Games Last Year and Has Played in Each Match Up to Date This Season --Old Country Football News

Can anybody in football beat the record for consecutive appearance of T. E. Fern, Lincoln City's goalkeeper? On February 28, 1910, Fern was hurt at Lincoln and missed the following week at Derby. He appeared, however, the next Saturday, March 12, at Lincoln against Stockport County, and has not since missed a first team match. He played the ten remaining matches that season, appeared in the 38 league games in the following season, as well as in cup ties, and the 32 Central League matches. He was a player in every one of Lincoln City's 38 Second Division games last year, and has played in each match up to date this season. This means that Fern has made 142 consecutive appearances with Lincoln City's first team.

Harold Walden, of Bradford City, has just been married.

Joe Mountain has a new name. Hampton at Ashton. He is known as the "whirlwind"

Rodway and McFayden are the only two bald-headed backs playing together in the League.

The parents of Charles Thomson, the Sunderland Captain, recently celebrated their golden wedding.

Tow Browell is Evertons only ever present forward.

Cuggy and Holley have had a busy time, for within six days they travelled a thousand miles to take part in three matches.

Joe English is giving every satisfaction at Bramall Lane, and Benson may have some difficulty in getting his place back.

Beale, who guards the Manchester United goal, is one of the best goalkeepers of the day. He is safe without being showy. That is the best class of goalkeeper.

Alex. Bell, the ex-Manchester United half back, is showing such fine form for Blackburn that Bradshaw will find it difficult to oust him.

Walden, of the Spurs, was simply bewildering in his manipulation of the ball in the Pros. vs. Amateur match.

Bulcock, the Crystal Palace back, and Whittaker, of Exeter City, were born in the same street in Burnley.

Cook, the Oldham Athletic full back, has converted 24 out of 25 penalty kicks which he has taken.

"Davy" Stokes seems to have dropped out of existence. Only Donaldson can explain this.

Fairfoul, of Liverpool, is now doing something towards the great name he made in Scotland.

Celtic have figured nineteen times in the Glasgow Cup final.

Only six clubs have earned the title of League Champions in twenty-three years.

Rangers have made their 17th appearance in the Glasgow Cup final.

It took Queen's Park to November last year to register two wins, but his year they have secured them already.

Strange that both the qualifying cup winners and Scottish Junior Cup winners should fall in the first round this year.

It looks as though Third Lanark had struck their true form at last. These draws at Falkirk and Parkhead are really creditable performances. Keep it up, Thirds.

Hearts have already met four of the six Glasgow clubs and have taken seven of the eight points at stake. Looks like championship form.

Sunderland go in for size and weight. Their forwards and halfbacks are big, while their backs, Gladwin and Ness, are the tallest in the League.

W. Stewart of Hamilton, Accas., is the youngest player in First League. He is only 17 years old.

A number of well-known Juniors will go over to the seniors when their club gets knocked out of the Scottish Cup.

Receive $400 For Draft Of Harry Brant

The Peterborough Baseball Club will receive no money from the drafting of Centre-fielder Dave Hilliard by Toledo. Hilliard was the property of the Decatur Three-I League club, and although the management of the Decatur Club had neglected certain formalities, and the Petes had some reason to claim the draft money, morally the player belonged to Decatur and the $500 reverts to that club.

For Harry Brant, drafted by Chattanooga, the local club receives $400, the Class A draft price

THE ADVENT OF McCAFFERY MEANS MUCH TO THE LEAGUE

The Hamilton Spectator says:

Hamilton baseball fans have taken a great deal of interest in the announcement that James J. McCaffery, president of the Toronto Baseball Club, is likely to become interested in the Hamilton Baseball Club, purchasing the interests at present held by George Lee and John Burns, both of Toronto. The fact that such an experienced baseball man as McCaffrey thinks so well of this city as to pay out $5,000 hard cash for a two-thirds interest in the club is proof positive that Hamilton is regarded by those who should know as a real good ball town. It also is taken to mean that the "dog days" for the Hamilton club are over, and that the local fans will be given a run for their money with a good team to represent them and a proper place in the league standing at the end of the season. E. J. McCafferty, business manager of the Toronto club, who arrived in Hamilton on Monday to look into the local situation, is still here, and announced this morning that President McCaffery would arrive in Hamilton to-morrow. McCafferty has reported favourably to his employer, and there is every assurance to-day that the Toronto magnate will exercise the option which he holds on the Lee-Burns interests, inside of a couple of days.

Strong as the local fans are for the proposed change in the ownership of the local club, their feeling in the matter is not a patch to that which is to be encountered among the various Canadian League club owners. Hamilton should be the best city in the circuit and has always been counted upon to hold up its own end and also do much toward carrying the smaller towns. Last year this city made a showing which was little better than that made by the poorest cities in the league, with the result that the league clubs all suffered. The causes which made the local club an unprofitable one in the past two seasons had their effect on the visiting clubs as well as the home club. This is evident when it is stated that the visiting clubs drew down over $3,000 less for their share of the gate receipts for 1913 than they did in 1912. This proves very conclusively that the time for a change was ripe, long overdue.

PETERBOROUGH TO BE REPRESENTED

Mr. Fred Trebilcock will represent the Peterborough Baseball Club at the meeting of the Canadian League in Toronto to-morrow, President Denham being unable to go. The principal business to come up is the proposal to transfer the Berlin and Guelph franchises to Erie, Pa., and Niagara Falls, N.Y. No action can be taken until the annual meeting in December, but the magnates will discuss the project from all its angles.

Guelph Will Hold Franchise

GUELPH, Oct. 29.—Relative to the story printed in The Mail and Empire to the effect that at the Canadian League meeting on Friday, Guelph and Berlin would be voted out, President Mahoney, of the Guelph Maple Leafs, laughed at it. He stated most emphatically to-day that the Guelph franchise would remain here just as long as the people wanted it, and that no vote of the league could take it away. He expressed the opinion that some soreheads at Ottawa and London, where the clubs went many hundreds of dollars over the salary limit in an endeavour to put a winning team in the field, are the ones who are trying to cause all the trouble, but that their efforts would fail. A strong company of local gentlemen are getting behind the team here. A manager for 1914 has all but been signed up, and a good one, too, and the fans here can rest assured that they will be given better baseball than ever next year.

The fact that J. J. McCaffery of Toronto, has become a part owner of the Hamilton franchise meets with much approval in this city, as, with three strong teams at Hamilton, London and Ottawa, the league will be better than ever. There is not the slightest chance of Niagara Falls, N. Y., or Erie, Pa., being included in the Canadian League in 1914, and Guelph and Berlin will have teams that will make them all get out and hustle.

HOCKEY

The executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club will meet to-morrow night at 7:15 in the Oriental Hotel. Every member is asked to be present

HALLOWE'EN GAMES

Can Win Early Marriages.

Three tin cups partially filled with water are balanced on the small ends of three funnels, which are placed in a row on the floor about two feet apart. Over these cups one after another each member of the party must leap in turn.

Whoever succeeds in leaping over all three cups without knocking any of them off will make an early marriage.

The person who knocks over one will marry when not so young.

The marriage of the one who tips over the cups will be deferred until late in life, and she who tips them all over will not marry at all!

To guard against wet feet very little water should be put in the cups; only enough to make the players careful about tipping them over.

DUCKING FOR APPLES.

A tub nearly filled with water and containing several apples, with short stems, should be placed on a chair or low table.

One at a time, go to the tub with arms folded behind, and try to catch the apple between your teeth. If you don't get the apple the first time you have two more trials.

The lucky apple grabber is rewarded with a prize.

MIRROR GAME.

Take a candle and go along into a dark room to a looking-glass; eat an apple before it, and some traditions say you should comb your hair all the time; the face of the one you will marry will be seen in the glass, as if peeping over your shoulder.

P.S.—If you're a wise guy you will be on the job when your best girl starts out with the mirror.

Needle Game.

Take a greased needle and float it in water. First lay on the water a bit of very thin tissue paper and place the needle on it. In a short time the paper becomes wet and sinks to the bottom, leaving the needle floating on the water. Owing to a phenomenon called capillarity, the needles behave very curiously. Some run to the edge of the dish and stick there, while some rush together and cling together. The needles should be named two at a time for boys and girls known to the company. Whether their lives are to run together will be indicated by the course of the needles.

Melted Lead.

Each girl holds a door key, while she pours melted lead through the handle of the key into a pan of cold water.

If the lead assumes the shape of a sword or gun, the girl will marry a soldier; again traces of a ship may be seen, then a sailor she will win; a plow suggests a farmer; a book, a professor, or perhaps a minister; and when the lead forms only drops the gentle inquirer will not marry.

Fun for Grown-Ups.

The light the "ghostly fire" produces is rather unearthly, and may affect some timid children unpleasantly, hence it is more adapted to older children's Hallowe'en parties.

Salt and alcohol are put in a dish, with a few raisins, and set on fire. As soon as the flames leap up everybody clasps hands and gaily dance around the table upon which burns the mystic fire. The laughing eyes and lips look in strange contrast to the pale faces of their owners, from which the greenish light takes every vestige of colour.

The dance is not prolonged for it is each person's duty before the fire is spent to snatch from the flames the raisins put in the dish.

This can be done, if one is careful, without as much as scorching the fingers.

Cartage Tariff To Be Lowered

Downward instead of upward changes in cartage tariff for heavy shippers will be the real result of the change in the cartage regulations of the big trunk railways at the first of the year, according to local freight agents. The main change in the cartage system will be in the accounting end of the business, the clerical work, now looked after by the railroads, being taken over by the companies themselves. It is asserted, however, that the same lines of credit to responsible firms and the same system of accounting will be continued with the difference that it will be the cartage concerns and not the railway corporations that will send out the bills and make the collections.

The tendency of the new tariffs will be for a lower rate for heavy solid freight, the only increases being on what is technically termed "loads of wind." In this latter class are furniture and other bulky articles that have little weight. They are being hauled now at a loss, it is claimed, and the change will only be a better equalization of rates on heavy, compact freight and big, bulky, light freight.

THIS MORNING'S SNOW ONLY A GENTLE HINT

Anticipation gleamed in the coal baron's eye this morning when the Weather Man turned on a light fall of snow, by way of a reminder that winter is knocking on the coal bin. It was one of those gentle hints, handed out in a spirit of kindness, but it conveyed the idea that the next time the snow faucet is turned open old Man Winter will be given a better chance to show his wares.

"Beautiful weather," smiled the coal man to the dry goods merchant.

"Pretty fair, but we can stand it a little colder yet. Business has been spurred considerably but give us a good cold spell and you'll see things move."

"I should worry," remarked the novelty merchant who joined the trio at that stage. "To-morrow is Hallowe'en and we've been selling a big bunch of Hallowe'en favours, and novelties, and Friday should be a big day."

Every body is looking forward to a full stocking, and even the labourer is willing to withdraw like the bear to his winter quarters after an active summer.

HOT ELECTION IN SOUTH BRUCE

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WALKERTON, ONT., Oct. 30.—Indications point to a heavy vote in South Bruce to-day despite the wretched condition of the roads. Directly after the opening of the polls in Walkerton, John Voght, a hotelkeeper, expressed himself as so confident of the defeat of the Liberal candidate as to be willing to bet any sum up to $1,000. The Liberals promptly stepped forward and accepted the challenge, and $500 was produced. Messrs. Traux and Cargill, the Liberal and Conservative candidates respectively, to-day expressed themselves as well satisfied with the way the vote was coming out and both seemed well confident of the result. Foul play is being very carefully watched for by both sides. Most of the heavy contingent of speakers who have been concentrated in the riding during the last fortnight, have departed and left the matter in the hands of the voters. About 60 automobiles are hard at work in the riding in behalf of Mr. Traux, and almost as many for Mr. Cargill. There are 50 polling sub-divisions in South Bruce and two motor cars were stationed at almost every poll. To-day the real rulers of the land ride in luxury from their farms to the polling places and back. It is the one occasion when an automobile is at their free disposal

NAVIGATION SEASON

Below is given a list of the dates on which the lift lock has been opened and closed, at the beginning and end of the various seasons of navigation. They are interesting in that they give an approximate idea of the length of the navigation seasons of the various years.

BANQUET AT Y.M.C.A.

Last night Mr. Hainsworth's Bible Class held a most enjoyable banquet, social evening and Bible Study period. There were twenty-eight enthusiastic members present, at 6:45 o'clock, when they sat down to do justice to the good things that had been provided with such prodigality.

A reading by Mr. Grant, of the firm of Grant and Thorpe, and a recitation by Donald Loucks, were two numbers of the programme very warmly received.

After a pleasant social time the class settled down to study at 7:30 o'clock. Herbert Taylor read an interesting paper on the "Origin of Hinduism," and E. Brown gave a brief speech in which he dealt in an excellent manner with the subject, "How Religion Enters Inteo the Affairs of Life."

The subjects of "Caste System," "Life of Hindu Woman," "Transmigration of Souls," "Worship of Animals," "Penance and Religious Suicide," were also discussed.

Next Wednesday the class will study "Buddhism."

OYSTERS AS FOOD

I know of no other food that is so universally delicious and can be served in so many different, palatable ways, as the oyster. It is good in a scallop—better in a stew—and, best of all, in the shell. It is fine at luncheon, fine before dinner and fine for supper. Fine to eat when entertaining a friend, fine to eat when you are alone. It is fine to eat when you are hungry, and fine to eat when you are not.

The best oysters of commerce today are cultivated in beds under sanitary conditions that make them especially nutritious, healthful and appetizing, and, with the price of living going up, it behoves the economical housekeeper to pay some attention to oysters as an article of diet during the winter months.

The California oysters have a distinctly metallic taste, more like those from England. They are very small, indeed, and for this reason are the subject of one of the bon mots of the late William Travers.

"A friend of mine," he used to say, "went west for the first time with a carfull of enthusiastic Californians than whom there are no greater lovers and boomers of their 'native heath" in the United States.

"All the way out they told of the wonderful gold and silver mines, of the great redwood trees, on the stumps of which a hundred people might banquet, of the greatest citrus crops in the world ando ther 'biggest' things that could only be found in California. Arriving in San Francisco, the party decided to have some oysters and one of the Californians ordered a bushel 'raw!'

"'Gosh,' ejaculated my friend, in admiration, 'they are as big eaters as they are liars.'"

Word has been received that Ellen Willis, relict of the late James Leach, passed away at the home of her son, Mr. Jas. Henry Leach, at Matawatchan, Ont. At the time of her death she was in her 79th year. For several years she has made her home in Keene with her daughter, Mrs. John McFarlane, and last June she made known a strong desire to spend the rest of her life at her old Matawatchan home with her son. She was a native of Ireland, and came to this country when she was nine years of age. In the year 1835 she was united in marriage to James Leach and for many years they lived happily together until death called the husband. They had a family of ten children, three of whom died when very young, five daughters and two sons survive, Mrs. John McFarlane, Keene; Mrs. Dr. Vanliwen, Watertown, N.Y.; Mrs. E. Wilson, of Peterborough, Ont.; Mrs. David Boyle, Lanark; Mrs. Stewart Babcock, Matawatchan, Ont.; George Leach, at Moyie, B.C., and J. Henry Leach, Matawatchan, Ont. Mrs. Leach was a member of the Methodist Church and her life was a beautiful example of devotion and love. She leaves behind her a vast number of friends to mourn her loss.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

We may look for some reactionary tendencies on the stock market. We would regard such as buying opportunities, but think the short interest is trying to release shorts by attacking the list. The raids fail to bring out any stocks, if this continues for a short time the bears crowd will climb after stocks to be released from their position. The favourable speech from the leader of the Interstate Commerce Commission relating to freight rates is regarded as a bull card and should the eastern lines get higher rates, a big bull market could easily be started. We think Rdg., U.P. and A.C.P. will be leaders. We believe S.P., G.Q., N.P., B.O. and St. Paul are excellent purchases on all recessions. The absorption of the copper issues is considered high class

ELLIOT'S

OBITUARY

MRS. FRED BISSONNETTE.

The death occurred this morning shortly after nine o'clock of Mrs. Fred Bissonnette, at her late residence, 478 Elm Street, after an illness of some weeks' duration. The deceased was forty years of age and was the daughter of Mrs. A. Kennedy of Lakefield, her maiden name having been Mary Kennedy. She was married twenty years ago to her now sorrowing husband, who with three sons and two daughters, are left to mourn her loss. She was a woman of many estimable qualities and her death will be deeply regretted by a host of friends. Her mother, two brothers and four sisters also survive her.

The funeral announcement will be found in another column.

PUT AWAY FOR THE WINTER

The road roller has been locked away for the winter and the stone crushing operations have ceased. The street paving has reached the crossing stage and the sewer construction activities will soon be called off. The weather man is fickle and must be served.

Make Hockin Responsible.

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—Herbert S. Hockin was held to share with John J. McNamara the whole responsibility for the dynamite plots, by attorneys who argued for the other convicted men before the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday.

Hockin, sentenced to six years' imprisonment at Leavenworth, is the only one of the thirty-three men convicted at Indianapolis last December, who is serving out his term without appealing. During the trial he was accused of betraying his co-conspirators and was abandoned by the other defendants.

BY-LAW IS PASSED

St. Catharines Votes to Take Hydro-Electric Power

THE COMPANY DIDN'T FIGHT

ST. CATHARINES, Oct. 31.—By the overwhelming vote of 715 to 48, the property owners of St. Catharines yesterday carried the Hydro-electric enabling bylaw and declaring in favor of the money bylaw for an expenditure of $116,000 for a stepping down plant and distributing system by a majority of 626.

The vote was rather small. The Dominion Power & Transmission Co. made no attempt to fight the issue whatever. Had there been an organized contest it is generally believed that the majority would have been still greater. Only a short time ago the ratepayers turned down the bylaw to grant a three years' renewal of the street lighting contract to the company, the negative majority being 369. The ratepayers chose this course in the face of a reduction of the company's rates to private consumers from 7 cents to 5 cents per kilowat hour. This means that the people will still continue to pay 2 cents more per hour to the company until the Hydro system is ready for use, which the engineers estimate will be eight months.

The ratepayers carried another bylaw by a majority of 680 to grant partial exemption from taxation to Lord & Burnham, an American firm, which will at once begin the erection of a Canadian branch factory here at a cost of $75,000 for the manufacture of steel greenhouses, steam boilers and other equipment.

Beats Jacob For Patience.

MONTREAL, Oct. 31.—After being engaged for forty years Miss Evelyn Smithers, aged 76, of Glasgow, has decided to marry her fiance, J. E. Campbell of Winnipeg, aged 82.

Miss Smithers arrived here yesterday morning on the Virginian en route for Winnipeg.

Hitherto Miss Smithers, who became engaged to Mr. Campbell in Scotland, has been afraid to cross the ocean and put the marriage off from year to year in the hope that Mr. Campbell, who is a grocer in Winnipeg, would make enough money to justify his retiring to his old home for the rest of his days.

Recording Secretary— Harold Lawrence.
Financial Secretary—H. Bacon.
Conductor—J. Dwyer.
Warden—Chas. Hadley.
Treasurer—Harry Carveth.

The charter will remain open until the next meeting, which will be held on Monday, Nov. 10th. The organization embraces all lines of the woodworking trade.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

Balak and Balaam. Num. xxii:1—xxiii:10.

Golden Text—A double minded man is unstable in all his ways. Jas. 1:8.

(1.) Verses 1-4—Where were the Israelites at this time?

(2) What made King Balak and his people, the Moabites, so much afraid of Israel?

(3). What had been the success of Israel in overcoming the opposition to their march to the promised land of Canaan?

(4.) How do you justify Israel for killing all those who objected to their marching through their lands?

(5.) Verses 5-7—When Balak saw that there was but little chance to overcome Israel with physical force what plan did he then adopt?

(6.) Who was Balaam and what was his character?

(7.) Has any person power to either help or hurt another by exerting merely mental influence?

(8.) Why would you say or not that the old-time wizards and witches, or any others to-day who claim occult power to hurt or help others, are deceivers?

(9.) What is the difference between so called new thought people, who claim they can mentally "treat" the sick or unsuccessful, and bring to them health, or prosperity, and the old time wizard?

(10.) Would you say or not that Balaam possessed the power which Balak thought? Why?

(11.) Verses 8.14—Can a man be other than good and true who, before making a promise, gets direction from God? Why?

(12.) Would you say that revelations from God in those days were confined to the Israelites, or in these days to the people called Christians? Why?

(13.) On what ground did Balaam refuse to curse the Israelites?

(14) Verses 15-21—What useful lesson is there for us in Balak's persistence, who, notwithstanding Balaam's refusal, presses him again with a stronger appeal than the first time?

(15.) What effect did the offer of a big bribe have upon Balaam?

(16.) Having had from God a definite answer to his question, ought Balaam to have consulted him again? Give your reasons.

(17.) Why did God conditionally permit Balaam to go with these men seeing that was not his first best plan?

(18.) Verses 22-30—What was there in Balaam's action which merited the anger of God?

(19.) Would you say that this story of the ass, speaking to Balaam, is literal history, or an allegory, or a dream?

(20.) Verses 31-35—When a man's preferences are opposed to God's will and that has blinded his eyes so he does not see God is opposing him, is he as guilty as if he did see?

(21) Verses 36-41—Balak, in his reproof of Balaam, seems to assume that promotion to "honour" is the chief thing. Wherein was the wrong?

(22) Chapter xxiii:1-10—If we are intent on doing wrong what does prayer or any religious ceremony avail?

(23) "If God be for us who can be against us?"

Lesson for Sunday, Nov. 9, 1913. Abstinence for the Sake of Others. Rom. xiv 7-21.

ORME

HUERTA IS ELECTED

Returns Coming In Show Him at Head of Poll

PRESSURE WIDELY ALLEGED

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 31.—With the election of Gen. Victoriano Huerta and Gen. Aureliano Blanquet almost a foregone conclusion, according to the official returns, the question as to what Washington proposes to do is keeping the foreign residents and the majority of Mexicans in a state of painful suspense. On the surface at least the administration, is giving little consideration to the subject, seemingly taking the ground that the Mexican people have declared in favor Huerta's continuance in the Presidency.

Although it is openly charged in many quarters that it was official pressure that resulted in the rolling up of the majorities for Huerta and Banquet, which are now being officially reported from all parts where the election forms were observed, the fact remains, and it is pointed out that there is no possibility of going back to the returns, as there is no thought that any other candidate polled nearly enough votes to place the Huerta-Blanquet ticket in jeopardy.

In view of Washington's previous representations on the subject, the next move of the American Government is awaited here with no little misgiving.

Many Americans have already packed their portable belongings preparatory to flight and are facing the necessity of leaving their household effects. The inadequate storage facilities are already over-taxed and most of those who contemplate flight expect to leave their homes in charge of Mexican caretakers, as the only alternative.

U. S. Plans Made.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 31.—President Wilson has formulated his plan of action. It will be made operative just as soon as President Wilson receives a definite statement from Mexico City as to the results of the elections held last Sunday, and what are the intentions of Gen. Victoriano Huerta, dictator of Mexico.

No formal note will be issued by the President. When he is ready to launch his new policy he will do so, and the action taken will be all the notification the world will receive.

It is said the President will make it known to Gen. Huerta that unless he resigns and in this way make it possible for the selection of someone for provisional president who will be acceptable to both the Cientifico (Porfirio Diaz and Huerta party) and constitutionalists (Carranza and his followers) the United States will take such steps as will deprive Huerta of his power.

President Wilson will also probably obtain an agreement from both factions in Mexico to an armistice pending the holding of a constitutional election which shall be safeguarded by supervision by the United States.

The alternative is to lift the embargo on the revolutionists from obtaining arms and ammunition in the United States, and to recognise the revolutionists as a de facto government.

Plot to Kill Huerta.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 31.—A thorough search is being made by the police of the Federal capital for further evidence of an alleged plot against the life of Provisional President Huerta, disclosed to the authorities by two women Wednesday night. The women denounced several men who, they declared, had offered them $500 to induce Gen. Huerta to visit them, so that the plotters could have an opportunity of assassinating him.

The women asserted that they had declined to participate in the conspiracy.

Several men have been arrested.

"Keep Out." Official Warning.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31. — Americans desiring to go to Mexico will receive no assistance or encouragement from the administration. This became known yesterday when President Wilson declined to grant the request of Representative Mann of Illinois, Republican leader in the House, that the U. S. Sugar Co. be permitted to send a number of engineers, chemists and other employes to its plantations at Topolohampo Bay on the next Government supply vessel going down the Pacific coast.

U. S. Will Protect French.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31. — Acting Secretary Roosevelt yesterday instructed Rear Admiral Cowles, commanding the American squadron on the west coast of Mexico, to proceed as far as he deemed it practicable in protecting French colonists, said to be in peril in San Ignacio, in Lower California. Earlier instructions by the State Department were based on information that the French colony was in San Ignacio, Sinaloa, but it became known yesterday that the refugees who desire protection are in Lower California and that the nearest seaport is Santa Rosalie, across the gulf from Guaymas, where the armored cruiser California, Admiral Cowles' flagship, is now stationed.

Two Quebec Bye-Elections.

MONTREAL, Oct. 31.—The bye-elections in Huntingdon and St. John, for the Provincial Legislature, will be held on Nov. 2 and 14, respectively.

"SAFETY FIRST" G. T. R. MOTTO

The Grand Trunk System has issued broadcast the following pledge, neatly printed, in colors on a large card, in relation to the safety first campaign, which is now being vigorously pushed, both in the United States and Canada:

"I will railroad according to the book of rules. I will do all in my power to guard against unsafe acts on my part. If I see a fellow-employee doing his work in an unsafe manner, I wil speak to him as a friend and use m ymoral influence to have him perform his duties in the safest possible manner. I will remember and practice at all times safety first."

At the foot of this card is this statement:

"Eighty-three per cent. of all persons injured on railroads are you men who work for the roads. Sixty-six per cent. of all preventable injuries sustained by you are due to unsafe practices, which you could avoid.

VICTORIA AVENUE IS PAINFUL

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I was just reading a piece in Thursday's Examiner that it gives our Worthy Mayor, Mr. Bradburn a pain when he looks at the road on Homewood avenue, it would give him a bit more pain if he could come with Mr. Buller and look at Victoria Avenue road. It is a disgrace. I should think when they gave it the name of one of our most beloved women that they would try and make it look beautiful. I have lived on Victoria avenue for seven long years and all I have seen done to it is dump gravel with large stone so that the store-keeper gets a pain every time you ask him to send your goods up. Perhaps Alderman Buller will see to fixing now.

"THE MEDIATOR"

By ROY NORTON

"I want to tell Channel," he said to himself, "but if I haven't got a real bunch of pay, the old codger would be so fussed up and disappointed. I reckon he'd never get it. Nope! Guess I'll wait a day or two. The only one I'll tell will be Maggie, or my pardner, if I come across him. But say, David Elisha Henley! It does look as if things were comin' your way, and that you've got a piece of ground that might make you pretty comfortable for the rest of your born days!"

He worked until later than usual, with all the zest that a man gives when he has something to work for, and the stake is large, and every shovel of dirt promises to bring him to wealth. He experienced that thrill that never wears out, of finding a pay streak whose richness can be no more than conjecture, but which holds all the allurement of possibility. He threw the dirt carefully to one side in a new dump, and sometimes scanned each shovelful before heaving it upward. He hummed jubilant songs, and did not heed the sweat that trickled from his face in his hurried effort.

When he heard an annoyed shout from across the gulch, he had again to wrestle with a desire to break the news of his find to the old man who had been the means of bringing him to the gulch; but with that thankful thought, he laid down his shovel gladly and washed himself in the stream after shouting: "Comin'! Be there in a minute. Didn't think it was so late!"

Usually he grumbled somewhat, in a whimsical way, because Channel had come to take it for granted that he was to get his meals at the tent; but to-night he went in a more complaisant spirit, and "spread himself" on the meal. He opened cans of every variety. He got out a clean salt sack for a table spread. He gave the plates an extra swabbing, so that they might shine. He was jocose in his manner.

The old man loked at him rather wistfully, as if there was something of youth about him that he envied. He, too, had worked hard, and was tired. It was with extreme reluctance that the prospector at last told him he was going over to the Canada Hill that night, and wanted to go alone. There was not the usual outburst. Channel sat and hung his head, and was silent.

"You don't mind, do you, Channel?" Lish asked, suddenly smitten in the conscience by the veteran's dejection.

"It don't seem to make much difference whether I does or doesn't," Channel replied, and then, with something approaching a break in his voice, added: "Son, I'm gettin' old. I didn't take time to think about it till the last day or so. Nobody seems cryin' very hard to have me around any more. You're a-tryin' to get rid of me. I suspected it the other night when you run off that-a-way."

Lish had to grin to himself at this remarkable dislay of acumen. Channel was really beginning to suspect there were times when he was not wanted. And so, again, Lish benevolently lied:

"Want you? Sure I want you! But I got to go in such a hurry to-night, that I'm goin' to hit the trail hard, and I sort of thought maybe you'd be too tired after such a hard day's work to want to go. You won't be lonesome, will you?"

Channel was forced to admit that he would be lonesome, also that he was not too tired to go if he thought he could be of any use. In fact, he threatened to go just to show the rising generation that he was just as good a man, when it came to hiking, as any of them; but in the end he decided, perhaps, it would be better if he went down to his cabin and patched his overalls that had lacked attention since Mrs. Higgins had been taken ill.

Lish had not seemed to be in "such an all-fired hurry," nevertheless, when he took his way down the road. He observed with satisfaction that the moon was beginning to assume a larger rotundity, and was in quite a whirl of general delight. He fancied to himself the joy that Channel would feel when he told that the gulch had been proven good, and that the pay was merely on the side which had not been prospected. Channel could come up to the upper end of his claim and pick it up without delay. Harry Martin would be happy because it would add to his riches. His brother would be happy for the same reason, and Lish himself would be happiest of all for having been the bearer of such good news. Peaceful Hill seemed to be all that was desirable, after all.

He found Maggie, in a contented frame of mind; for Mrs. Higgins was improving, the doctor felt more confident, and the proprietor of the hotel had told Murdock that they were getting along all right, and that the Widder Callahan had not spilled a bowl of soup on anyone for three whole days. So, with this report of improvement all along the line, Lish proceeded to take Maggie into his confidence.

"First thing I want to tell you is this," he said. "It's about Mrs. Marthy. Did you ever hear her mention anything about a feller named Bill?"

Maggie frowned thoughtfully, and shook her head. Lish appeared genuinely distressed.

"I sort of hoped while she was a-ravin', and tearin', in deleerium tremens, or whatever kind they have of this-here typhoid, she'd recollect somethin' about Bill," he said dolefully.

"Come to think of it, she talks a heap about Willie," Maggie said.

Lish slapped his knee. "That's him. Don't you see? That's him. She's a-callin' that big mucker Bill, Willie. That shows how much she loves him. Willie's her name for him. Everybody else calls him Bill, unless they've got it in for him for somethin' or another, then they call him somethin' else. I tell you, Marthy likes that feller yet, and we'll get 'em together again."

Maggie turned and stared at him. He remembered, for the first time, that he had not told her who Willie was.

"Bill Higgins is her man," he said. He's one of the finest fellers that ever walked in gum boots. He's a great big feller, and everybody liked him till he took to fondlin' and caressin' old Mister Bourbon too much; then he turned into a rip-roarin', rip-snortin', rip-shootin', hell-bent-for-leather sort of a pest. I had to shoot him once myself."

The girl shrank away from him a trifle, and edged farther over on the bench at this matter-of-fact assertion. He hastened to correct his bad impression.

"Just as friends, you understand. Not wantin' to kill him, nor nothin' like that. Just a friendly sort of a shot which punctured his right shoulder and put him plumb out of business for a while."

He looked at her appealingly, and said: "Well, then what?"

"Why you see, that was after him and Marthy had split up. He got so bad she had to shed him. Then, after I'd pinked him, I used to go round to the hospital and sit with him just for company. He was sure some sick man. Then one day, bein' sort of weak, he lets louse and tells me all about Marthy, and how she was the best woman that ever lived, and if she's been there they wouldn't be no need for a nurse to come around and maul his shoulder every time they fixed the bandages. 'She was that tender,' says Bill, blubberin' like a kid, 'that she could take my boots off when I was only half-shot without wakin' me up.' Then he'd say: 'At last I got to be too rotten for such a angel to mix with, so she up and hiked, an' since then I ain't been the same man. I've been worser.'"

He stopped to roll a cigarette, and did not seem to observe that Maggie had again come closer. He took three or four puffs, and continued his tale.

"I see he was all broke up over this woman, and I was sorry for him. I've always been a sympathetic, soft-hearted sort of a cuss. 'Bill,' says I, 'you make feel orful bad. When I hear the way you treated that nice woman, I'm right sorry I didn't shoot the top of your head off so's to put you out of your misery. I reckon I'll have to do it yet, because I'll just naturally keep hankerin' to do it until some day I'll get my nerve up and do it right.' That didn't seem to make him feel better. Some men are real ungrateful."

He turned toward her so that she could see his mild face, and lowered his voice to an awe-struck mumble.

"Would you believe it?" he asked. "That feller, Bill Higgins, come out of the hospital and went to work! Yes, sir, went right to work! And he ain't touched a drop of anything in goin' on two years, and he's such a good miner that now he's bossin' a whole bunch of men, and him and me's just as good friends as ever you saw. He wanted me to stay and work with him, but I ain't much of a man for havin' any bosses around, so I told him I guessed I'd have to hike. Well, he'd found out some way that his wife was over here in Peaceful, and he was just eatin' his heart out for her. I tried to get him to write again, but he said he'd done her so much dirt, and made so many promises, and busted 'em all, that he was ashamed of himself, and that it would'nt do no good. 'They ain't nobody in the world could make Marthy believe I've quit boozin', and am tryin' to do the right thing,' he'd say when we'd be talkin' in the evenins, like this. And I gathered they'd been right happy when they was first married, and Bill was just a plain roughneck, workin' along and tryin' to get ahead. So, when I left, I didn't tell him where I was comin'. I wanted to get Marthy to give him another show. He'd make mighty good now, and she'd forget all about rip-snortin' Bill. He'd just be Willie again. And there ain't nothin' finer in this old world than bein' just Willie to some good woman like Marthy Higgins."

He sat quietly for a minute, and then, as if by afterthought, added, with considerable pathos in his voice: "And they aint no woman can beat her makin' dried-apple pies, is there?"

"Well, why doesn't the fool write?" Maggie exclaimed, ignoring Lish's last question. "I'm sure if he was any good he'd take a chance. Asking a woman once and then getting scared to try again is no good."

The prospector shook his head.

"That ain't the way to do it," he declared. "The best way is for you to just keep makin' Marthy think of him til she wants him; then, when she does that, we'll up and send for him."

Perhaps that is better," she assented slowly, with feminine intuition.

They sat for some minutes on the bench in silence, and then he abruptly turned toward her again.

"Now about me," he said. "I've got somethin' to tell you, Maggie. I've struck what looks like pay over there on the gulch. It's sure promisin' ground. It's a cinch it'll make me about all the money I need if it's what I think it is."

He had to wait until her joy was subsided, which he did with quiet impatience.

"And what I wanted to say, Maggie, was this," he went on, in the same quiet voice. "If that ground shows up right, you'd be sort of willin' to marry me, wouldn't you?"

He could not see that her face had flushed for an instant, and that her fingers locked themselves together, and then, with quick change, unlocked, and that a dull indignation overrode the happiness of his proposal. She jumped to her feet.

"What made you say that?" she demanded. "Do you think your striking pay would make me marry you? Humph! I've had a dozen chances to marry men with mines on this Divide! No, I won't marry you."

He sat and twisted his hat for a moment, then looked helplessly up at her.

"Well, what can I do to make you marry me, Maggie?" he asked, in a forlorn tone. "I sure want you right bad. I been lookin' for you ever since I was born. I've asked you more'n once. Don't you reckon I'll get money enough out of that claim to do for the two of us?"

She did not answer, but stood looking off toward the path of white, where the moon reflected its rays across perpetual snows. He did not understand that she longed for him, and that nothing save the unfortunate reference to possible money had preevnted her from gladly saying "Yes." He did not appreciate that she stood there waiting for him to correct his error. He showed no sign of emotion, and lost his opportunity.

"Well," he said, "I s'pose I'm a sucker for wantin' to marry a real lady like you, Maggie. And you really don't need me, anyhow, because that's a right good job down there at the hotel."

He sighed wearily, and got to his feet. He brightened up.

"You keep on talkin' to Mrs. Marthy," he said. "You and me'll patch that up yet. And just because you won't marry me won't keep me from comin' over here to see you. I'll be moseyin' along now, I guess."

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured his Kidney Trouble

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. F. A. Thomas, of Sudbury Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes: "For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, for suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed, I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few boxes affected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, and in purifing the blood. 25c a box at your druggist's 10

TURKISH VENGEANCE.

It's a Perilous Matter to Endanger the Life of a Sultan.

Within two weeks after the assassination of Mahmud Shefket Pasha, the grand vizier of Turkey, thirty-two men were put to death for taking part in the conspiracy. According to Turkish custom handed down from the time of Mohammed, there is no limit as to the number of lives that may be taken as a penalty for the murder of one man. Even those interested in the remotest degree are liable to the sultan's vengeance. It is not so much the number the ruler of Turkey is authorized to put out of the way, but rather where the line is to be drawn.

The Turks have a story of one of the earlier successors of Mohammed whose life was only endangered because of a rock falling down a declivity near which the sultan was riding with his retinue. Half a dozen of those in charge of the trip were put to death as an ordinary matter of course, then half a dozen more who might have remotely known something about the facilities afforded by the road for killing the sultan. Finally all the members of a secret club or lodge were ordered executed because it was ascertained that one of the responses to a password was "Will you roll down the stone?"

Despite the protestations of the club members that the words had no significance at all with respect to the sultan or the sultan's trip along the road, they were ordered to the scaffold. They numbered 118 in all and died bravely, assuring their executioners to the very last that they were innocent. Later a eunuch who told how the failing of the rock was merely an accident was also put to death for daring to say so.—New York Sun.

Beautifying Berlin.

That Berlin will be a city of from one hundred and twenty-five to one hundred and fifty thousand fifty years hence, is the prediction of Charles W. Leavit, jr., an expert civil and landscape engineer, who has commenced work on a city plan for the future in that city. He bases his prediction upon its growth during the past ten years.

Berlin's chief need at present is a civic centre, and Mr. Leavit's proposed location would give ample room for a city hall square and park, as a breathing spot, with diagonal streets touching six points. On one of the triangles thus created could be located the federal buildings which the Government propose to erect. The location is only five minutes' walk from a union depot, which is to shortly house the C.P.R., G.T.R., and C.N.R. railways.

In an observation tour of the city, the expert saw a splendid opportunity for a park driveway around the city, extending to Bridgeport and Waterloo.

Canadian Lumber Cut.

During the fiscal year of 1912 the lumber production for the Dominion in all the provinces was 4,389,723,000 feet, valued at $69,475,784, which is a decrease of 10.7 per cent. compared with 1911.

Ontario had a cut of 1,385,186,000 feet, valued at $26,774,937; British Columbia is second with 1,313,792,000 feet, valued at $17,738,830; Quebec next with 677,215,000 feet, valued at $10,683,262 and New Brunswick fourth with 449,738,000 feet, valued at $6,042,533.

Spruce was the most valuable timber, the cut being valued at $20,378,853. The white pine cut was second in value, being $19,119,694.

Headache And Heart Trouble

Nervous Prostration of Three Years' Standing Cured a Year Ago by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Anyone who knows the discouragement and despair which accompanies the helplessness of nervous prostration will appreciate the gratitude felt by the writer of this letter.

Mrs. H. C. Jones, Scotch Lake C B., writes: "I suffered from nervous prostration for nearly three years. I had frequent headaches, had no appetite and was troubled with my heart. After consulting two doctors, without obtaining satisfactory results, I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and was completely cured by this treatment. It is nearly a year since I was cured, and I want others to know of this splendid medicine. I now attend to my housework with pleasure and comfort, and am glad to have the opportunity of recommending Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

At least some benefit is bound to be derived from each dose of this great food cure, as day by day it forms new blood, and builds up the system. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

NEW CONVENIENT TRAIN TO WINNIPEG.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

The popularity of Canadian Pacific service, and the excellence of that road's equipment, has ben so greatly appreciated by the travelling public that it has been found necessary to put into service an entirely new Through Standard Express Train between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Commencing Sunday, October 26th, the "Gate City Express" will leave Toronto at 2.30 p.m., and will run daily thereafter, arirving Winnipeg at 8.25 a.m. second morning. The train will consist of the highest-class modern equipment: Observation Compartment Car, Standard Sleeping Cars, Tourist Sleeping Car, Dining Car, First-class Coach and Colonist Car. This will be found the most convenient and best train between Toronto and Winnipeg on account of the daylight departure from Toronto at an hour when the Union Station is not badly congested, and also on account of the early hour of arrival at Winnipeg.

The present "Vancouver Express" will continue to leave Toronto at 10.20 p.m. daily and will consist of the same equipment as the "Gate City Express." This train is the best to take for points west of Winnipeg, but for Winnipeg and east the "Gate City Express" is the right train to travel by.

Full particulars from any Canadian Pacific Agent or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

MECHANICAL SOLDIERS

Danish Engineer Has Invented a Substitute For Men in War

A Danish engineer has invented an automatic soldier, which he claims will do away with most of the dangers of war for the army employing his inventions.

It consists of a steel cylinder enclosed within another cylinder which is embedded in the ground. The fighting power is set in motion by means of wireless telegraphy, the inner cylinder rising to a height of about five feet above the surface of the ground. At the same time an automatic gun fixed in the cylinder opens fire with four hundred bullets in any required direction. The automatic soldiers may be brought into action by an officer at a distance of five miles from the line of defence. Further, it is pointed out that there is no danger of panic.

It is claimed that a few hundred of these steel warriors would suffice to defend a position against the most powerful infantry attack. To stop the murderous shower of bullets the enemy would have to destroy the steel cylinders one by one, which, of course, in active warfare would be a most hazardous proceeding. Danish officers who witnessed experiments declared that the automatic soldiers would serve admirably in certain dangerous positions, where they could very well be substituted for troops.

This kitchen fire in the cottage of Wm. Goodfellow, at Brampton, Cumberland, England, has not gone out for the past 200 years. At least the family history says that is the case. The fuel is peat from the nearby bogs, and as the sun never shines too brightly in that district, the kitchen does not get uncomfortably warm.

Hats were first made by a Swiss at Paris in 1404. When Charles VII. of France entered Rouen in triumph in 1449 he wore a hat lined with red velvet, bearing a rich plume of feathers. Henceforth hats and caps, at least in France, began to take the place of chaperons and hoods. Hats were first manufactured in England by Spaniards in 1510. Very high crowned hats were worn by Queen Elizabeth's courtiers and were again introduced in 1783.

Had to Be Sober.

Last Sunday, says our informant, a bunch of nice young men went through Cleveland asking questions. One of these young men met up with another young man and started his catechism as follows:

"Do you drink?"

"No, sir."

"Why don't you drink?"

"My boss doesn't like it, my customers don't stand for it, and my conscience won't let me."

"Three very wonderful and practical reasons. What's your business?"

"I'm a bartender."

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to flush Kidneys if Back hurts or Bladder bothers

If you have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

Killed by Light.

Those who have studied the strange inhabitants of the Mammoth cave in Kentucky say that the celebrated blind fish from that cavern when placed in illuminated aquaria seek out the darkest places, and it is believed that light is directly fatal to them, for they soon die if kept in a brightly lighted tank. The avoidance of light seems to be a general characteristic of the sightless creatures dwelling in the great cave.

PERSONAL ATTENDANTS OF HIS MAJESTY

How the King's Bodyguard Upon State Occasions is Made Up

The King's bodyguard consists of the Honorable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms and the Yeomen of the Guard. Membership of the former is limited to ex-officers, but retired sergeants are eligible as Yeomen of the Guard.

The Gentlemen-at-Arms were established in the year 1509, and were originally known as "Gentlemen-Pensioners." The qualifications for joining the corps are long and distinguished service in the Regular Army or Marines, and the possession of at least one war medal. At present the number of members is forty-five, two of whom have won the Victoria Cross. The full-dress uniform is of scarlet, with facings of blue velvet.

The Gentlemen-at-Arms and Yeomen of the Guard have the privilege of being in personal attendance upon the Sovereign at the opening of Parliament and other State occasions. Since the time of Guy Fawkes, moreover, a special duty of the latter body has been to search the vaults of Westminster Palace in order to guard against "gunpowder, treason, and plot."

The Yeomen of the Guard are the oldest military organization in the Kingdom, since they date from 1485. The corps consists of eight commissioned officers, who must have held a rank not lower than that of captain, and a number of ex-sergeants. All the members are required to be not less than 5 feet 10 inches high, and to have at least one war medal. The men wear a Tudor uniform and carry a halberd, while the officers are dressed as at the time of the Peninsular War.

Members of the Yeomen of the Guard live in their own houses, but they have an orderly-room at St. James's Palace, as well as a room adjoining it where their uniforms are kept. Each man draws the pension of his previous Army rank, with an extra $250 to $375 a year.

Another body of ex-soldiers are the Warders of the Tower, established in 1509. These men, who are commonly known as "Beef-eaters," are often confused with the Yeomen of the Guard, since they wear a very similar uniform. They are, however, an entirely distinct corps.

Scotland also furnishes the Sovereign with a bodyguard. This is the Royal Company of Archers. They were first raised in 1676. The corps is comprised almost entirely of Scottish noblemen, and among its members are the Duke of Buccleuch and Queensberry, Duke of Roxburghe, the Marquis of Breadalbane, Earl Rosebery, and the Earl of Aberdeen. When the Sovereign happens to visit Holyrood Palace, at Edinburgh, the Archers are required to present him with three barbed arrows.

Although they are not required to discharge any sort of duty, the Military Knights of Windsor wear a picturesque uniform and have certain distinct privileges of their own.

The corps is composed of veteran officers, and to be appointed to it a candidate must be under 73 years of age, a member of the Church of England, and "a gentleman brought to necessity." If single, a candidate must have a private income of $250, and if married an extra $125 for every person dependent upon him. At present the number of Military Knights is seventeen.

The Prince's Orders

Foreign orders have fallen thick on the Prince of Wales. The Prince is in possession of four foreign Orders the Order of the Golden Fleece (conferred upon him by King Alfonso), the French Legion of Honor, the Crown of Wurtemberg, and the Order of the Black Eagle bestowed upon him by the Kaiser of Germany. In his own country the only Order he possesses is the premier one of the Garter.

THE MEANING OF FLAGS

From time immemorial flags have been flown by ships at sea all over the world, but it is only in more recent years that an International Code has been adopted. All the countries of the world now conform to fixed rules about the flying of certain flags, though, of course, each navy has its own secret code for use in war time.

The national flag of any ship, when hoisted upside down, denotes that the ship in question is in difficulties and requires immediate assistance, which any passing ship is required to give, if possible.

The quarantine flag is a plain yellow square, hoisted on the foremast, which indicates that the ship has got an infectious disease on board, or that it has come from an infected port. No person is allowed either to go on board or to leave such a ship until permission is granted by the sanitary authorities of the port.

In all parts of the world a white flag is accepted as a token of peace, a red flag as that of defiance, and a black flag as that of a pirate. A green flag flying from the masthead of a ship or barge at anchor indicates that there is a wreck in the vicinity. The same is denoted by a green buoy placed over the spot.

When a red flag is flying on the foremast it is a sign that the ship has powder, shell, or ammunition on board, and serves as a warning to other ships not to come too near in case of accidents. It is called the danger, or, more commonly, the powder, flag.

The pilot flag consists of a Union Jack with a white border, one-fifth the total width of the flag. When hoisted on the foremast it is a sign that a pilot is required for navigating the ship in dangerous waters.

A white-and-red flag, equally divided horizontally, with the white on top, is carried in any part of the ship where it can be most easily seen to signify that the ship is under command of a qualified pilot and not of the usual captain.

A blue flag, with a wide white border, hoisted on the mast of a vessel in port, signifies that the vessel is about to sail and is used to warn anybody on shore who intends to go on board that starting-time is near. It is called among sailors the "Blue Peter."

SEAL IN NEWFOUNDLAND

An Effort to Commercialize the By-Products Failed

An enthusiastic genius from England who visited Newfoundland promoting a scheme for developing various fishing industries more extensively, advocated the employment of a steamer to follow the sealing fleet, pick up all the carcases, and bring them into St. John's, where the best of the meat might be sold and the remainder converted into fertiliser; but it was pointed out to him that if it would pay a steamer to do this it would pay her very much better to engage in the actual seal hunt, and the scheme thereupon collapsed. The same genius it was who proposed, and actually did put into practice, the experiment of canning flippers and offering them for sale, but it is scarcely necessary to observe that as the appetite for these dainties is somewhat of an acquired taste he has not yet succeeded in inducing even the Island railway to include them in its dining-car menu. At the same time it must not be imagined that there is anything unpleasant or unpalatable in seal flippers, because the contrary is the case. They are excellent nourishing food.

The flipper or the carcase must be eaten fresh to enjoy it at its best, but staleness is not an insuperable obstacle, as may be understood from the fact that the salting of both into barrels for summer consumption is by no means unusual. Just as with beef and other meats the flipper or carcase of an old seal is not nearly so delicate or tender as the younger one, and it becomes rancid through the operation of the oil much quicker. There is, however, an ample number of the flippers of young seals obtainable every year to satisfy all of the local demands, and it would be no exaggeration to say that the sturdy health of the 4,000 Terranovan seafarers who tread the Arctic icefloes in the quest for these creatures is due in a substantial measure to their indulgence in flippers and seal meat, which provides the good red blood and the other elements that make for strength and physical endurance.

Facts in Nature

For centuries it has been known that Nature's most valuable health giving agents for the cure of disease are found in our American forests. Over forty years ago Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N.Y., used the powdered extracts as well as the liquid extracts of native medicinal plants, such as Bloodroot and Queen's root, Golden Seal and Stone root, Cherry bark and Mandrake, for the cure of blood diseases. This prescription as put up in liquid form was called and has enjoyed a large sale for all these years in every drug store in the land. You can now obtain the powdered extract in sugar-coated tablet form of your medicine dealer, or send 50c in one-cent postage stamps for trial box to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y., and tablets will be mailed, postage prepaid.

DR. PIERCE'S
Golden Medical Discovery

The "Golden Medical Discovery" makes rich, red blood, invigorates the stomach, liver and bowels and through them the whole system. Skin affections, blotches, boils, pimples and eruptions—result of bad blood—are eradicated by this alterative extract—as thousands have testified.

Fined For Not Voting.

The outstanding feature of most British elections is the large number of electors who fail to record their vote in some countries voting is compulsory and electors are fined if they do not do their duty as citizens and avail themselves of the franchise.

According to the universal suffrage law of Australia, all those on the register must record their votes, and at the last general election in that country 50,000 electors were fined sums from 8s. 4d. downward because they neglected to go to the polls.

Spain is another country that looks on voting as a national duty, at least in a municipal election. Should a citizen omit to cast his vote his name is published as a defaulter, his taxes are increased by 2 per cent. while if he be in the public service his salary is reduced by 1 per cent. Should he commit the fault a second time he is debarred forever from holding an elective position or an appointment under government.—London Share Moments

Sir Francis Drake Still a Terror.

No public monument is needed to keep alive among Mexicans the memory of Sir Francis Drake's exploits in Central and South America. Travelling in Mexico a few years ago Mr Edward Smith records that he "heard a woman calming a tempestuous child by saying, 'Ah! viene Drake!' (Here comes Drake!) I made minute inquiries and found that it is a common threat to children on the Mexican coast, like unto 'Bony will get you!' or 'The Black Douglas shall get you!' Fancy people still living in terror of seeing Drake's topsails on the horizon."—London Chronicle.

PARALYZED LIMBS

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you knew some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work, and now feel better than I did for 10 years."

The New Name He Fixes on Mr. Borden, Author of a Policy of Tribute and Delay--How He Played Into Hands of Admiralty

LINDSAY, Oct. 31.—Speaking at a Canadian League meeting here tonight, Mr. Arthur Hawkes dealt with the relation of the Admiralty to the Canadian naval situation. He said that the developments of the last year contained salutary warning against the elevation of the military above the civil power. It was a cardinal principle of British Government that the civil arm should always be unquestionably supreme. The soldier and sailor were magnificent servants, but woeful masters of the State. The Admiralty was one of the mechanical departments of the British Government; and, in many respects, was like the transportation department of a railway. The policy of a railway was fixed by the directors. The superintendent of power was consulted as to what he could do from time to time; but not as to why he should do it, or what instructions should be given him.

The method of the Canadian appeal to the Admiralty and the use that had been made of it, had weakened the time-honoured principle and had produced, unintentionally, of course, on the part of the Canadian Government, disquieting effects in Britain as well as in Canada. There had grown up a school of Canadian apologists for delay in deciding on a permanent policy, who argued in effect that Canada should take her policy, not from the British people even, but from a subordinate department.

Admiralty and Contribution.

The Admiralty had tried for many years to fasten a policy of contribution on the self-governing dominions, and would begin again to-morrow if it thought it had a reasonable chance of success. Already official inter-imperial consideration of defence had been removed from the Imperial Conference, which was a collection of Governments, discussing affairs on a basis of national equality to the Imperial Defence Committee, which was a gathering advisory only of the English Prime Minister, and composed chiefly of mechanical experts, whom it was sought to represent as heaven-sent inspirers of policy.

The Admiralty had begun to assume functions that did not belong to it. For instance, when the battleship "New Zealand" was in Vancouver Harbour, her Captain, one of the best commanders in the service, made a speech in which he was instructed by his chiefs to say that the Admiralty would co-operate with whatever policy Canada ultimately decided. No doubt they would, but it was not the place of the captain of a ship, or for the Admiralty, to say so. The captain was in the position of the engineer of a train, with no more to say about the policy behind the movements of his ship than the railway engineer has to say about the policy of his employers. The Admiralty, in commissioning the captain of a ship to give a political promise, was usurping the function of the Government, to whom its duty is that only of a faithful and obedient servant. The message conveyed the implication that if the Admiralty had chosen, it might have said the other thing, which was absurd, and would be subversive of the simplest discipline which the public, through its government, must exercise over the servants of its servants.

How It was Shown.

The high-handed disposition of the Admiralty, of which Mr. Churchill was an appropriate exponent, was exemplified in regard to the Imperial squadron, which was one of the ill-starred schemes that came naturally from those who forgot temporarily the supremacy of the civil arm and who still thought of "colonies" when they spoke of nations. The Imperial Squadron was announced to the British House of Commons last spring—it was to be based at Gibraltar, was to consist of three Canadian ships, one New Zealand vessel and the Malay Dreadnought, which had been wrung from the Straits Settlement Protectorate by methods which were no credit to the British name.

The Imperial squadron was to be available for the North Sea, but was also to shew the flag round the Empire, when the Admiralty thought fit to let us see our own iron. Colonel Allen, the New Zealand Minister of Defence, was in London at the time, entirely on naval business. But he stated publicly that he had no inkling that the New Zealand ship was destined for an Imperial Squadron, until he read Mr. Churchill's announcement in the newspapers. It was pertinent to inquire whether Mr. Borden was as well informed as Colonel Allen was on this important development, reached while Canadian policy was being debated in the Canadian Parliament. Mr. Churchill has achieved unique fame as a complete naval letter writer, and it must have been a singular outbreak of reticent statesmanship which had till now kept the Canadian people from knowing precisely what communications had passed between Ottawa and Whitehall about the Imperial Squadron.

Dominions Kept in Ignorance.

The decision of New Zealand to have and to hold a navy of her own made it more necessary for us to be informed how decisions about Canadian-owned were to be reached. If this keeping of New Zeland and Canada in ignorance as to what was to become of their own vessels was being done in the green tree by the Admiralty, what would it do in the dry, when its methods had been made binding on Britannic nations which were thousands of miles away from London. What had happened to Colonel Allen might happen to others who, like him, would go to London on the naval business of their governments. Mr. Borden's prophecy that friction would arise out of contributions, which was only a prophecy in 1909, has been justified already.

It was obvious that the idea of an Imperial squadron, composed of ships which would speedily become obsolete, like other ships, was intended by the Admiralty to aid in the fixing permanent policies of the young tions. It would be urged as a point of honour, and as keeping up what was mistakenly called a vital form of Imperial solidarity, that the Canadian, New Zealand and Perak ships should be replaced from the source from which the originals came.

It would be rash to assume that the Churchillian behaviour to Colonel Allen had decided the New Zealand action; but it was evident that New Zealand, by her double rejection of battleship contributions and of the arrangement to have her own seas policed from Whitehall, had had enough of the Admiralty as an intimate domestic partner, which seemed to forget that the servant is not above his lord. She would assume her liberty of action, while willing to put her ships into the fight under the most experienced commander.

New Zealand felt the compulsion of destiny to take her own part in the protection of civilisation on the Pacific littorals. She was answering the same instinct which dominated the Australian action, and which was strongly affecting the attitude of British Columbians, to whom Canada's position as a Pacific power was an increasing reality because of the pressure of Oriental immigration. There indeed was a field for the exercise of the true vitality of Canadian nationality. It would be no more pleasing to the fussy little nabobs who write despatches in Whitehall for bigger men to sign and obey than the other basic manifestations of the expansion of British liberty had been in countries which have the temerity to want to be self-governing.

Canada's Duty to Decide.

The thing we had to secure was vigorous action, on a co-operative national basis; rather than the pleasure of publicists in London, who had already begun to deride New Zeland because she would spend her money in her own way, instead of handing it over to the Admiralty. When money was sent to London, it was a sublime manifestation of New Zealand's high Imperial spirit. When it was to be devoted to translating New Zealand's Imperialism into action, by New Zealand flesh and blood and responsibility, it was a dangerous luxury, according to a newspaper whose naval expert is one of the busiest advocates of keeping the "colonies" in leading strings, under the belief that Englishmen who have emigrated owe Englishmen who have not ventured a the ancestral home a financial debt that they will never be able to repay.

The bearing of all this upon the Canadian situation was that the permanent policy should be declared without delay. If we could not make up our minds without another year or two's delay, we were not likely to send up the stock of the Canadian nation as a fighting factor. Mr. Borden must surely realize the danger he stood in of being called "Robert the Unready." It seemed clear that the immediate patriotic duty of the Opposition was to let it be known that the first sign of willingness of the Government to meet the situation that he developed since Parliament rose, on non-partisan lines, and in practical harmony with the other Pacific peoples who are also in the Empire would be met more than half way.

A CHILD'S LAXATIVE IS "SYRUP OF FIGS"

They love to take it and it doesn't harm the tender little stomach, liver and bowels

If your little one's tongue is coated, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

Crime Is Less.

Crime in Canada is on the decrease, according to Col. Sherwood Ottawa, chief of the Dominion police. Up to the present time, 1913 has witnessed only seventeen convictions for murder, as compared with forty in 1912, showing a great falling off in this, the most serious of crimes.

Col. Sherwood says he thinks these facts speak a great deal, not only for the efficiency of Canadian laws, but as showing the effect of the strict enforcement of law is having on the minds of the criminally disposed.

He considers the very rigid regulations to which those entering Canada have to come up to also has much to do in keeping down the increase in crime.

A most important factor in business is advertising, and advertising is simply announcing to the world in an effective way where you are, who you are and what you have to offer in the way of human service or commodity.

KEEPING A BEE FARM

APICULTURE BECOMES MORE PROFITABLE EVERY DAY.

Many Men Have Now Gone Into the Exclusive Production of Honey—Workers Live Only a Few Months But the Queens Survive For a Number of Years—Artificial Comb Has Revolutionized Industry.

Apiculture, as the science and practice of bee-keeping is called, has of late years become a very profitable occupation. It may seem strange to talk of a "bee farm," yet there are many such farms in this country, devoted almost exclusively to the rearing of bees. There are two ways of making a profit out of bees, either by the sale of the honey they produce or by the rearing and sale of the bees themselves.

In order to run a bee farm successfully it is necessary, of course, to become acquainted with the ways and habits of the bees themselves. A hive consists of a queen, drones, and workers. Only one queen to a hive; she will brook no rival, her rule must be absolute. She takes her consort from among the drones, and produces both drones and workers. At the end of the busy season the drones are either killed or turned out to perish as useless encumberances. An average hive contains about 25,000, a large one as many as 50,000. Five thousand bees weigh about a pound when they are charged with honey. The weight of starved bees is hardly perceptible. It sometimes happens, in dispatching them by rail for a journey of several days, they will arrive at their destination either dead or in a very poor condition. This is due to carelessness or inexperience. In buying bees by weight from any distance, allowance should always be made for deterioration in transit, as they consume their own honey.

A farm may, of course, consist of any number of hives. A queen is ready for fertilization from three to five days after birth. The worker bees live only two or three months, but the queens will exist for several years. If a queen should die permaturely, or be lost on leaving the hive, which sometimes happens, the colony insist upon having another queen, and set about nourishing the brood left behind. If more than one queen is raised, then there is trouble among the royal heirs, and they fight among themselves till all but one are exterminated.

At one time bees made their own combs; now they are saved that trouble, for the combs are made for them. The process is very interesting. Beeswax is melted in a metal receptacle and kept hot. Immediately above this, suspended from the ceiling, is a contrivance like a wooden comb, the teeth being strips of wooden board. The latter are plunged three or four times into the molton wax, which, when it sets, can be peeled off in sheets. Having become stiff, it is dipped in warm water to make it limp, and then passed between two metal rollers, which stamp it with the pattern which the bees work upon and draw out, thus forming the cells. Larger and thicker sheets are required for the breeding frames than for the honey frames. The wax sheets are fitted in the hives for the bees to work upon. It says much for their intelligence that they readily accepted this substitute for their own handiwork.

If there should be more than one queen in a hive one of the queens will leave it with a following. They will "swarm" upon a neighboring tree, and must be hived. This is sometimes a ticklish job. The straw arrangement called a "skep" must be taken up the tree and held beneath the branch upon which the bees are swarming and the latter shaken into it. They must then be thrown down in front of the hive, when they will crawl inside. Gloves and a veil may be used while handling bees, although those engaged on a bee farm rarely use either. Either they are proof against stings, or the bees are used to them and do not sting. A bee does not sting unless it is attacked or annoyed. Bad or careless handling might be rewarded with a few stings.

Swarming is principally for breeding, and should be prevented as much as possible in the interests of honey production. The prices of bees differ according to the time of the year. For instance, in May and June a Ligurian queen would cost about $2; in July a trifle less; in August and September less still, while in October and November she migh be got for $1.30. Home-bred queens are cheaper, and could be had for 75 cen A Ligurian swarm, queen included would cost close on $10.

It is curious to note the different shades of wax, which is caused by the different nationality of the bees. Indirectly is the result of the different kinds of flora. The blossom which renders most honey is white clover. Others are apple, pear, cherry, raspberry, whitehorn, sainfoin, lime and buckwheat. When the bees light upon a patch of favorite flowers they work steadfastly at it until they have exhausted the supply of honey. They make straight for it from their hives in a true bee-line. The neighborhood which is best adapted for bees is where there are several kinds of honey-producing plants or trees so that when one goes off another comes on. Some places have only one or two kinds, so that the supply of honey is limited.

The two disease which most affect bees are dysentery and foul brood. Of enemies they have many. The wax moth, who lays eggs in the hives and demolishes wax, pollen, and brood; wasps, who take advantage of their superiority of strength and activity; mice, who eat wax and honey; spiders, who catch bees in their webs; birds, who eat bees, particularly the blue tit, who in winter settles upon the entrance board of the hive and taps with his beak; this brings the bee to the entrance, and the bird promptly snaps it up. Rats will also eat stores, and toads in the windy weather will wait near the hives for returning bees, on the chance of their being blown to the ground, when Mr. Toad soon gobbles them up.

Roses For Restoring Hair.

Roses form the chief ingredient in what is probably the earliest recipe for a hair restorer on record. According to Pliny, "wild rose leaves reduced into a liniment with bear's grease make the hair grow again in most marvelous fashion." Pliny also recommends "ashes of roses as serving to trim the hairs of the eyebrows." Roses figured prominently in several old time strong drinks, such as rosa solis, which consisted of rosewater mixed with aqua vitae and flavored with cinnamon. The favorite morning draft among Elizabethan roisterers was "rosa solis, to wash the molligrubs out of a moody brain."—London Chronicle.

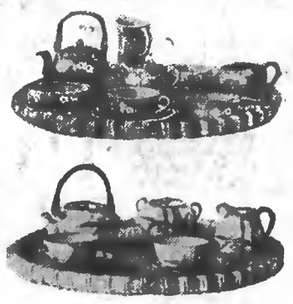
Remote Origin of Alcohol.

No one knows when alcohol was first made. It is commonly taught that it was first distilled by the Arabians about the tenth century, but there is little doubt that they obtained the secret from Italian doctors, who had long been practicing it. Paul Richter in the Berliner Klinische Wochenschrift shows that a knowledge of "aqua ardens," or "burning water," may be traced as far back as the second century A. D. to a Christian father named Hippolytus, who possessed a recipe analogous to those handed about during the middle ages.

AFTERNOON TEA.

It's the Custom Nowadays to Serve Callers With Light Refreshments.

Afternoon teas are the fashionable fad of today and without doubt will become even more popular as time goes on. This custom of serving tea to guests in the afternoon is such a simple affair, conducted with so little ceremony, that it cannot fail to bring hostess and guest nearer together in a spirit of congenial hospitality, says



NEW TEA SERVICE.

the Modern Priscilla. The stiffness and formality of the call are relieved by this pleasant invention, and everybody is sure to feel more at home after tea is served. When a tea table and its equipments are not a part of the drawing room it is quite good form to have the maid bring in the tea service on a prettily arranged tray. Japan, as usual, is to be depended upon to supply the housewife with artistic wicker trays for this use.

The tea sets seen in the illustration are also from the mikado's realm. One is decorated with a cherry blossom design, and the other set depends for its charm upon the oddity of the spouts used on teapot and cream pitcher.

An Afternoon Tea Apron.

Daintiest among afternoon tea aprons is the one made of a half yard, half width, of finest batiste or organdie, finished at the lower and side edges with cotton lace picot bordering that is scarcely more than a series of long, loose loops and at the top slightly gathered into a waistband of narrow ribbon, decorated at both ends with bowknots, from which fall a half dozen or more ends in quarter inch wide ribbon, bowknotted midway of the length. The center of the apron is ornamented with two insets of embroidered fillet lace. One of these, placed six inches below the waistband, is a four inch square, and the other, placed six inches above the lower edge, is a 2 by 4 inch oblong. Of course lace of any other substantial sort could be employed, and white net, soutache embroidered, is equally as pretty as filet.

Marking the Garbage Can.

If the garbage can becomes shabby treat it to a coat of aluminum paint and save the price of a new one. To mark a garbage can print the initials on it with metal eating acid, then coat with black paint over the letters. One housekeeper, finding that pails got mixed up on the dumbwaiter in an apartment house, had her husband paint different numbers of red bands all the way around the pails belonging to the neighbors using the dumbwaiter—one band for the ground floor, two for the second floor, three for the third, and so on.

DESTRUCTION DAY

Rid the House of Clutter to Cheer It.

WHY NOT THE SIMPLE LIFE?

Throw Out All Furniture, Pictures and Odds and Ends That Are Unnecessary and You Will Make Home More Attractive.

Every one—certainly, at least every woman—sometimes undergoes a revulsion against "things," particularly things that clutter up the house, and she longs for the simple life.

To put this new system of simple living in effect begin with a destruction day. Fix in your mind that it is the clutter of civilization that really bothers you and determine that you will rid yourself of much of this clutter.

Begin in your living room. Think of the beauty of Japanese houses, the furniture of which consists of a few screens, a few pieces of good pottery and some embroidered wall panels. Get a picture of a Pompeian house and study the effect gained therein by bare spaces and roomy airiness.

When you have once filled your mind with a desire for space and simplicity begin the process of destruction. Take down all but the best of your pictures. If you don't want to throw them away give them away, and if you don't want to do that put them in the attic until you have forgotten you like them.

If you have many really valuable and interesting ornaments put them in a cabinet with glass doors, where they will seem what they really are—a collection of curios.

After you have ruthlessly thinned out the ornaments and pictures tackle the furniture. Remove any of it that is rickety and broken and either have it mended or else throw it away. At any rate, have every piece of furniture left in the room in usable condition.

Bengal and Its Language.

The people of Bengal number seventy millions and boast of perhaps the best culture in India at the present time. The language as a written language is only fifty years old. Though for over a thousand years it has been a dialect, there is in Indian history unfortunately no trace of Bengali having been an important literary tongue. The language originates from Sanskrit, the mother tongue from which every other Indian language has borrowed its alphabet, grammar and vocabulary; but, unlike others, Bengali never shrinks from gathering new materials. There are numerous Persian, French, Arabic and English words incorporated in it, and the wonder of it is that, instead of having been degraded into some vulgar form like pidgin English, Bengali has become the most literary, scientific and perhaps the most philosophic of modern Indian languages.—Argonaut.

WHEN ARTHUR WAS YOUNG.

Used to Take an Active Part in Political Campaigns.

When Arthur Meighen, who assumed the duties of Solicitor-General of Canada recently, was even younger than he is now—his present age is 39—he used to take a very active part in all the political campaigns around Portage la Prairie. His services as a stump speaker were much in demand in the small towns and villages on the famous Portage Plains. On one occasion he had the fortune, good or bad, to speak on the same platform with Senator Watson—the Hon. "Bob"—who is also a resident of Portage la Prairie. Arthur—everyone in Portage calls him Arthur whether acquainted or not—was seen in those days, when the naval bill was undreamed of, an ardent Senate reformer.

During the course of his remarks on the occasion referred to he touched upon his hobby, and in his enthusiasm evidently forgot the presence of the Senator on the platform. At any rate, what he said about the Senate and the Senators was enough, and then some. He attacked it from all sides, ripped it up the back, and on both sides. All the old arguments against the Senate and some new ones were used up, and when he ran out of arguments he still had a few names to call the Senators. As his speech went on the audience began to smile. Senator Watson seemed peeved about something. There were indications that he was not enjoying himself thoroughly. When Mr. Meighen finally concluded it was the Senator's turn to speak. He said in his gruff sort of a staccato:

"The speaker who has just addressed us is very young — very young. He is not only very young, but he is also very, very fresh."

After which introduction the Senator delivered a fighting speech against Mr. Meighen's other policies, but did not mention Senate reform.

According to a London specialist, if white clothing for babies could be abolished, in a generation there would be a 20 per cent decrease in the number of persons with defective eyes.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE RACE

"I can't make out wot the Board o' Trade's coming to," remarked Captain William Smith of the mercantile marine. "Nowadays they seem to give masters tickets to anybody, no matter if they can't navigate a windjammer from Margit to Ramsgit."

Captain Smith made the remark in the bar parlour of the Quay inn at Eastport. He purposely spoke in loud tones and, though apparently addressing his first mate, his gaze was fixed directly on a tall, sprucely-dressed, clean-shaven man of about 30 years of age. The latter was part owner and captain of the Blue Star, a steamer of some 3,000 tons, and answering to the title of "tramp."

"It seems to me," went on Captain Smith, still staring at Harry Newman, as the master of the Blue Star was named—"it seems to me that any lopsided barrel o' tar can get a master's billet nowadays."

He stamped across the parlour and thumped his fist on the table at which Captain Newman sat. The latter gazed at him calmly.

"The description seems to fit my man," he remarked. "At any rate, will you kindly remove your hand?"

Captain Smith blinked—he always blinked when he was trying to think.

"'Ere," he said. "You're goin' to New Orleans, ain't you?"

"I am," replied the master of the Blue Star.

"So am I," cried Captain Smith. "Now, then, I'll make a bet with you that I make port a clear 24 hours afore you."

"And I'm ready to stake 50 quid on it. D'you take me?"

"I am usually careful with whom I bet, remarked Harry Newman calmly, "but still I am ready to make an exception in your case. I accept your bet of £50 that your time for the voyage is 24 hours shorter than mine and I'll wager another £50 that the Blue Star's time is shorter than that of your rusty stove pipe"

"It's a bargain," cried Smith, extending his hand.

"Very well," replied Newman, "but there is not enough remuneration to compensate me for taking your hand, which, as I told you before, is very dirty."

The bet was put on paper and the stakes lodged with the landlord of the Quay Inn, who was a reputable person.

At 1 o'clock on the following morning the Seagull put out from Eastport. She was followed by the Blue Star about four hours later.

Both vessels were very quickly under full steam. They were much alike in build and tonnage, and both belonged to the tramp species. Their cargoes were very similar, composed of miscellaneous shipments to New Orleans, so that neither vessel possessed any material advantage.

Four days passed by—four days of hard steaming, of strained gazing of ill-concealed excitement, for every man on the Blue Star was as anxious as his captain for the defeat of the Seagull. At first the Blue Star had drawn near the Seagull, but presently the latter began to draw away. The skipper hoisted the following signal: "Good-bye. We will tell them in New Orleans you are coming."

Harry Newman always fought to the last. Though the Seagull could no longer be seen, he did not despair, but carried into effect an idea that had suddenly occurred to him.

The Blue Star carried masts fore and aft; they had never been used, though the necessary sails were stowed away in the hold. These latter were got out and the masts rigged; a fresh easterly breeze was blowing, and by means of the sails the steamer's speed was increased from nine to eleven knots.

Early next morning a hoarse cheer from the deck awakened Newman and brought him tumbling upon deck. About three miles ahead the Seagull was plowing along, the smoke from her funnel lying before her in a great black stream.

Suddenly the lookout shouted:

"Ship's boat away to the starboard, sir!"

Newman, who was on the bridge, brought his glasses to bear on the boat and saw that it contained three men, lying in the boat.

"Smith must have seen them," he muttered. "Confound the blackguard."

He issued some rapid orders and presently a boat dropped from the Blue Star's davits and crawled over the waves.

In a few minutes it was headed back, towing the second boat. The three men were lifted on board, but though the rescue had been made with expedition, the Blue Star had lost an hour.

The rescued men stated they were all that were left of the barque Singapore. Two nights before she had suddenly gone down in a hurricane with all hands, except themselves. Their boat had been provisioned and they had thus undergone no privation. They were quite ready to take their share in the work and were very grateful to their rescuers.

Toward the afternoon a strong breeze stirred up and the Blue Star men eagerly began to scour the horizon for the Seagull. The breeze maintained itself into the night, but suddenly, just after eight bells had been struck there was a loud scuffling noise on deck followed by shouts.

Newman ran up from the saloon, to find the sails on the aft mast hanging drunken from loose ropes. The second men informed him that a number of the ropes had been deliberately cut with a knife.

Next day the Seagull was again sighted, though she was very indistinct. The wind again helped the Blue Star, and she again began to diminish the distance between the two vessels. At night, thanks to the breeze, the Seagull was only two miles ahead.

The watch came up at eight bells to take duty from 8 o'clock until 12. But 10 o'clock the rest of the ship's company had turned in. Suddenly, just before 11, the second mate on theb ridge was alarmed by the sounds of a scuffle aft. Then to his astonishment he beheld Captain Newman come striding along the deck, bearing in his great arms the struggling form of one of the Singapore men.

"Instead of turning in I hid myself," the skipper explained. "Presently my friend here came sneaking through the darkness with a long knife, but I caught the beauty before he had time to do any damage.

"Now, then, you swab," he continued grimly, setting his burden against the bridge stairs, "What's your game? I want the truth, mind, or, by the Lord Harry you'll have a mighty rough time until we make New Orleans."

At first the man was sullen, but Captain Newman had an unpleasant way of making a man speak.

"Easy, captain," the fellow muttered: "I'll blow the gaff. We an' the others ain't shipwrecked chaps; we're from the Seagull. It was Captain Smith's idea. We was to get a quid for delaying you and lettin' 'im make New Orleans afore you."

Had Itching Piles For 27 Years
Often Laid Up for Days at a Time—A Wonderful Tribute to Dr. Chase's Ointment.
Few people were ever more enthusiastic in praising Dr. Chase's Ointment than the writer of this letter. When you read the description of his case you will not wonder why.
Mr. John Johnson, Coleman, Alta., writes: "Three years ago I was cured of blind, itching piles of 27 years' standing by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. I used to think that death would be the only relief I would ever get from the terrible misery of piles. Often I was laid up for three days at a time, and at other times worked when I should have been in bed.
"Dr. Chase's Ointment is worth sixty dollars a box instead of sixty cents. I am a different man since using it. I am farming all the time, and never miss a day. Words fail to express my gratitude for the cure this ointment made for me. I cannot tell half as much about it as it deserves. Anyone doubting this can write direct to me."

A Long Life and a Broad One.

An English doctor recently said that ambition to live to a great old age isn't a good one and doubted whether constant efforts to lengthen the average life are for the good of the race. He apparently favors a short life and a merry one. Perhaps it isn't long life that makes the world happy, but broad life. Thirty full, energetic years may be better than sixty years of commonplace drudgery. But why not sixty full, energetic years? Who knows what the world loses when a man dies at thirty? So much has been accomplished by men who have reached sixty and even seventy and eighty that it seems good policy to keep all persons on earth as long as possible. The man who honestly disapproves efforts to prolong life is a rarity and it is lucky for the world that he is.—Savannah News.

He—You upbraid me for losing money on the races—you!

She—And why should I not?

He—Yet I recall one blissful moment not so long ago when we stood together beneath the silent stars and you said that no stroke of adverse fortune could ever draw from your lips one complaining word.—Puck.

GRASS LINED BOOTS.

They Are Worn by the Nomadic Lapps, Who Never Get Cold Feet.

While civilized man suffers intensely from cold feet every winter, the Lapplander, living in the far north of Europe, has no such trouble. A traveler writes: "Their boots are made of reindeer skin and are worn very large, and the toes are pointed and curve upward so as to be easily slipped into their skis. The Lapp usually fills his boots half full with a peculiar green grass, into which he thrusts his naked feet. He then packs the boots full with more grass, tucks the ends of his trousers inside and binds them tightly round with many turns of a brightly woven braid. With these precautions they never suffer from cold feet, and chilblains, corns or such like civilised complaints are an unknown horror to them."

Concerning other customs the same writer says: "The Lapps are essentially a nomadic race and spend most of their lives wandering fancy free among the wild and glorious scenery of their northern home. However, at times no doubt the stillness of the frozen mountains becomes too still, and they turn their herds and start toward their nearest meeting place. Twice a year they hold these general gatherings—at Easter and midsummer—when they congregate and hold a general fair. It is on these occasions that they celebrate their weddings and funerals. The revelries last only about ten days, but many marriages take place between couples who perhaps have never met previously.

"As soon as a Lapp can afford to buy enough reindeer for himself he leaves the parental tent, takes a wife and roams away wherever his heart or reindeer dictates. There are no social distinctions in Lapland. Should a man have no reindeer or possibly have lost what he had he travels with a rich man and helps him tend the herd, but he lives and feeds with them in the same tent and is quite on a social equality until he can afford to start off with his own herd."—Chicago News.

Romance of a Picture.

The ups and downs of the artist's calling are well illustrated by the fortunes and misfortunes of the late M. Sukhorovsky, a Russian artist. His celebrated painting, "Nana," was exhibited all over the world and made a fortune for himself and others. After personally receiving some $300,000 for its exhibition the artist, thinking its vogue over, sold "Nana" for $21,000, and the dealer resold it at double the price. An American bought it and showed it all through the United States, Canada and South America and is reported to have made $1,000,000 by the enterprise. On the other hand, the artist lost all his money by unfortunate investments and was reduced almost to beggary.

Dog Kills a Shark.

A shark was killed by a dog at Looe, Cornwall, Eng., a few days ago. The fish, which weighed over twenty pounds, was sporting about in a small pool left by the tide, and as it made a dash for the sea the dog sprang at it and fastened his teeth well into its side causing a lot of blood to gush forth. For five minutes a keen struggle between dog and fish took place, first one and then the other gaining the upper hand, the fish making many ineffectual attempts to bite its assailant. Gradually the shark got more and more feeble, and was finally dragged to the shore in triumph by the dog.

Out at Service.

A young housekeeper, if her cook is stupid, her nurse idle, her maid more given to flirtation than to household duties, sighs for the model servants of the good old times. But did "the good old times" ever exist historically, or do they only live in dreams and ballads?

Charles Dickens tells of the appalling stupidity of London kitchens. Sir Walter Scott mentions a genius who, fearing that all his master's bees would desert the hive, plastered the openings and suffocated all the inmates. Samuel Breck has grewsome accounts of burglars, highwaymen, pirates and murderers among the convicts sent over from England before the Revolution. Daniel Defoe's pictures of extravagance, carelessness, rascality and all that is undesirable among servants is a classic. Jonathan Swift's "Directions to Servants" seems to forestall every story of negligence, or wastefulness, or dirtiness the present generation has heard.—Living Church.

Showing Emotion.

An amusing story is told of Miss Daisy Markham, the young actress who was recently awarded $250,000 for breach of promise. When Mr. Alan Aynesworth was rehearsing her in Mr. Temple Thurston's play, Sally Bishop, he was not quite satisfied with the way Miss Markham played a certain scene. He explained that he wanted her to show more emotion. "Try and think you are in great grief," he said. "Try to look and speak as though you were very unhappy." "Very good," said Miss Markham, who evidently did not think much of Mr. Thurston's play, "I'll try to think I am one of the people who have paid to see the play."

FIVE MINUTE CURE IF STOMACH IS BAD

When "Pape's Diapepsin" reaches Stomach All Indigestion, Gas and Sourness Disappears

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness nad nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

REUBEN TRUAX WINS

South Bruce Condemns Borden Government's Policy

A FAIR TEST OF FEELING

WALKERTON, C., 31.—The Federal riding of South Bruce, after being counted for five years in the Conservative column, returned to its allegiance to the Liberal party yesterday when Reuben E. Truax was elected to the Commons over W. E. Cargill by a majority of 124 in the bye-election. In 1911 the Conservative candidate, James J. Donnelly, defeated Mr. Truax by 103. Mr. Donnelly's elevation to the Senate some months ago created the vacancy.

The victory has a two-fold significance. It is a direct personal tribute to Mr. Truax by his fellow townsmen. On the other hand, the verdict in South Bruce is a triumph for Liberal principles.

Fearing to trust the people with its naval policy the Government chose South Bruce as a test riding, and the answer is now too plain to be explained away. The Government courted a decision and the answer is one of unmistakable meaning.

To some extent the trade question contributed to Mr. Truax's victory. On almost every occasion when speaking the Liberal candidate declared his firm adherence to reciprocity in natural products as benefitting the Canadian farmer, and the feeling was apparent that the mind of the country has changed on this matter since the general election of 1911.

The vote polled yesterday was much larger than at the last election. Moreover, it was polled very early in the day. At Formosa, for instance, the whole vote was in at three o'clock, and an hour before the polls closed in Walkerton practically every vote was in. Both sides were well organized and automobiles played a big part in getting out the vote.

The Conservative losses were most marked in the Townships of Brant, Carrick, Culross and Elderslie. In Huron Township the Conservative candidate made a big gain, but Greenock and Kinloss showed small losses. Of the towns, Lucknow, Cheesley and Teeswater showed gains for the Conservatives, with losses in Paisley and Walkerton.

Conservative workers began to gather at the party headquarters shortly after five o'clock. One of the Walkerton polls came first with a majority for Mr. Truax of somewhat smaller than in 1911. Others from Brant and Carrick soon followed, showing small changes that left the verdict doubtful. As more ominous returns came, however, the election of Mr. Truax appeared certain, and was conceded by six o'clock.

At the Liberal headquarters the successive gains brought cheers, and the successful candidate was serenaded at his home, where, surrounded by his family, he appeared on the porch and thanked his supporters.

"I have fought hard to win South Bruce, and you electors have fought hard, too, and we have won," he said, amid cheers.

Later an adjournment was made to the Town Hall, where speeches were made and the victory celebrated. For hours the streets were thronged by marching Liberals equipped with horns.

W. D. Cargill last night said: "I would like to say how exceedingly obliged I am to the many friends who assisted me in this campaign, and to tell them how much I appreciate their assistance."

Death Found Him Kneeling.

TORONTO, Oct. 31.—Kneeling by the side of his bed with the gas turned full on, Mykta Matyck, an Italian about 40 years of age, was found dead in an upper room at 209 York street at two o'clock yesterday afternoon by the proprietor of the house, a Chinaman named Ing Sing. Matyck had locked the door, and the police theory is that he committed suicide.

The body was taken to the morgue, and no inquest will be held.

Arson Is Charged.

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 31. — Joseph and Anthony Belfoy, brothers, are in jail on remand, charged with burning the barn and outbuildings of Maxime Lortie, a local gardener.

Three different fires occurred on the Lortie premises, two of which were extinguished. The third got beyond control, and the structures were entirely consumed, with contents, including one horse. Lortie carried no insurance.

Drowned In Lake Nipissing.

NORTH BAY, Oct. 31. — Joseph Caye fell overboard from a small steamboat on Lake Nipissing and was drowned while en route with a party of laborers to work in a lumber camp on the south side of the lake. He was 35 years of age.

WHEN YOUR APPETITE COMES BACK TO YOU

It Is a Sure Sign Your Stomach Is Able to Work. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Will Give You a Rousing Appetite.

It is the greatest joy in the world to be able to eat what one wants and no misery can compare with that which comes when an appetite fails.

When the stomach cannot digest food the system revolts at the very idea of eating, but when the digestive apparatus is restored to its normal condition every quality of mind seems to make a man cheerful.

"That's the Way I Used to Look. What's you think of me now?"

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets mix with the food you eat. The stomach by its peristaltic action churns and moves the food around the stomach walls, the powerful ingredients in these tablets instantly begin digesting the food as they are forced through it and around it.

These tablets regulate the strength of gastric juices. If there is too much acid or alkali then Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets reduce or dilute these evil conditions and prevent the irritating and raw stomachs which always come with dyspepsia, indigestion, etc.

It is the very essence of pleasure to a stomach sufferer to know that he can digest any meal if he will only take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after eating.

The use of one of these Tablets after meals will in a very short time restore your appetite to its normal condition and you will be able to enjoy your food with an old-time relish.

Every Drug Store carries Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Price, 50 cents.

CANNOT HIT LOCK.

Gatun Is Entirely Screened From Foreign Warships.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31. — Secret tests, recently made by the third division of the Atlantic battleship fleet, under command of Rear Admiral Usher, are said to have disclosed the fact that the Panama Canal virtually has nothing to fear from the fire of an enemy's fleet so far as the Gatun and other important locks are concerned. This information leaked out from the Navy Department yesterday.

The tests, started last winter, are declared to have developed the fact that the fleet could not determine the location of the Gatun lock. It is intimated that the data made public and supposed to give the topography of the canal, were purposely inaccurate. In addition it was discovered that the hills intervening rendered the locks almost immune from damage by bombardment from the sea. Extension of the breakwater on the Atlantic side has made it possible to mount long range guns so far out that the approach of an enemy's fleet could readily be checked.

Elaborate plans for the mining of the approaches to the canal on both the Atlantic and Pacific already have been completed.

A New Wheat.

Consumers of wheat products in Great Britain have very little, if any, conception of the work that has been carried on in Canada for many years in order to perfect the crop and to produce varieties suitable to the varied local conditions that must necessarily prevail over so large an area as the Dominion of Canada, says The London People. Dr. Saunders, the discoverer and introducer of "Marquis" wheat, is now engaged on further experiments, from which he hopes to secure a wheat that will push the "wheat line" still further north by reason of its earlier ripening qualities. This new wheat he calls the "Prelude." It is the result of careful cross-fertilization under his own supervision. The new grain is stated to be very hard and to average $5 per bushel more than the "Red Fife." The straw is short. It ripens a couple of weeks earlier than "Marquis" wheat, and three weeks earlier than "Red Fife," while its bread-making quality is superior to that of the latter. In yield it is lighter than either "Marquis" or "Red Fife." The largest secured so far is 42 bushels to the acre. "Next year," says an Edmonton correspondent, "there will be a distribution by sale of the new seed from the Government's Experimental Farm."

CROXONE SAVES ELDERLY PEOPLE FROM KIDNEY AND BLADDER MISERIES

Sleep Disturbing Bladder Weaknesses, Backache, Stiff Joints, Rheumatic Pains Disappear After Few Doses Are Taken

While people along in years are naturally more subject to weak kidneys, they can easily avoid the tortures of backache and rehumatism and besaved the anoyance of getting up at night with disagreeable bladder disorders.

Croxone relieves these conditions by promptly reaching the cause and making the kidneys filter the blood and sift out the poisonous acids and waste matter that cause these troubles.

It soaks right in and cleans out the stoped-up, inactive kidneys, dissolves and drives out the uri cacid and other poisonous impurities that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause rheumatism. It neutralizes the urine so it no longer irritates the bladder, overcomes unnecessary breaking of sleep and helps the kidneys and bladder regain healthd an strength.

It matters not how long you have suffered, how old you are, or what else you have used, It is practically impossible to take Croxone without results. It starts to work the minute you take it—the first time you use it. An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if it fails in a single case.

TO CONSERVE HEALTH.

Medical Men at Ottawa Suggest Federal Health Bureau.

OTTAWA, Oct. 31.—The provincial conference called by Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, to discuss the question of pollution of navigable waterways, which opened here yesterday morning, adopted a resolution asking the Government to consider the desirability of establishing a Federal Department of Public Health, and also thanked George H. Bradbury, M.P. (Selkirk, Man.), and the special committee of the House for its investigations. The conference also suggested that the Commons' committee continue its work next session.

Regarding the Public Health Department the following resolution was adopted on motion of Dr. Lachapelle, Montreal, seconded by Dr. Seymour, Regina:

"Whereas in the past sanitary questions affecting public health have suffered from the non-existence of a Federal Health Department, this conference considers the creation of a Federal Department of Public Health might well receive the early attention of the Government.

"The conference believes such a department would be of assistance in solving interprovincial problems as to the protection of public health."

Would Abolish Death Sentence.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—A cable from Madrid says:

The Institute of Criminology, one of the foremost scientific associations in Spain, sent a strong recommendation yesterday to the Government for the abolition of capital punishment. Almost simultaneously a large number of students, headed by those of the Madrid Law School, paraded before the palace and asked the king for the pardon of several convicts sentenced to death.

Alleged To Have Murder Record.

MONTREAL, Oct. 31.—That William Campbell, alias William Jackson, colored, who will be brought to trial here next week for the murder of George Muir two months ago, is Charles Jones, wanted in Cincinnati for several brutal murders committed there three years ago is the opinion of Police Inspector Cowan. The inspector has communicated with the Cincinnati authorities in an effort to confirm his belief.

Must Weld Empire First.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Speaking at the Cutlers' feast at Sheffield, Hon. Thomas MacKenzie, New Zealand's High Commissioner, said his opinion was that until we could first weld together the various portions of the Empire in some common council we should never weld together one truly Imperial fleet.

WHY 7000 DRUGGISTS

Guarantee and Recommend Vinol.

If any one should know the value of a medicine it is the retail druggist who sells it.

Therefore, when over seven thousand of the best retail druggists in the country recommend Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, without oil, as the greatest tonic reconstructor and strength creator they have ever sold, it must indicate the value of Vinol.

We could publish columns of such testimony as the following:

J. C. Brady, druggist of Fall River, Mass., says: "In cases where cod liver oil, emulsions and other tonics fail, Vinol will heal, strengthen and cure."

C. A. Potterfield, druggist, of Charleston, W. Va., says: "It is a pleasure to sell Vinol as it gives such universal satisfaction."

Hunter & McGee, druggists, of Jackson, Miss., say: "We have great confidence in the strength creating and curative value of Vinol."

We ask every run-down, nervous, debilitated, aged or weak person or any person suffering from chronic coughs, colds or bronchitis, to try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not do all we claim.

NO PROOF OF GUILT.

Errors or False Entries Do Not Convict, Says Lawyer.

MONTREAL, Oct. 31.—The case of John H. Murray, late of Toronto, accused of having so falsified the "drafts payable" books of which he had charge as third teller of the Montreal branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, that he was enabled to appropriate $81.50, came before Judge Lafontaine yesterday.

Mr. Bowser of the Bank of Nova Scotia, said that the appropriation must have taken place because of the errors or false entries in the books. These proved the accused's guilt to a banker's mind.

Mr. Fitch, for the defence, argued that this was no proof of the actual appropriation, and Judge Lafontaine agreed that there was a difficulty.

The case was adjourned for further documents to be obtained.

THEY WANT MORE PAY.

Quebec Superior Court Judges Say Living Is Dearer.

QUEBEC, Oct. 31.—The judges of the Quebec Superior Court are dissatisfied with their present salaries which are now $7,000 for judges residing in Quebec and $5,000 for those residing in rural districts. They will request the Minister of Justice to increase their salaries to $9,000 for Quebec judges and $7,000 for rural judges, claiming that the cost of living has increased for them as for any other mortal.

Such was the decision taken yesterday at a meeting of the judges of the whole region of Quebec. The rural judges ask permission to reside in cities, as social relations in their districts may sometimes render the situation very uneasy.

IT LOOKS LIKE MORRIS.

Earliest Returns In Newfoundland Indicate His Selection.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Oct. 31.—The first returns to-day from the general election favors the re-election of the Government by a reduced majority.

The question of Government expenditures forms the chief issue in the elections held yesterday.

The party of the Premier, Sir Edward Morris, urged the election of his supporters to the 36 seats in the House of Assembly on the plea that he had done much to develop the colony by his policy of Government aid to the construction of many branch lines of railway. Sir Robert Bond, heading the Opposition, has assailed this policy, declaring it has been too expensive and has placed a needless tax on the island's revenues.

Because of the remoteness of many districts it is likely to be several days before the result of the election is known. The Government provided special polling places in this city for fishermen now here disposing of their summer's catch, and unable to return to their homes in time for the election.

SUFFERERS FROM PILES!

ZAM-BUK HAS CURED THESE!

Friction on the hemorrhoid veins that are swollen, inflamed and gorged with blood is what causes the terrible pain and stinging and smarting of piles. Zam-Buk applied at night will be found to give ease before morning. Thousands of persons have proved this. Why not be guided by the experience of others?

Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask., writes: "I must thank you for the benefit I have received from Zam-Buk. Last summer I suffered greatly from piles. I started to use Zam-Buk and found it gave me relief, so I continued it, and after using three or four boxes I am pleased to say it has effected a complete cure."

Mr. G. A. Dufresne, 183-185 St. Joseph Street, St. Roch, Quebec, P. Q., writes: "I can highly recommend Zam-Buk to everyone who suffers from piles."

Magistrate Sanford, of Weston, King's Co., N.S., says: "I suffered long from itching piles, but Zam-Buk has now cured me."

Mr. William Kenty, of Upper Nine Mile River, Hants Co., N.S., says: "I suffered terribly from piles, the pain at times being almost unbearable. I tried various ointments, but everything I tried failed to do me the slightest good. I was tired of trying various remedies, when I heard of Zam-Buk, and thought as a last resource I would give this balm a trial. After a very short time Zam-Buk effected a complete cure."

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for skin injuries and diseases, eczema, ulcers, varicose veins, cuts, burns, bruises, chaps, cold sores, etc. 50c. box from all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful imitations.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The safe of J. Reimer & Sons, of Steinbach, near Winnipeg, was wrecked by expert safe blowers, and $1,200 in money secured.

Many persons were reported dead yesterday in four disastrous wrecks on the Moroccan coast, due to a terrific storm that raged all last night.

The man who was found fatally injured beside the New York Central tracks at Niagara Falls is supposed to be John Webster, a bricklayer of London.

Word has been received that the Royal Line (Canadian Northern Railway) mail steamships will sail from St. John this winter and not Halifax, as formerly.

Correspondence from Manila, P.I., reports two deaths there from bubonic plague, one of them being that of William Crester, managing editor of The Daily Bulletin.

Warden Clancy of Sing Sing Prison, who resigned when he heard that John A. Hennessy had "spilled the beans in the Stillwell case," went to New York yesterday "to hunt a job."

One hundred and fifty men employed by Andrew Wilson & Co., Montreal and Toronto, cigar manufacturers, have struck and five hundred hands have been thrown out of work as a result.

An absolute denial is given in high circles to the story that Sir Donald Mann has been in Ottawa to ask for a guarantee of Canadian Northern bonds to the extent of $25,000,000 this coming session.

Comb Sage Tea In Hair To Darken It

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Keep Her Locks Dark, Glossy, Thick

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening grey, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

NOSE AND HEAD STOPPED UP FROM COLD OR CATARRH, OPEN AT ONCE

My Cleansing, Healing Balm Instantly Clears Nose, Head and Throat—Stops Nasty Catarrhal Discharges. Dull Headache Goes.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake to-night struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous droping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh—will surely disappear.

THE MARKETS

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Oct. 30.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 204 cars, comprising 2630 cattle, 625 hogs, 2364 sheep and lambs and 576 calves.

Butchers

Choice butchers sold at $7.25 to $7.50; good butchers, $6.25 to $7; medium, $6.75 to $6.25; choice cows, $6 to $6.50; good at $4.75 to $5.50; medium, $4.25 to $4.75; canners and cutters, $3 to $4.25; choice bulls, $6 to $7; butcher bulls, $5.25 to $5.75; bologna bulls, $4.25 to $5.25.

Stockers and Feeders

There was a fairly good trade in stockers and feeders, but prices were reported easier in the common grades of steers. Steers, 1000 to 1150 lbs., sold at $6.30 to $6.60; steers, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $6 to $6.25; stockers, 500 to 800 lbs., at $5.25 to $6; rough eastern stockers, $4.50 to $5.25.

Milkers and Springers

Demand was good for choice milkers and forward springers on a firm basis of prices, such cows being scarce, and selling from $65 to $90, and a few of extra quality selling from $95 to $110, and one extra Holstein cow at $125. Common light going from $40 to $50.

Veal Calves

The calf market was firm at unchanged quotations. Choice veals sold at $9 to $10.50; good calves, $8 to $9; medium, $7 to $7.50; common calves, $5.50 to $6.50; rough eastern calves, $4.50 to $5.

Sheep and Lambs

Sheep and lambs were in demand at steady prices, as follows: Ewes sold at $4.25 to $5.25; culls and rams, $2.75 to $3.75; lambs, $7.40 to $7.50; bucks, culled out, at 75c per head less.

Hogs

Selects, fed and watered sold at $9.15 to $9.25; $8.85 to $9 f.o.b. cars; $9.55 weighed off cars.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

LIST OF INCREASES

Connected With Property of Appellant, Who Will Appear Before Court of Revision This Evening

INCOME VS. EXPENSES

Among the appellants who will appear before the Court of Revision this evening is Mr. James Sutherland, 323 George Street. The latter has seven different assessments to his credit, including one business assessment, all of which has been increased during the past year. The total increase amounts to $1,440 and is apportioned as follows:

	Old Assess'mt.	New Assess'mt
Lot 23, north side of Albert Street	$ 900	$1,020
Lot 23, north side of Albert Street	400	590
Lot 20, north side of Albert Street	450	600
Lot 21, north side of Albert Street	400	580
Lot 47, south side of Albert Street	450	680
Store, 323 George Street	4,800	5,000
Business assessment	1,140	1,500
Total	$8,540	$9,980
		$8,540
Total increase		$1,440

A Small Revenue.

A real estate man recently offered Mr. Sutherland less for a part of the property than it is assessed for. He states that the expenses connected with the property is greater than the income. The first four lots on the above list bring in a revenue of eleven dollars a month or one hundred and thirty-two dollars a year. Out of this the owner pays the taxes, which on the four lots amounts to $64.73 a year, leaving a balance of $67.27. The income on lot 47 is less than the taxes.

Mr. Sutherland states that he will be under the necessity of selling the property and disposing of his business unless there is a reduction made in the assesment. He asserts that the building which he occupies, together with his grocery business is valued at $6,500. This works out at the rate of $433.75 per foot frontage.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, Union Stock Yards, Oct. 30.—Receipts were again large, 209 cars, 2,630 cattle, 625 hogs, 2,364 sheep and lambs, 570 calves.

Cattle—The quality of the cattle was on a par with what it has been for the past two days, too few good to choice, not enough to supply the demand.

Choice butcher's steers, $7.25 to $7.50; good butcher's steers, $6.75 to $7.25; medium butcher's steers, $6.25 to $6.75; common butcher's steers, $5.50 to $6.00; choice butcher's heifers, $7.00 to $7.25; common butcher's heifers, $6.25 to $6.50; choice cows, $5.75 to $6.50; good cows, $5.25 to $5.50; canners, $3.00 to $4.50; export bulls, $6.50 to $7.00; butcher bulls, $5 to $6; bologna bulls, $3.75 to $4.75.

Feeders and Stockers—The demand for stockers and feeders was not as strong and prices were 25c per cwt. lower for common to medium steers.

Choice steers, $6.25 to $6.50; medium steers, $6.00 to $6.25; stockers, $5.25 to $6.00; rough eastern stockers, $4.50 to $5.25.

Milkers and Springers — Market was again active at $55 to $100 each, bulk sold at $65 to $75.

Calves — Moderate receipts of calves, not enough to supply the demand caused prices to be firm.

Choice veals, $9 to $10.50; good, $7.50 to $8.50; common and medium, $4.50 to $7.00.

Sheep and Lambs—The sheep and lamb market closed strong.

Sheep, $4.25 to $5.50; culls and rams, $2.50 to $4.00; lambs, choice ewes and wethers, $7.40 to $7.60.

Hogs—Receipts being light, prices for hogs were firm.

Selected, fed and watered, $9.25 and $8.85 f.o.b. cars, and $9.50 weighed off cars.

THE WEATHER

The morning air is commencing to have a feeling of the presence of Jack Frost, but this is to be expected at this season. This morning the thermometer was down to 21 degrees, and lower temperatures may be expected from this time on. Our fall has generaly been fine and comparatively dry. This year is going to show a pronounced shortage in the rainfall, by all appearances, as up to the present time it is about one-third less than the average.—W.P.

CITIZENS ARE STILL BOILING THE WATER

In Accordance With Instructions Issued by M.H.O. During Preceding Months — Will Probably Close When the Cold Weather Arrives

ANALYSTICAL REPORT

The city's water supply for the month of October has been exceptionally good according to a verbal report that emanated from Dr. McPherson, Medical Health Officer. A few of the citizens are still carrying out the injunction issued by the M.H.O., during the months of August and September, when the citizens were advised to boil the aqua pura that was to be used for drinking purposes. The water in the lakes and river is unusually low and must of necessity contain more material of a putrefactive nature. In some cases the advice of the Medical Health Officer has been ignored altogether, and as far as can be learned no ill results have been accounted for. On the other hand a number of people went so far as to boil the water for ablutionary and culinary purposes; but this ultra view of the situation was the exception rather than the rule.

M. H. O.'s Report.

The analytical report for the preceding month is as follows:

Oct. 4—Chloride, 3; colour, 0; gas, 3-4 in.; odour, faint.

Oct. 8—Chloride, 3; colour, 0; gas, 1 in.; odour, 0.

Oct. 12—Chloride, 3; colour, 0; gas, 3-4 in.; odour, 0.

Oct. 18—Chloride, 3; colour, 0; gas, 1 1-4 in.; odour, 0.

Oct. 21—Chloride, 3; colour, 0; gas, 1 in.; odour, 0.

Oct. 25—Chloride, 3; colour, 0; gas, 3-4 in.; odour, faint.

Oct. 28—Chloride, 3; colour, 0; gas, 1 in.; odour, 0.

Few Cases of Typhoid.

A few cases of typhoid fever were treated at the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital during the month. The majority of cases were persons who had contracted the disease out of town and were ill on coming to Peterborough. In all there were about nine cases, not one of which could be traced to the city's water supply.

The city's water supply is pumped from the Otonabee river, two and one-half miles north of the city. It is distributed through approximately forty miles of mains, and the total daily consumption is nearly three million imperial gallons.

LOCAL OFFICERS WILL MEET GEN. BOOTH

Adjutant McElhiney and Party Leave for Toronto To-morrow—Will Interview Commissioner Lamb Regarding Prospects of Taking the Band to the Old Country

A LARGE REPRESENTATION

Adjutant McElhiney and a number of officers of the local Salvation Army Corps will go to Toronto tomorrow morning. Their mission apart from their desire to meet General Bramwell Booth, is to interview Commissioner Lamb, International Secretary, regarding the possibility of taking the Peterborough Band to the Old Country next June in connection with the International Congress. Adjutant McElhiney hopes to arrive at some definite understanding as to what recognition the band would get in event of them undertaking the trip. Some fifty-six countries will be represented at the Congress. It is estimated that there will be nearly four hundred bands in attendance.

Commissioner Lamb is accompanying General Booth on his trip to Canada. The distinguished visitors are expected to arrive in Toronto on Saturday.

New Machine Is Installed

Modern Steam Pressing Machine to be Used by Mr. Geo. Record

Mr. George Record, proprietor of the "My Valet" cleaning and pressing establishment on Charlotte Street has installed an expensive pressing machine, which is the only one of its kind in the City.

The Hoff-man sanitary steam pressing machine is one of the finest in existence. By the means of hot, dry steam, applied to both sides of the fabric that is being pressed, the garment is thoroughly sterilized, pressed and set at one operation. No damp rag is used. This restores the colour, raises the nap and eliminates glaze. Pressing the finest garments by this means is absolutely safe, as with it, scorching is absolutely impossible.

The machine is made by Palmer & Co., of Toronto, and its installation insures the patrons of "My Valet" the highest class of work on their clothes.

A HEAVY SENTENCE

Meted Out to Ross McCall, of Peterborough—Five Years Behind Prison Bars

TWO CHARGES

PICTON, Oct. 31.—Ross McCall, a Peterborough youth, was sentenced this morning by His Honour Judge Morrison, to five and two years respectively in Kingston Penetentiary. Sentences to run concurrently. McCall was convicted on two charges, namely, one of assault and robbery and the other of jail breaking. On the first named charge he was given five years, and for the second indictment, two years.

While awaiting trial on a charge of assault nd robbery, McCall escaped from the Picton gaol together with a confederate named James McDonald. Their escape was effected by means of a clothesline which was fastened to a pole. By this means they were able to scale the wall surrounding the gaol and descend on the other side with the aid of a large grape-vine.

The culprits were captured through the instrumentality of the rural telephone and a number of willing farmers. Fifty-nine dollars was discovered after the prisoners were returned to gaol. The money which McCall acknowledged as his, was thought to have been recovered from its hiding place while the prisoners were at large.

Six months was added to McDonald's sentence of four years which he received prior to his escape.

McCall's Peterborough record which was furnished by Chief of Police Thompson, was out in at the trial as character evidence.

Motion Pictures Of The Lift Lock

For the second time since its completion the Peterborough Lift Lock will be the subject of moving picture films this afternoon. Mr. Harris, who is to take the pictures, arrived in the City at noon to-day, and at about half-past two, left to make the pictures of the lift lock.

Alderman J. J. Duffus, Superintendent McClellan, and City Clerk Armstrong accompanied him in the former's automobile, and will figure as passengers on the boat when it goes over the lift lock. The Bessie Butler will be the steamer used and will make a trip over the locks, which will be taken in every detail by the moving picture camera.

The pictures, when completed, will be used by Mr. Harris for illustrating lectures to the Western Engineering Association, which is an American organization.

The last time motion pictures were made of the lift lock, they were made by the C. P. R. Company, who exhibited them, along with other Canadian views, in English Theatres, for the purpose of advertising Canada.

CEMENT MIXER STORED AWAY FOR WINTER MONTHS

Only 15 of the 80 Labourers Remain to Complete Asphalt Work

LIVED IN OLD FACTORY

Only fifteen of the eighty labourers who have been engaged in the laying of the street pavement remain in the city. The majority of those who have departed returned to St. Catharines. With the conclusion of the cement work, there remains only the work of laying the asphalt on the east side of George street, and fifteen men have been retained to complete this work.

During their residence in the city the eighty Italian labourers have been housed in the building formerly occupied by the Canadian Canoe Company at the corner of George and Dalhousie streets. Long rows of beds had been set up and stoves for heating and cooking were installed, making the conditions under which the men worked quite comfortable.

Mr. George McGregor, of Toronto, who had charge of the cement work left to-day for Campbellford, where there is a position open for a cement foreman, and it is understood that Mr. McGregor will make an application for it.

The beginning of the end of the asphalt work will likely be made on Monday and pushed through to completion. The upper section of George street has been ready for some time for the top coating, but the entire stretch can be treated without a break in the operation if it is begun on Monday.

In the meantime the big mixer has been laid away in its winter quarters at Mr. R. Hicks' yard, where the entire plant will remain until next spring when the work in Peterborough will be recommenced.

29 Cattle In One Car

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Ont., Oct. 31.—Twenty-nine cattle consigned into a thirty-two foot car shipped by Campbell of West Toronto, for Chicago, were stopped here by the G. T. R. authorities. Three were dead, two had to be killed and ten disposed of. An investigation has been laid.

JIMMY REYNOLDS OF PORT HOPE IS ON RETIRED LIST

Heel and Toe Walker Whom Dave Hartley Trimmed, Forsakes His Business

WIDELY KNOWN SPORTSMAN

James Reynolds, Port Hope's veteran barber, has retired from business. Jimmy has been barbering for forty-six years, forty-two of which he has been doing business in Port Hope. Every barber here with the exception of B. Dunsford, was an apprentice of his. Many others who served their time with him have left Town and done well. Jimmy was certainly an artist with the razor and scissors and many of our old citizens had become so attached to him that they thought no other barber could do their work. Jimmy's life has been one of a varied experience. He was always open to take a chance and made many strange bets. Our older citizens will remember Reynolds as an expert sack runner and on one occasion he raced a horse at the Town Park. He took part in the bicycle races to Cobourg and return, and a few years ago had a skating race. Then he won considerable notoriety in the walking game but this was unsuccessful. The undertaking to walk to Toronto and return was too much for him and we fear injured his health to such an extent as to make his retirement from work necessary. Jimmy has purchased a cosy little home on the Cranberry Road and will move there next week.

FOOTBALL

Mr. R. Jeffries, on behalf of the single men, will accept the challenge put forth by Mr. H. Smith for the married men to a game of football on November 8th at 2.30 p.m. on the Exhibition Park, and the losers to give a supper to the winners. He also suggests Mr. A. Day to referee the game.

(Signed) T. B. Moffat, Manager.
R. Jeffries, Captain.

Don't forget the football game to-morrow afternoon between the Glaziers and Cockneys in the competition. This is the last game, and the Cockneys hope to pull a win from the Glaziers, who have not lost a game. Game to start at 2.30 sharp on the Exhibition Park, with Mr. A. Day as referee.

A SHOCK TO GOVERNMENT

Keen Disappointment in Ministerial Ranks as a Result of the Bye-election in South Bruce

MINISTERS ARE SILENT

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 31.—The result of the South Bruce bye-election in which Reuben E. Truax (Liberal candidate) reversed the Conservative majority of 103 and was elected by a margin of 124, has created keen and obvious disappointment in the ministerial ranks. It is generally conceded here that the loss of the constituency in the heart of Ontario, where the Government's policy both on tariff and navy should be most popular, is a serious blow to the administration, which even the gaining of Chateauguay in a supposedly Liberal stronghold cannot compensate. The win for the Liberal candidate places the parties again on an even footing in the Commons, and wiped out the gain in plurality which the Conservatives made in Chateauguay. It moreover has broken the hoodoo number in Ontario, moving the Liberal representation in that province from 13 to 14. This is considered by the Liberals to be a good omen. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, adhering to his usual custom, declines to make any statement. The one word "good" uttered most expressively was his sole comment when the result was announced to him. There is no doubt, however, that the Liberal chief, who was himself active in the campaign, is highly pleased at the result. In the Liberal ranks generally, there is great jubilation, and the victory was discussed last night in the various hotel rotundas of the city by excited groups to a late hour.

The Conservative ministers decline to discuss the result.

Hunters Have Moved To North

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Oct. 31.—All day yesterday and to-day an army of hunters has been moving northward. It is estimated that by midnight or by daylight to-morrow morning at the latest, all the favourite runways of the deer and moose in the northern wilds will have been taken possession of. The season of venison is on, for exactly at twelve o'clock midnight to-night the bans are removed.

The Story Of An Apple Tree

When the Scottish immigrant John McIntosh took possession long ago of his holding in Dundas county, Ontario, he found there, among other things a native growth, a young apple tree. Apple trees were none too plentiful in those days, so he nurtured it and it grew apace, until in time it began to yield fruit that brought to the farm fastidious apple-eaters from the country miles around. The apple became so famous at length that John McIntosh planted some of its seed, and his orchard flourished. The apple was ruddy, and in time people began to give it the name of McIntosh; then by natural gradations the apple, and, after, the family of trees, came to be known as McIntosh Reds. By this name they have long been famous throughout the Dominion, although they do not grow over a wide area. The St. Lawrence region is very favourable to the species, which not only rashes with, but in some localities has taken the place of, the celebrated Fameuse apple of Quebec. The mother tree is known to be 175 years old. It bore fruit up to four years ago. At present it is in the decline, and cannot stand much longer. So the farmers of Dundas county have banded themselves together for the purpose of erecting a marble shaft in its honour on the spot where the tree is now, but the merest shadow of its former self. There is pathos and beauty in the idea. The tree has given to Ontario and Quebec a whole race of trees bearing one of the most luscious of fruits. Its descendants have not only beautified many a Canadian country home, but have added largely to the income of many a Canadian husbandman. Of course, in the last analysis the honour will go to the memory of John McIntosh, who, in nurturing the infancy of the tree, rendered, consciously or unconsciously, a lasting service to many of his kind.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

FRIDAY, OCT. 31, 1913

A SIGNIFICANT VICTORY.

The election of the Liberal candidate, Mr. Truax, in South Bruce, yesterday, is a significant Liberal victory. It is something remarkable and unusual that a government should in the short space of only two years forfeit electoral confidence to the extent represented by the reversal of a government majority of over one hundred, the Liberal candidate securing a majority of 125, a turnover of 230. The Government chose its own issue, the naval policy, and, through that policy, being anti-British and anti-imperial, should by the help of sinister influences, have received a nominal endorsemnt in Chateauguay, where the Nationalist section of the Conservative Alliance was large, it was expected that in English-speaking Ontario, a true testing ground, the Borden naval policy would be strongly upheld. We see the result and no more emphatic condemnation could be given. It indicates the turn of the tide of Ontario public opinion against the Borden Government. A Government that cannot hold its own in two-bye-elections in Ontario has cold comfort coming from a general election, when influence could not be so directly and effectively exercised. South Bruce made but a sorry contribution to Mr. Borden's contribution policy.

RIPPING THE STREETS.

The Board of Works did well to give attention to the practice of companies digging up our streets at their own sweet will. This is an old evil and should have been remedied long ago. Isn't it a fact that some time ago the City Council issued a decree that no opening should be made in the streets without consent and then only on the condition that the street be restored to the same condition in which it was found? If there was such a decree it has been greatly disregarded and is still being disregarded. On Reid street, near Simcoe, a trench was opened for a sewer or water connection for a new building. This was before the recent rains. The trench was so carelessly filled that when the rains came it sank a couple of feet near the sidewalk and still remains so; and if in the night a vehicle should pass close to the sidewalk it would be in danger of being wrecked. There is enough earth taken out of the trench, left lying on the street to have filled the trench properly so that it would not sink. These things should not be. Whether the trench was put in and not filled, by the city or a private individual, an outrage has been committed. This is a sample of similar things happening all over the city on almost every street. It is folly and waste to put streets in good condition and have them destroyed in such wanton manner.

AGAINST TARIFF REDUCTION.

The provincial premiers at their conference seemed to be unanimously in favour of the object of milking the Dominion treasury by demanding as subsidy a ten per cent share of the revenue derived from customs taxation. This demand, if met, will more than double the total of subsidies which now is about 11 million dollars. The new plan would make the total of the subsidies about 24 millions. Though this proposal really means putting money from one pocket into another, it is objectionable because it tends to solidify the provinces against tariff regulation. It is admitted that our scale of customs duties takes many millions out of the people beyond the legitimate needs of he Dominion. It does not seem wise to perpetuate this in order to encourage provincial extravagance, not to speak of the overlapping of Dominion and provincial interests in a way to weaken provincial autonomy and self confidence. If our tariff yields more money than is needed — produces surpluses larger than our total revnue a few years ago —and if, as is agreed, it conduces to the high cost of living, the provincial premiers are not justified in practically declaring against tariff reduction.

THE FULL CHORUS COMING.

Hon. Geo. E. Foster once quoted and applied to Canada, the phrase, "splendid isolation." He is the supporter of a policy and course of action that reduces Canada to a position of degrading "isolation." Australia and New Zealand have both declared for, and one has inaugurated, a policy for practical co-operation in imperial defence by establishing a home navy. Canada—and Hon. Mr. Foster to his credit, started the ball rolling—declared four years ago for a Canadian navy, built in Canada, by Canada, and manned by Canadians. Mr. Borden, at the bidding of the Nationalists, destroyed the application of this policy, and reduced Canada to the status of a feudatory state, paying tribute. This is a policy which self-respecting Canadians will, condemn and resent the humiliation it involves. This condemnation is being heard: East Middlesex has whispered it through a reduced government majority. South Bruce yesterday, where the naval question was a direct issue, spoke more loudly and in time we shall have a full chorus of condemnation.

SIR WILFRID YET.

Another sin has been added to Sir Wilfrid's charge. The Galt Reporter, Conservative, quoted with approval by the Toronto News, imputes it as a crime that he does not know when he is beaten, something which, it is asserted, is not in accord "with the best traditions of public life in Britain, where leaders give up office with the same dignity and readiness as they would assume its responsibilities." If it is undignified to adhere to duty and discharge the responsibility of leadership, to cherish fidelity to a great trust, to be faithful to the demand of a large patriotism, then Sir Wilfrid Laurier is undignified. It would have been a delight to Conservative journals and leaders to have had Sir Wilfrid Laurier, to employ the phraseology of the ring, throw up the sponge and efface himself as a thorn in the flesh of his political enemies, to have dropped out as a factor in the public life of Canada. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was beaten but not subdued; overcome but not conquered. In opposition, as in office, his services are given in his country's interests. He is not the man to drop his hands from the tiller at at the puff of a little squall. His star still shines; and a reduced majority in East Middlesex and a wiped-out majority in South Bruce, in the Conservative stronghold province of the Dominion, shows that his star is not in the descendant. It is to be feared that Sir Wilfrid's enemies have still to reckon upon his influence, while Providence spares one of the greatest and most patriotic statesman in her long roster of distinguished men.

THE WHY AND THE WHEREFORE OF LIBERALISM

Before a large and enthusiastic meeting of the University Liberal Club last evening Sir Allen Aylesworth, former Minister of Justice for Canada, delivered an address on the "Why and Wherefore" of Liberalism.

Sir Allen began by stating his surprise that any serious objection should have been taken to the introduction into university life of active party politics. When he was an undergraduate forty years ago petition after petition was presented to the authorities asking for the privilege of discussing public issues, and as persistently as they petitioned so did the powers frown upon the very idea of it.

"Yet, in spite of this opposition, University College was then a seething hot-bed of party politics, and I was perhaps one of the most red-hot little Grits among them," said Sir Allen.

"I am a partisan," he went on. "I am prejudiced; I am full of prejudices—call me rabid if you will. I give as reason that for my part I call myself a Grit the fact that my father and his father before him were staunch Reformers. I do not believe that either party is ever profoundly right or absolutely wrong but I do think that the Grit or Reformers are the party that is oftenest nearest right. There are plenty of bad men in either or both parties, and I will say that there may be some good men in the Conservative party. I do not know but that there might even be some Tories get to Heaven. If they are going that way, I wish them Godspeed. I am not yet so bigotted as to wish an impediment might stand in their way."

After thus declaring his loyalty to Liberalism, Sir Allen went back in Canadian history to the settlement of the U. E. Loyalists, who, he asserted, were every one, Tories, and endeavoured to show how an oligarchical rule, in which the people had no voice, brewed serious discontent among the people of Upper Canada for a period of fifty years preceding 1841, and eventually gave rise to a popular agitation for reform, which, he believed, was the birth of a distinctive Canadian Liberalism.

The speaker urged the young men of the Univeristy who have Liberal convictions to expend effort while at 'Varsity in persuading fellow-students to adopt their line of thinking. Many sons of Tory parentage in Sir Allen's day became ardent Liberals before graduation owing to their broadening outlook in pursuing their University studies and discussing issues with Liberal students, and he believed the club had a plendid opportuhity for effective work in individual efforts among the student

POETRY AND STENOGRAPHY.

The professor of shorthand in a Boston business college adduced this unanswerable argument in an address to a new class the other day: "We are told that it took Gray, author of the well-known 'Elegy in a Country Churchyard,' seven years to write that famous poem. If he had known stenography he could have done it in seven minutes. We have graduates who have done that same poem in that length of time."

Glace Chicken.

Prepare a savory aspic jelly by placing in a saucepan a sliced carrot, a chopped onion, two stalks of minced celery, pepper and salt to taste; cover these ingredients with the left-over chicken gravy and a little cold water. Cook until the vegetables are very tender, then strain, and to a pint of liquor add a tablespoonful of gelatin that has been dissolved in a little hot water. Allow the jelly to cool, and as it begins to stiffen, mould in alternate layers with diced cooked chicken, bits of parsley and sliced hard-cooked eggs; halved olives may be added if desired. When ready to serve unmould on a fancy platter and garnish with a border of heart lettuce-leaves.

Cole-Slaw With Cream Dressing.

Shred half a head of firm cabbage, sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper, add one-half teaspoonful of mustard-seed and the same of celery-seed if desired. Take one-half cupful thick cream sweet or sour (it doesn't matter, just so it is rich), whip to a froth that will not drip from beater, put in a teaspoonful of sugar and three or four tablespoonfuls of strong vinegar, whip all until blended, and then stir into the shredded cabbage.

Serve in individual dishes or from the large salad-bowl, as preferred.

HERE'S SOMETHING NEW TO THE HOUSEWIVES OF PETERBORO'

Wizard Triangle Polish Mop that "Gets in the Corners"

The Wizard Mop "gets-in-the-corners" because of its handy triangle shape. So simple that it's a wonder it wasn't thought of long before.

Its thousands of long 5 inch cord fingers pick up every atom of dust and dirt, while the Wizard Polish, with which the mop is treated, imparts a fine new finish to painted and varnished surfaces – all in one operation.

HANDLE REACHES EVERYWHERE

Under beds, tables, desks, to the tops of doors and mouldings.

The inert dust can be shaken out of the Wizard Mop each time it is used.

When very soiled, simply wash the Triangle Mop with soap and water, and renew with Wizard Polish.

Now! this great gets-in-the-corners mop, with a quart of of Wizard Polish—a full year's supply. For..... $2.00

Think of the trouble you'll save.

The Campbell Flour Mill Company Limited

One of the busiest corners in Peterborough is the south-west corner of Dalhousie and George Street. Ever since the Campbell Flour Mills Co. of Toronto bought out the Central Milling Co., Ltd., this corner has looked a credit to our successful City. This speaks very well for the business ability of this firm as well as the quality of their output. The Campbell Flour Mills Co., Ltd. took over this property in 1910 and immediately remodelled the mill, throwing out all of the obsolete machinery an replacing it with the best and most modern appliances in the milling trade. This mill is now one of the most modern and up-to-date plants manufacturing flour in this country.

SPEAKER WAS DEFEATED BY A SOCIALIST

Special Wire to The Examiner.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Oct. 31.—One of the peculiar things about the elections yesterday, as developed this morning, was the defeat of Speaker Warren by Business Manager Grimes of the Fishermen's Protective Union, allied with the opposition, by a majority of nearly two hundred, in Port de Grave district. Grimes is a Socialist.

MR. W. GRADY WILL SELL MONEY ORDERS

Clarady Post Office, North Monaghan, conducted by Mr. W. Grady, at the corner of Lansdowne and Lock streets, has been made an accounting office. In other words Mr. Grady has received authority to sell money orders, a convenience which should be greatly appreciated by the residents of that neighbourhood.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

Gymnastics are once more in full swing at the Y.W.C.A., there being three classes now organised. The Saturday morning class at 10 o'clock for children under ten years of age, is most interesting. With this class, folk dances are taken up, besides the more elementary exercises in clubs and dumb bells.

On Monday and Thursday afternoons at 4.30 there is a class for intermediates. This class is as yet small, but it is hoped that more girls will join, for the benefit they will derive from this exercise after the irksomeness of school hours. We want also to organise several basket-ball teams among these girls.

Monday and Thursday evenings, at 7.30, in the senior girls' class, which promises to be a most successful one. In it all the various branches of physical culture are taken up, and basket-ball is also a leading feature.

Steamer In Flames

Special Cable to The Examiner.

HAMBURG, Germany, Oct. 31.—Twenty-two of the crew of twenty-five of the French Barque Patrie, were rescued yesterday in Mid-Atlantic by the liner Kron Prinzessi Cecilie, which found the Patrie burning and disabled and flying signals of distress. Three of the crew were washed overboard and drowned before the arrival of the rescue steamer which launched the boats in the heavy seas to rescue the survivors. Sailors smoking in berths are supposed to have caused the fire.

DREAM CAME TRUE

SYRACUSE, N.Y., October 31. — The discovery of a daughter after fifteen years' absence was brought about by a dream, dreamt by Mrs. A. Dexter of Chicago.

It appears that, fifteen years ago, the Dexter family decided to separate at Boston. Mrs Dexter journeyed west, moving recently to Chicago. The whereabouts of her daughter Alice was unknown, while Mr. Dexter died in New York a year ago. On Sunday night last Mrs. Dexter dreamed that her daughter was living with the family of James S. Slocum, of Moravia, N. Y. Deeply impressed by the dream Mrs. Dexter journeyed to Moravia, a distance of nearly a thousand miles, arriving there yesterday to find her dream perfectly correct in every particular. Alice, who is an artist, had been visiting the Slocum family for the last week. Re-united after so long a time, mother and daughter plan to live together in New York.

PROPOSE TO GIVE "PAN HANDLE" TO CANADA

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 31. — In the House of Representatives today, Representative Smith of Maryland, proposed that the President be empowered to negotiate with Britain for ceding to Canada the Alaskan "pan handle," or that port of country which runs down the Pacific coast beside Canada. Smith said it would help to effect universal peace between the United States, Britain and Canada. The motion will be sent to the committee on foreign relations.

HALLOWE'EN

Did any of you ever receive a puzzle invitation to a Hallow'en party? If not, give your friends a chance to get one this year. Cut out pumpkins of orange cardboard, write the invitation in red or black ink, or both; then cut into bits (not too small); inclose in a black envelope addressed in white ink. Be sure to say, "Please respond," then you can check up your guests and know for how many to prepare; also you will know whether the invitation was received and deciphered.

The following invitation is not original with me, but I am printing it for someone who may wish to copy it this Hallowe'en:

If you'd learn your fate
Or your destined mate,
Accept this invitation. Have no dread or fear.
On that fateful night
Mortals seldom sight
The revels I can show you and the antics queer. —The Witch.

There are several games that are never played except on Hallowe'en. Everyone knows the trick of stirring apples round and round in a big tub of water and letting the children take turns to stand on a chair and drop a fork over the edge of a high clothes horse to see if they can spear an apple as it whizzes by, which is much better than putting the face into the water after them and mussing up the girls' hair.

A good game is to sit round a large table with all hands underneath and then pass things around and watch the expressions on the children's faces. Offering to shake hands with an old glove stuffed full of cornmeal and water that has been in the icebox all day is a good beginning. A tennis ball that is cold and an orange with no peel on it that is warm will puzzle anyone under the table where they cannot see which is which. A piece of raw meat a rabbit's foot, the neck of a chicken and such things will provide a great variety of expression on the faces round the table.

LOSES HIS LIFE IN TRYING TO BREAK RECORD

Special Cable to The Examiner.

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 31.—While trying to break his new record of fifty miles in twenty-seven minutes, Lambert, the English motor driver, was crushed to death as his car, going 110 miles an hour, was overturned at Brooklands to-day. The bursting of a tire was the cause. Thousands of spectators saw the accident.

W.M.S. Convention Was A Success

Delegates From Throughout Peterborough District Congregate in Millbrook

A stirring and insistent address by the Rev. T. J. Mansell of Charlotte Street Methodist Church, together with a number of educative and interesting papers on timely subjects constituted two outstanding features of the Woman's Missionary Society's convention, which was recorded in Millbrook, yesterday. The morning session opened in the Methodist Church with the usual preliminary exercises, after which Miss Hazel Pentland of Peterborough was appointed Secretary. Mrs. J. K. Moore, District Organizer, occupied the chair.

Reports concerning the work of the Society for the past year, were received from Auxiliaries and Mission Bands throughout the district. A memorial and consecration service, led by Mrs. (Rev.) Mansell and Mrs. Allum concluded the morning session. Special reference was made to the late Mrs. Perrin of Bailieboro, who at the time of her demise, was Secretary-Treasurer of the district in which she resided. A letter of condolence will be forwarded to the family.

Afternoon Session.

At the afternoon session Mrs. Kendry of Peterborough submitted the annual report of the whole Dominion. The total amount of money raised during the year was $192.-823.75. This included the sale of a parcel of land situated in British Columbia. The actual amount of money raised exclusive of that obtained through the sale of realty, was $187,-457.97.

Very instructive papers were read by Miss Udy of Bridgenorth, Mrs. Wason of Warsaw, Mrs. (Rev.) Wilson of Pontypool, Master Alvin Richards of Millbrook, Miss Byam of Millbrook, and Mrs. (Rev.) Peever of Peterborough.

The papers which elicited considerable discussion, treated with such subjects as "Christian Stewardship," "Aim of the Mission Band," "Our Work in China," and others.

Vocal selections by Miss B. Lock of Millbrook and Mrs. (Rev.) Ireland of Bridgenorth, were much enjoyed.

The Anglican Church of Millbrook extended greetings to the Convention. The afternoon session was brought to a conclusion by a Mission Band and Circle Conference conducted by Mesdames Wilson, Craig, Throop, Sutton, Lightfoot, Sherin and others.

Evening Session.

The District Organiser's report covering the work of the district for the year was presented at the evening session. The report on the whole showed that satisfactory progress had been made throughout the year. An interesting address by Rev. T. J. Mansell proved to be a fitting culmination to one of the most successful conventions that has been held in years.

The meeting adjourned to meet in Bethany next year. About thirty people from Peterborough were present at the sessions.

CANADA'S PROGRESS

Examiner Special:

ALBANY, N.Y., Oct. 31.—Discussing the power and transportation facilities at the State Waterways Convention to-day, Secretary Frank Ellsworth said that not one steel rail could be laid or copper wire strung in any part of Canada without affecting materially the interests of New York State. He instanced the great work of making the new Welland Canal and the propositions for Georgian Bay Canal together with the proposals for complete waterway from British Columbia Coast to the Maritime Provinces and intimated that New York State must keep moving to compete with these immense enterprises. He also pointed out that th new power transmission and manufacturing facilities of Canada, especially Ontario meant a consequent decreased demand for United States goods.

General Booth In New York

Special Wire to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Oct. 31.—General Bramwell Booth, the head of the Salvation Army, who is going to Canada on a trip of inspection, arrived here to-day, occupying with his Secretary, Col. Kitching, three rooms in the Regal Suite of the Lusitania. In an interview with the New York reporters, General Booth said there had been no proposition for the alliance of the volunteers of America commanded by his brother, Ballington Booth, but he was willing to entertain such a proposal. He was surprised to hear of the serious illness of Commissioner Rees. The General is due in Toronto to-morrow.

CONSERVATIVE DEMAND FOR LOWER TARIFF

The Toronto World, (Conservative), speaking of the united demand of Provincial premiers for increased subsidies, says:

The World believes that these frequent readjustments are not in the public interest, but they are inevitable so long as the Dominion collects thirty or forty million dollars a year from the people over and above the cost of government, while the provinces are hard put to it to meet the pressing demands upon them for the care of the aged and infirm, the care and cure of the sick in body and mind, the care of newly-arrived immigrants, and the enforcement of statutes enacted by the Dominion Parliament, including the criminal code. It might do no great harm for Finance Minister White to give the visiting premiers a million dollars apiece, or to every province a sum equivalent to a dollar apiece for every man, woman and child residing therein, but it would not advance a step toward any permanent solution.

That solution, in our opinion, is to be found, first, by reducing federal taxation, and thereby reducing the revenue of the Ottawa government, and, second, by the federal government assuming the burden of many costly services now maintained by the provinces. Then it might be well to have a readjustment of the subsidies at fixed intervals, say every ten years.

The people of Canada are paying in customs duties fifteen dollars per head, or seventy-five dollars per family. Compared with the duties collected by other countries, the amount is appalling. No other country taxes its people per capita more than one-fifth as much in customs duties, as does the government of Canada. It may be said that these duties are largely paid by contractors importing machinery and materials used in the construction of great public works, and that the money to pay these contractors is borrowed in England. That is true enough, and in part explains why there is less complaint from the people. Our swollen customs receipts, which we imagine constitute a surplus, in reality are creamed from borrowed money which in some way must be paid back by the people of this country.

But even with our federal revenue considerably reduced, many beneficent works might be undertaken by the federal government. Agriculture, and agricultural education; technical education; the construction and improvement of highways; the construction and maintenance of sanitaria, hospitals and asylums; responsibility to the provinces for the expense thrown upon them by newly arrived immigrants; the establishment of federal courts, with federal juries and attorneys for enforcing all federal laws, including the criminal code — these matters, involving a large expenditure, can be taken in charge by the Dominion to the great relief of the provincial governments.

Women's "Lion Brand" Rubbers 63c

Sooner or later the winter will come and snowy or slushy weather will inevitably set in.

When this comes, one simply must have rubbers.

So that although you may not need them right away, let us point out the advisability of buying on Saturday when we are quoting a special price on those rubbers known as the "Lion Brand."

That these are sold everywhere for 75c speaks enough for their quality, and we would add that every size in every shape is procurable, the fit being all that one could desire. Saturday per pair..... 63c

—Second Floor

Some Smart Separate Skirts At $4.50

They are of pretty Tweed and heather mixtures in two piece cut, the panel design and trimmings of self straps and buttons giving a smart tailored effect.

All sizes in this skirt at 4.50

—Second Floor

See the Table of Stylish Millinery at $3.98

And when one gazes upon the smart shapes of felt, plush or velvet and notes the taste expressed in the trimming of them, could one really expect more for $3.98? That the value is beyond the ordinary one must admit, for some of these were marked at $6 only a few days ago. So there they are, in the Millinery showroom on second floor, awaiting the fortunate woman or girl who takes this advantage of securing a smart, seasonable hat.

Linoleums 4 yards wide, 44c square yard

We are sure that almost every woman will agree with us when we say, that there is not a floor covering easier to clean, and to keep clean, than Linoleum. You may put it in the hall, the bedroom or the kitchen; yet wherever it is placed it carries with it a brightness, and sense of cleanliness, that is unmistakeable. There are floral and tile designs to choose from, each being shown in a number of fine colourings, and the lino itself is of good heavy quality, finished with a hard surface. Moreover the price has been reduced for Saturday. Per square yard..... 44c

Third Floor

DOZENS WADED INTO THE FRESH CEMENT

Citizens Persisted in Overlooking the Condition of George Street

It was with something of the spirit of "we don't know we're going, but we're on our way," that many of the citizens waded into the layer of cement when it was newly laid on George street, and this in spite of the barriers that were erected, sufficient to warn anybody but the most absent minded.

The majority of the victims were women, who stepped from the sidewalk as thoughtlessly as a fly alighting on a sheet of "tanglefoot." In one case two ladies desired to take a short cut across and actually attempted to do so a few yards from the giant mixer. One of them, wearing low shoes, carried away a generous souvenir of cement.

Another young lady had made half the passage of the first section before she became aware that it was almost up to her boot tops. And a man thoughtlessly made the plunge close to the machine when it was near the Hunter street crossing, then apologized profusely under the impression that he had waded into the asphalt topping and damaged it. Examples are too numerous to mention, and even the curbing has suffered in the same way, necessitating an additional application of the trowel with which its surface was made smooth.

LIBERAL CANDIDATE IN PEEL MAKES FRIENDS

Avoids Personalities and Methods Are Clean—Has Relatives Here

Mr. A. H. Milner, the Liberal candidate in the Peel bye-election, is a son-in-law of Rev. H. M. Manning, formerly of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church, and a brother-in-law of Dr. Middleton of Peterborough. The fairness and cleanness with which Mr. Milner is conducting his campaign is wining the approval and good opinion of both parties. Yesterday's Globe indicates in the following despatch the methods which Mr. Milner is employing:

"Instead of returning the personalities and abusive epithets employed by the Conservatives, Mr. Milner rather does the opposite. He esteems his opponent, but he asks no quarter, neither does he grant any, in attacking the Whitney Administration. It is this total absence of personalities, marking Mr. Miller's campaign that has altered the whole outlook of the fight, so far as the Conservatives are concerned. They have introduced the personal eleemnt so much that one man described their meeting at Bolton as very dirty. The boomerang has done its work effectively, and the numbers of Conservatives who are disgusted with the treatment meted out to Mr. Milner, and who are withdrawing their auport, has scared the Conservative leaders in the fight.

Model Campaign by Liberals.

The Liberal campaign so far has been a model in electioneering methods. Many Conservatives were present at the meeting at Bolton last night, and they were highly pleased with the fair way Mr. Rowell presented his case, and with the absence of personalities, and the manly, straightforward utterances of Mr. Milner. His personality wins him friends everywhere, and the electors of Peel may well feel proud that such a man is contesting the seat.

SIXTY LOCAL PEOPLE TREATED AT GRAVENHURST

The statistics compiled in connection with the Gravenhurst Sanitorium for Consumptives show that sixty people from this City have been treated there since the opening of the Sanitarium. That number is the fifth largest of any municipality in Ontario. No less than ninety-three have been treated from the County of Peterborough and from only five counties have a greater number been treated. The report shows that a greater number of domestic workers and accountants, than people of any other occupations, have been treated there.

WILD DUCKS ARE CHEAPER THAN USUAL

Indians Receiving Only 60c. a Brace Instead of $1.00

Whether it is the fact that wild ducks are too plentiful or that the market is under a natural slump, the price is considerably under the average. Where ordinarily the price has been about $1 a pair, it is understood that the best offering at present is from 50c to 60c per brace. The average householder will scarcely go into ecstasies over the news, for wild ducks are known to most people only on the advertising hangers seen in the hardware store windows. When a fat hen or chicken is roasted to an appetizing dark brown and stuffed to the bursting point with breadcrumbs and sage, is plumped down before the majority of families they are willing to pass up the fancy species of ducks that fly in with the fall.

TO-DAY'S POLICE COURT NEWS

In Police Court this morning Jas. Sullivan pleaded guilty to a charge of being drunk and disorderly. Sullivan went into the Bell Telephone office and tried to run things but the police were sent for and he was arrested. This morning he was assessed $5.75.

COMPLIMENTS FOR MISS LONEGRAN'S ART

Played at Massey Hall, Toronto, Before Big Audience at Annual Recital

The Toronto press is loud in its praises of the annual recital given by the pupils of the Toronto College of Music.

The people of Toronto were evidently interested, as Massey Hall was filled to capacity.

As a general rule, the only artistes taking part in the programme are the pupils of the College in Toronto, but this year exception was made in favour of two graduates of Lindsay Convent. One of these was Miss Mary Lonergan, of Peterborough, who made her course with the sisters of St. Joseph in Lindsay, and took her degree, A.T.C.M., from the College of Music, Toronto.

This is a high compliment paid Miss Lonergan, as well as the Convent from which she graduated, and Peterborough is to be congratulated upon having so brilliant and promising a pianist.

The Globe says: "Miss Lonergan played Beethoven's Concerto in C Minor with a technical development that is very promising."

Instruction In Tactics

The officers of the 57th Regiment have within the last two days been receiving some instruction in tactical work from several officers from Kingston. This afternoon Lt.-Col. Clegg and a number of other officers devoted several hours to this instruction, the Lakefield road being the scene of operations. The manoeuvres will be discussed at a meeting to-night, and one of the visiting officers will give an address.

SOMETHING WRONG

By RUTH CAMERON

A few days ago I heard that the husband of a dear little friend of mine was seriously ill.

Yesterday, when I called on her to ask for the invalid and inquire if there was anything I could do, I was astonished to find her alone. Her husband had gone back to work that morning. Of course I congratulated her on his quick recovery.

Her eyes blazed. "But he has not recovered," she cried. "That is the terrible part of it. He ought to be right here in bed, and he's gone back to work because he's so afraid of losing his job. Why even when he was the sickest man and suffering agony he was still worrying about that job. When I think of it I get so angry that I see scarlet. Oh no, not angry at him, of course; just at things in general. It seems to me something must be dreadfully wrong when a man who knows how to work and wants to work as much as Jack does, isn't perfectly sure of a good place somewhere."

Something is dreadfully wrong.

And how anyone can blink that fact is beyond my understanding.

I have a friend who is a large employer of labour. He is a kindly, intelligent man, devoted to his family and generous to his friends, and yet I have heard him assert over and over again that things are all right—that this social agitation is nonsense—that there is no foundation for the feeling of unrest in our working classes, and that practically all labourers get as much as they earn.

Can you understand such an assertion on the part of an intelligent, kind-hearted man? I cannot.

When men fight over jobs as if they were bones, as Jack London puts it, when an intelligent man who wants to work cannot find a position in which he can support a small family, when a man at death's door must worry about his job, when some women work nine and ten hours a day for a wage on which they can barely support life, and cannot possibly save for sickness or old age, when other women wear diamonds in their heels, and spend enough on their pet poodles to support a large family in comfort, when other men manage to earn a billion dollars in a lifetime, —things are not all right, they are somehow terribly wrong.

I don't pretend to know just where the trouble is, or how it can be corrected, or of it can be entirely corrected while human nature is human nature, but this I know,—that things are not right, that a great many men and women do get what they don't earn.

And anyone who can sit back calmly content with things as they are, is either blindly selfish or selfishly blind.

URGED TO EXHIBIT.

Pressure Brought on Great Britain to Show at 'Frisco.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—With the view of asking the British Government to reconsider its decision in regard to participation in the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco in 1915, an influential committee has been formed here composed of the heads of the great steamship, commercial and manufacturing companies.

The London papers, in editorials this morning, call the Government's attention to the organization of a committee to take up the question of British participation in the Panama Pacific Exposition, and strongly urges reconsideration of its previous decision.

The Times argues that much new information has come to light, tending to justify Great Britain in being officially represented, while the reduction in the American tariff in itself constitutes a new fact of sufficient weight to change the directions of British policy.

Other papers employ similar arguments.

THEY MAIL THE SKINS.

Now Eskimos Get Ten Times As Much For Skins.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31. — The benefits of the parcel post have extended to the Eskimo, and he is making use of the newest of Uncle Sam's aids to cheap transportation to the advantage of his own pocket and the discomfiture of the fur companies.

According to advices received in Washington yesterday the price of white fox skin among Eskimos in northern Alaska has jumped from $2 to more than $20 in the last few months. The natives have learned that they do not need to sell the skins to the fur traders, but that they can send them direct to the States to avoid the middlemen. Polar bear and other valuable skins have taken corresponding jumps in price at the source.

Adolph Busch Willed Income on $50,000,000 to Family.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 31.—Each of the heirs of Adolphus Busch, who, according to the will filed here late on Wednesday, are to have shares of the trust into which the estate is to be formed, will have an annual income of $375,000 a share, or more than $1,000 a day.

The son, August A. Busch, who succeeds his father in the management of the vast properties, is to have two shares of the trust, and his income consequently will be $700,000 a year, minus the provision, he is required to make for his invalid brother Carl.

These figures were made known yesterday by a high officer of the Busch Corporations. According to this officer, the income of the estate is estimated at $3,000,000, which is a 6 per cent. return on a valuation of $50,000,000. The heirs are the widow and the seven children.

Railroad Blasting Kills Salmon Eggs.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Railroad blasting operations on a tributary of the Fraser River, in Washington, having killed more than one million salmon and prevented the spawning of between two and three billion sockeye salmon eggs, the Department of Commerce announced yesterday that the fish-loving American public might expect a decided shortage in its favorite article of food three to five years hence. The Department pronounces the slaughter of the fish to be a "catastrophe."

Methodist to Hold St. James'.

MONTREAL, Oct. 31.—St. James' Methodist Church trustees have decided to retain the church on the present site, and will hold a ten days' canvass to raise $153.50 weekly continuously as additional funds necessary to make the income equal to expenditure. Also they will try to raise a team of a hundred young men to promise twenty-five cents each weekly.

Yeggmen Blew Up Safe..

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Oct. 31.—Yeggmen of exceptional daring blew up the postoffice safe in East Rochester about three o'clock yesterday morning and succeeded in making their escape with a large quantity of stamps. Several thousand dollars, deposited in an inner drawer, was undisturbed, giving the impression that the yeggs were pressed for sufficient time to make a thorough search.

Potteries' Strike Widening.

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio, Oct. 31. —Additional potteries in the East Liverpool district closed their doors yesterday because of the strike on Wednesday of 200 claymakers, although decorators are still at work in some plants, finishing the tableware on hand.

VERULAM FARMERS SELL PRIZE SEED

Mr. Chas. H. Thurston of Verulam township, has received an order of some twelve hundred bushels of his celebrated Yellow Russian seed oats for which he took so many prizes, including Toronto and Ottawa. Mr. Thurston will make a specialty of seed oats, and will steadily improve his strain by selection and breeding.

Mr. A. Long also did well in the field competition and is shipping his oats for seed.

MR. DAN WHETUNG GETS TRAPPING PRIVILEGES

Dan Whetung, Sr., has ben around Emily Creek to the farmers, asking from them a permit to trap along the end of their lots that run into the creek and got it, from the mouth of the creek and up to Downeyville on both sides of the creek. This should be made a note of because any other persons trapping will be trespassing, and acting illegally.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

COME IN AND INSPECT OUR DAIRY

We absolutely guarantee that no preservatives are used in our milk. All our milk is bought from the best rural dairies. It is clarified by centrifugal force; then pasteurized — that is, heated to a temperature of 140 degrees. After holding for 20 minutes, it is cooled to a temperature of 40 degrees, then bottled in sterilized bottles, placed in a refrigerator at 30 degrees temperature, and delivered to our customers next morning.

Filed Her Claim

Doris Reid, who has taken action to annul her marriage to Robert Aull, has filed her statement of claim.

Miss Reid, who sues through her father, George P. Reid, says that Aull came to Cobourg about July 16, 1913, from St. Louis, Miss.

Ceremony on July 25th.

Miss Read says:

"The plaintiff was permitted to visit at Cobourg at the house of a friend of her mother, and went there for such a visit about a week before the 25th of July, 1913.

"On the 25th of July, 1913," a marriage ceremony was performed between the plaintiff and the defendant, and the defendant has since set up that such a ceremony constituted a contract of marriage between the plaintiff and defendant.

"The plaintiff never knowingly promised or agreed to marry the defendant, and any such ceremony referred to was unreal and was without consent of the said plaintiff.

"The plaintiff never met the defendant until about a week before the 25th of July, and then only occasionally, and the defendant was practically a stranger to the plaintiff.

"On the 25th of July, and as before stated, no promise or agreement of marriage was ever consciously made by the plaintiff and the defendant consistent with such promise or agreement, or with a marriage contract."

It is stated that Robert Aull, Jr., represented himself as of good standing, socially and otherwise, and in independent circumstances.

The statement of claim adds:

Imposition and Deception.

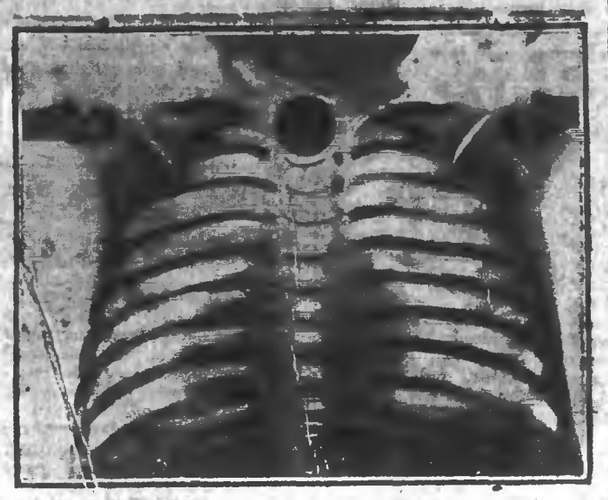
"During the week preceding the 25th day of July, the plaintiff and the defendant met occasionally, and on such occasions the defendant imposed upon, deceived, and misled the plaintiff by inducing her to take intoxicating drinks and thereby and by the practice of fraud and deceit he acquired an evil influence and direction over and upon the will and mind of the plaintiff.

"By deceit and fraud, and through ill and wrongful influences and misstatements, the defendant procured control and mastery of the mind and will of the plaintiff, and the plaintiff became and was incapable and unable to exercise an independent judgment and discretion, and under such circumstances the defendant procured the alleged marriage ceremony.

"On the 25th of July, and shortly before the performance of the ceremony hereinbefore referred to, the defendant induced and procured the plaintiff to take a strong intoxicating drink, whereby she lost her presence of mind and self-control, and became incapable of reasonable thought and action, and while in that condition the defendant wrongfully procured the plaintiff to go through the ceremony of marriage."

The statement declares that the fact of non-residence in Northumberland County was suppressed by the defendant in obtaining the license.

Very soon after the ceremony, it is stated, Miss Reid was rescued by her friends and the marriage was never consummated.



JIMMIE MITCHELL AND HIS COIN—Clearly showing the Canadian copper lodged in little Jimmie's trachea. The child's throat was working convulsively when the X-Ray man did his work and it was necessary to take the picture between the spasmodic movements of the throat. The little chap was operated upon on Tuesday, and is now in a favourable condition at the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto. The boy was playing about in his bed yesterday morning with the copper in his mouth, and in some way swallowed it.

A READING LAMP FOR REV. F. A. CONNERS

The members of the Helping Hand Bible Class of the Park Street Baptist Church surprised their leader and pastor, Rev. F. A. Conners, at his residence, 229 Princess Street, last night on the occasion of his birthday. About forty of the members called at Rev. Mr. Conners' home and announced their intentions in an address, read by Mr. Geo. Watley, president of the class, who represented the men. The pastor was congratulated upon arriving at another anniversary of his natal day, and complimented him upon the work which he has accomplished in his pastorates. The address closed with wishes that Mr. Conners be spared many years for his work.

Mrs. Inkpin, who represented the ladies' section of the class, made the presentation of an electric reading lamp. Mr. Conners expressed his appreciation of the kindness and generosity of the class. A pleasant social evening was enjoyed, with an impromptu programme, and refreshments were served.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS TO MEET

A meeting of all the Sunday School workers will be held at St. Andrew's Sunday School Hall on Thursday evening, Nov. 4th, at 8 o'clock. The purpose of the assembly is to hear and discuss the reports of the delegates who attended the Provincial Convntion. A large attendance is expected.

Craft Stranded In The Canal

Low water in the canal is given as the cause of the Ajax and Rainbow running aground in the canal yesterday. The tug was bringing a load of wood for Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald, when it got into difficulties just below Lock No. 5, and grounded. The Rainbow, with a scow of hogs, tried to pass the stranded craft, but met the same difficulty. The boats were floated this morning.

Sent To Tombs

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—The role of millionaire played by John C. Schildknecht, an eighteen-dollar-a-week bookkeeper in the Washburn-Crosby Flour company's office, ended today when Schildknecht was sent to the Tombs prison, charged with embezzling nearly $50,000 from his employers. For nearly a year the bookkeeper and a young woman who said she was his wife lived in princely style at the Garden City hotel. There Schildknecht was host at some of the most extravagant parties of the season. To his friends in Garden City he was known as a prince of spenders, and believed to be enormously wealthy.

Two months ago Schildknecht disappeared. A shortage of about $50,000 was discovered in his firm's books. An indictment was found by the grand jury against Schildknecht, and until last night his whereabouts was a mystery. The young woman, known as Mrs. Schildknecht, declared that she did not know where he had gone. Last night Schildknecht was taken from a rooming house in Brooklyn by detectives. When confronted by the police, Schildknecht declared that he was through with the "crooked life," and wanted to tell everything. He said that the greater part of the money taken by him had found its way into the hands of the girl with whom he lived.

"Get the girl," he said. "Keep a watch over her, and I'll give you enough on her to send her away for the rest of her life."

FEAR.

Was anything ever done by one who was afraid?

Would Columbus have made his discovery of the New World if he had been burdened with dark forebodings?

Would the gospel ever have been preached to the remotest parts of the world if the missionary had feared his mission

Would there have been a United States of the signers of the Declaration of Independence had feared for their lives, as well they might?

Would the railroads have crossed the continent and pierced the desert, and would our captains of industry have had the courage of their convictions, in building our industries —the wonder of the world for size, output and wages—if they had been timid while risking millions.

Was a battle ever won by a general who feared? Was ever a great cause vindicated by one without a strong heart and undying hope? Was ever a prize secured by a competitor who did not enter the race believing he must and would win?

Is anything more contemptible than cowardice? Is anything more noble than courage? Is anything more childish than fear, or anything sweeter than confidence in an age of unrest, unreason, suspicion and disturbance?

Let us turn from the dismal swamps and lift our eyes to the hills. Let hope inspire and courage strengthen and the battle will be won.

This is the lesson to teach the children in our schools, to tell to the patient toiler at his work, to speak to the anxious business man at his desk, to impress upon the preacher in his pulpit and the counsellor in the hall of legislation.

And Faint Heart Never Won Fair Lady.

While he was playing on a certain Scottish course, a politician remarked to his caddie: 'By the way, the last time I was here I played with Tom McGregor. He's a grand player!" "Aye," said the caddie, "but ye could beat McGregor noo." The politician, knowing what a fine player McGregor had shown himself, was immensely pleased at what he deemed the caddie's compliment to his own improved play. "Do you think so?" he exclaimed. "Aye," came the slow reply, "McGregor's deid!"

LEAGUE HAS POWER TO DROP TEAMS IF THE CLUBS SEE FIT TO DO SO

Hamilton Spectator—There has been a movement on foot in Canadian League circles for some time to drop the two weak members of the circuit, Guelph and Berlin, and either continue as a six-club circuit or take Niagara Falls and Erie, Pa., into the fold. This movement has met with considerable support, but the Guelph and Berlin clubs are strenuously opposed to any such a move, and have come out flat-footed with the statement that they could not be dropped from the league membership unless they were willing to hand over their franchises or they violated league rules and were then deprived of their franchises. In making this claim the Berlin and Guelph owners may have been sincere, and may have believed that they were right, but if they will take time to look into the constitution of the Canadian League, and read closely the paragraph headed "Termination of Membership," they will notice that there is a joker among the thirteen reasons for depriving any club of its franchise. The joker comes in clause 12, which is as follows:

"The membership of any club may be terminated for business reasons on a majority vote."

This alone is enough to enable the club owners to drop Berlin and Guelph if they so desire, although it is doubtful if they would go as far as cold bloodedly throwing out the two clubs without some compensation to the people concerned. The authority is there, however, and may be exercised if President Fitzgerald has rounded up better locations for the two franchises concerned.

RUGBY DOUBLE-HEADER AT NICHOLLS OVAL TO-MORROW

The Rugby fans who saw last Saturday's splendid game between Lindsay and Peterborough Collegiates, will be glad to learn that the local Collegiate team has arranged another game for to-morrow afternoon at Nicholls Oval, playing a picked Lakefield team. The visitors will be older and heavier than the local students, their line-up being picked from the village and including several of the teachers from the Grove School.

The programme to-morrow consists of a double-header as the Collegiate Seconds will meet the Grove School, Lakefield, in a game before the senior game, the first match being called at 1 o'clock. The double bill should attract a big crowd to the Oval as the youngsters play fast, snappy Rugby.

The Collegiate senior team will line-up as follows:

Flying-wing—Richardson.
Halves—Rogers (captain), Long, Smith.
Quarter—Stratton.
Scrimmage—Cann, Huycke, Horsfield.
Inside-wings—Stevenson, Canniff.
Middle-wings—Jobbitt, Knox.
Outside-wings — Eastwood, Macdonald.

To Test Alaska Coal.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 31.—The steamer General Hubbard is on the way from San Francisco to Seattle to take on board three hundred heavy horses and nearly 300 tons of supplies to be landed at Knik, Cook Inlet, Alaska.

The horses will haul to Knik the 800 tons of coal mined last summer in the Matanuska field by the U. S. Government expedition. The coal is to be tested by a man-of-war to determine its availability for naval purposes.

HOLLY AS MANAGER OF THE KOLTS

Hamilton Spectator: That McCaffery is losing little time in getting down to business is evident from the fact that he sent for Eddie Holly, the Toronto shortstop, to come over from Rochester to talk things over. The Toronto president is of the opinion that Holly would make an ideal manager for the local club and the pair will have a conference to-day, although nothing definite will be announced as regards managership for some time yet. Holly is very eager to secure an interest in the club, and only a week ago endeavoured to purchase the interest held by M. M. Robinson, the latter refusing to sell. McCaffery is strongly opposed to the manager having any financial interest in the club, and said this morning: "It is a bad business. You want a manager whom you can let out if he doesn't make good. If he has an interest in the club this is pretty hard to do. Knotty Lee was a part owner and it didn't work and hasn't in a great many cases."

RUGBY

The big feature of to-morrow's Rugby schedule is the Inter-provincial game at Ottawa betwen the Ottawa Combines and the Argonauts. The latter must win to keep in the running.

BASEBALL

Ottawa Free Press: Writing to Mike Powell, of this city, Joe "Don't Worry," Byrne, the Peterborough third sacker who resides in Philadelphia, says Jimmy McAvoy the Berlin catcher, made a wonderful hit with the Athletic fans at the close of the American League season. Byrne declares McAvoy is up there to stay.

HOCKEY

Berlin is the centre of one of the most compact intermediate O. H. A. hockey groups in the big association, and the clubs expect the greatest year ever in amateur hockey. The teams are Berlin, Preston, Waterloo, New Hamburg and Elmira. The Preston team looms up something like this: Goal, Short; point, Ploethner; coverpoint, Peiffer; rover, Bowman; centre, Etherington; wings, Mulroy and Rahn.

The Berlin probable line-up will be: Goal, Hainsworth; point, Trushinski; coverpoint, Nichols; rover, Boettger; centre, Soloman; wings, Seibert and W. Uffelman. The Waterloo team: Goal, Richardson, formerly of Niagara Falls; point, H. Forler; coverpoint, O. Uffelman; rover, Forlier, formerly with Paris in 1910-11; centre, Stahe, the star of the Waterloo-Oxford League wings, Webber, another Western Ontario League star, and Jack Kube, of Port Arthur; besides several others to choose from.

New Hamburg has practically the same team as they had last season with the exception of two or three players and the vacancies will be filled with fast juniors of last years team. The line-up: Goal, Beck; point, Livingstone; coverpoint, Kaufman; rover, Hall; centre, Brown; wings, Otto Ritz and Forler.

Executive members of the Peterborough Hockey Club are remindd of the meeting to-night at the Oriental Hotel at 7.15 o'clock. Important business will come up for discussion.

NO IMPROVEMENT YET.

Bonar Law's Speech Does Not Bette Ulster Situation.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—If it were not for the statement yesterday by The Manchester Guardian's well-informed London correspondent that "the Prime Minister and Leader Bonar Law have already had an opportunity of seeing a formal statement of each other's view on the whole question," it might reasonably be assumed that Bonar Law's speech Wednesday night leaves the situation exactly as it was before, although both he and Premier Asquith seem in public to be warily skating round the outer fringe of the proposals for negotiations. As with the Premier's Ladybank speech, so with Bonar Law's oration. The criticism of newspapers opposed to the speaker make the more interesting reading.

Among the Liberal papers yesterday The Manchester Guardian alone exhibits real hopefulness.

Bonar Law's plea for a general election is summarily dismissed by all Ministerial papers save one—The Westminster Gazette.

THIRD LANARK FOOTBALLERS MAY CLAIM A REPLAY

Referee Controlled the Final Tie With a 60,000 Crowd Looking On---Number of Referees Struck Off the List

An extraordinary denouement has occurred in connection with the Glasgow Cup final tie recently played and won by Rangers. Mr. J. S. Muir, who officiated as referee in the game, had previously been struck off the official list of referees by the Scottish Football Association and was thus ineligible to officiate as he did. Of course it was not his fault as notification of his suspension did not reach him until he returned to his home on the same evening.

The question is, "Can Third Lanark claim a replay of the game, on the ground that the referee was not eligible to act." I hardly think so but it is a very unique position all the same.

What makes the action of the S.F.A. more peculiar is the fact, that Mr. Muir controlled the final tie with a 60,000 crowd looking on, in most exemplary fashion. It is even admitted that no referee in the British Isles could have handled the game with greater efficiency.

The ways of the S.F.A. are hard to understand and it will not surprise me the least if the Referees' Association proclaim a strike some of these days and give some of the meddlesome cub officials something to think about. The big gates would soon diminish were "scab" referees to control the games.

Such referees as Stark (Cambuslang), Kelso (Hamilton), Bell (Dundee), and Mark (Parkhead), have recently been struck off the list and not it is Mr. Muir. All the men are known to be capable referees. But you might as well ask, "What are the wild waves saying?" as ask the S.F.A., "What do you mean to get at?"

A Great Victory.

After the crushing defeat (5-0) inflicted by the Scottish Lague team on the select of the Southern League, and the form shown by the Scots, it is not expcted that there will be many Anglo Scots seen in the International games this season. The teams were as follows:

Southern League.

Webster (Watford);
Collyer (Crystal Palace) and Ireland (Southampton);
Conrie (Reading), Mitchell (Q.C. Rangers), and Higham (Brighton);
Jefferson (Swindon), Ingham (Norwich), Davis (Millwall), Bowler (Plymouth Argyle), and Evans (Cardiff City).

Scottish League.

Brownlie (Third Lanark);
McNair and Dodds (Celtic);
Gordon (Rangers), Mercer (Hearts) (captain), and Nellies (Hearts);
McAtee (Celtic), Bowie (Rangers), Reid (Airdrie), Croal (Falkirk), and McNeil (Hamilton Academicals).

Glossop Fined.

The Commission of the Football Association appointd to inquire into the affairs and working of the Glossop Football Club reports that some amateur players have incurred extravagant expenses, and in the management of the club there has been culpable negligence and laxity. The Commission suggests that the members of the committee of the club be severely censured, the club fined £100, to go to the benefit fund of the Association, and pay the expenses of the Association.

The English Final.

The Finance Committee of the Football Association will make the following report to the Consultative Committee, which meets today—"The sub-committee fully reported the negotiations for the providing of a suitable ground and stands at the Crystal Palace for the playing of the final tie in future years. A scheme was approved which the committee were in due course prepared to recommend to the council."

WEDDING BELLS

HALL—LEE.

A pretty wedding took place in Deer Park Presbyterian Church, when the marriage was solemnized of Miss Edith Grace Lee, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Lee, and Mr. I. Hamilton Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hall, of Peterborough. The Rev. George B. McLeod officiated. The bride, who was given away by her father, was wearing her travelling costume, a smart navy blue tailored suit and blue French hat and brown marabout ruff. She carried a bouquet of orchids and lily of the valley and wore the groom's gift, a diamond bracelet. Her sister, Miss Theodora Lee, as bridesmaid, wore a pretty gown of King's blue chiffon over ivory charmeuse and chinchilla hat with blue feathers. Her flowers were pink roses and her gift an emerald and pearl pin. Mr. Harry Hall was his brother's best man and Mr. Walter Lee and Mr. Lionel Amsden acted as ushers. The two latter received gold cuff links from the groom, the gift to the former being a silver cigarette case. Mr. and Mrs. Hall left immediately after the ceremony for New York. On their return they will reside in St. Clair avenue.—Toronto News.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

To-morrow promises a waiting market. This outlook is based on the tendency in provincial circles to wait declaration of the administration with regard to the Mexican policy. The market will be the better for the quiet of a few days, owing to the November disbursements, which are acting as a moderate strain on call funds. Next week this should be relieved. The money situation is very favorable in the United States. There is no great demand for the crop moving and yet Europe is compelled to maintain high rates to prevent a volume movement of gold to this country. We believe S. P., G. Q., B. O. and St. Paul's, Erie and A. C. P. should be bought on weakness. Union Pacific, Rdg., and Steel have large short interests that may elevate them any time.

MUST BOW TO THE PEOPLE.

If the Conservative leaders are wi they will make the best terms the can for Ulster, and make up the minds with regard to the reform of t House of Lords, and the amendmen of the Parliament Act, that the tw great parties must be placed on a equal footing in regard to legislation It is too late to oppose the rules o majorities, too late to defeat the pu poses of representative democracy. W may not like, we certainly shall no like, everything that is done in th name, or by the authority of the r presentatives of the people. But th true wisdom of Conservatives is to en deavour to guide and moderate, not t thwart or destroy, the forces of dem ocracy. If they adopt and support th methods of Sir Edward Carson, th most they can hope for is a period o disorder and anarchy, from which pro perty, privilege, constitutional con ventions, and legal sanctions will no emerge unscathed.

OLD STRICKLAND HOMESTEAD TOTALLY DESTROYED BY FIRE

One of Lakefield's Historic Residences Falls Prey to the Flames at an Early Hour This Morning —Nothing Saved.

COVERED BY INSURANCE

(Special to Examingr.)

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 1.—One of the historic residences of this section was wiped out early this morning when a fire broke out in the old Strickland homestead just north of the village, totally destroying the structure. The house which was a substantial stone building, was one of the oldest in the neighbourhood, and had been occupied by the Strickland family for many years, although for the past couple of years it was unoccupied in the winter months, while it was used as a summer residence by Mr. McGaw the proprietor of the Queen's Hotel, in Toronto, who rented it for that purpose.

Mr. McGaw left some time ago and the house, which was fully furnished, has been vacant. About 2 o'clock this morning the building was discovered to be on fire by some one who saw the blaze from the village and he gave the alarm. The Lakefield Brigade turned out, but on their arrival found the house a mass of flames which they were powerless to check. A strong wind was blowing which fanned the fire to greater fury and it was soon seen that the building was doomed.

A barn across the road, belonging to Mr. Ed. Whatley, caught fire, but the incipient blaze was soon extinguished.

The origin of the fire in the Strickland homestead is somewhat of a mystery, although some citizens attribute it to a spark from the house next door. The building was owned by Mr. R. C. Strickland, whose loss will be covered by insurance.

MOTHER OFFERED $50 FOR RELEASE OF MIDNIGHT SON

Caught in the Police Nets Last Night For Some Infraction of the Hallowe'en Law

MOTHERS WERE WORRIED

At the hour when Hallow-e'en was at odds with All Saints' morn and only revellers were on the streets the police station had the "Standing Room only" sign out. Ten youths, rounded up by the police, were demanding to be released, and anxious parents pleaded in vain with Sergeant Adams.

"You should have kept them in the house," said the Police Sergeant to one parent who telephoned th polic station at 12.30.

"No, we can't take any money. They're in here and they have to stay until they appear before the Magistrate, in the morning.

The mother said that her "Harold" went out for only half an hour, and he must have fallen in with bad boys who did the damage.

"It's always the others. There is no use in coming down here. He'll be all right until morning."

Offered $50.

About half-past twelve a worried-looking woman entered the Station and wanted to get her boy out. She offered Sergeant Adams $25 and increased it to $50, but he pointed out that he could accept nothing."

"Keeping him in there will make him bad," sobbed the mother.

"Has he been crying," she inquired. If she had been present a short time earlier she would have heard the old song "Hail Hail, the Gang's All Here."

Finding the Sergeant obdurate, the mother said, "I'll get him out some way. I'm going up to Mr. Dumble, and see what he will do." And the woman banged the door at about fifteen minutes to one o'clock and started for the Police Magistrate's home to rouse the Magistrate from his early morning slumbers.

Why the Destructiveness?

"It gets me," remarked Sergeant Adams, "why the boys see red on Hallow-e'en when they get within reaching distance of a fence. Years ago the young fellows used to have lots of fun, but they weren't as destructive as they seem to be now. The favourite amusement is to pull a fence over and then every one scampers to meet again in a few minutes."

The police gathered the ten boys in groups or twos and threes. The regular and special officers would be posted at each corner of a certain block and others would have a roving commission within that area. If something happened in the block the youths would run for the corners and were easy marks for the police.

GARNET INNIS CONVICTED ON CHARGE OF SERIOUS NATURE

Charged With Supplying Drugs to a Young Girl for Criminal Purposes—Prisoner is Found Guilty by His Honour Judge Huycke.

SENTENCE WAS RESERVED

Garnett Innis, who was charged with having supplied drugs for criminal purposes, was convicted by His Honour Judge Huycke in the County Court on Friday afternoon. Sentence was deferred one week with a view of facilitating a compromise whereby the accused will make some provision for the seventeen-year-old girl, whos ruin he admitted having accomplished. Innis, who is an expressman, will be required to remain in gaol during the interim. Up to the present he has been allowed out on bail; but at the conclusion of the case late yesterday afternoon the trial Judge directed that Innis be confined in gaol. The prisoner was defended by Mr. G. N. Gordon, while the prosecution was conducted by Crown Attorney E. E. Wood.

At the opening of the case Crown Attorney Wood prefaced his remarks with the suggestion that the younger element of the spectators be excluded from the court room owing to the degrading nature of the case. The suggestion was not acted upon, although before the conclusion of the case a couple of seat-holders in the gallery were expelled for having disturbed the dignity and decorum of the Court by laughing at the confusion of a witness who was under examination.

Stayed Two Hours.

The evidence went to show that Innis first became acquainted with the girl, who was the material witness for the Crown, during the occasion of a business call at a house in the west end of the City, where the girl was employed as a domestic. The girl's employers were away at the time of Innis' first visit. He remained for two hours and before leaving arranged to take the girl for a drive. This proposed drive materialized a few days later and also subsequent drives with an occasional trip to the theatre sandwiched in. One of the shows attended by the couple was entitled 'Bought and Paid For." It was shortly after this that the accused is said to have accomplished he girl's ruin. Criminal relations continued for some time until finally the girl showed symptoms of motherhood. It was at this stage that Innis is alleged to have supplied noxious drugs for criminal purposes. The girl took a quantity of the medicine and eventually visited a doctor, who ascertained the true cause of her condition. It was then that the circumstances of the case were revealed and legal action instituted. The wrappings which are said to have contained the drugs in question were produced in court. A coterie of George Street merchants, comprising Messrs. R. Fair, A. McPherson, R. Denne, W. T. Conway, and John Miller were called upon by the defence to give character evidence, which tended to show that the prisoner's reputation was beyond reproach. In cross-examination by Crown Attorney Wood, it was admitted that Innis' character was kpown to the witnesses only in a business way.

Was An Accomplice.

Mr. Gordon in pressing for the acquittal, intimated that the refusal on Innis' part to marry the girl, precipitated the prosecution. He contended that the principal witness for the crown was an accomplice in the case in that she made use of the durgs said to have been supplied by Innis.

Crown Attorney Wood characterized the prisoner as a blackguard. He exonerated the druggist who sold the medicine and opined that the manufacturers should indicate on the label the purpose for which such medicine is intended. Mr. Wood regarded the prisoner's evidence as unreliable and asked the Court to discount it. The prosecution, he claimed, was in the interests of public morality and prevention of crime. In conclusion, Mr. Wood asked the Court to believe the girl's evidence, especially as Innis had shown himself to be such a degraded character.

His Honour Judge Huycke in finding the prisoner guilty, said that the evidence for the defence was largely based on character testimony. Continuing he said that a man's reputation stands only so long as that prove worthy. He hoped that the case would be an object lesson for those who were present in Court.

In conclusion his Honour said that he would defer sentence one week and intimated that if some form of reparation was made, it might be the means of mitigating the sentence.

HERO OF HONAN WILL VISIT THE CITY TO-MORROW

Rev. Dr. Murdoch MacKenzie, Moderator of the Presbyterian Church to Give Three Addresses Here To-morrow

A NOTEWORTHY VISIT

There is no question but that the three Presbyterian Churches in this City will have large congrgations to-morrow when Rev. Dr. Murdoch MacKenzie visits them and delivers an address in each. Dr. MacKenzie will preach in St. Paul's in the morning, and at St. Andrew's at the regular evening service. In order that he may visit the three churches, Knox Church will open its evening service at 7.30 p.m. He will, by this arrangement be able to give an address to each congregation.

There is no Archbishop in the Presbyterian Church. There are plenty of Bishops, but there is no Archbishop. If there were Dr. MacKenzie would be that man, although he would be the last man in Canada to assume that office of his own accord. When Dr. MacKenzie was elected Moderator, after the great Congress, last May, it was with the remarkable coincidence that from the Atlantic to the Pacific his was the only name before the Church. His name was on every lip. Why? Because the Canadian Presbyterian Church realized that Dr. Murdoch MacKenzie was the man for the honour, and it would be honouring itself in honouring him. His personal worth and his splendid service to the Church marked him for the office. In addition to this, the Presbytery of Honan, which he represents, is the first outpost Presbytery largely the result of his and others services of twenty-five years in that part of China. Dr. MacKenzie is a Highland Scot by birth, a Canadian by training, but a real Chinaman by adoption—

"He loved not Canada near so much, Loved he not China more."

As a speaker he has few equals. As he described the growth of Christianity in China at the last great Congress he was loudly applauded. His description of the Boxer movement in China was vividly terrible. "No land," said he, "in all the world is as dear to me as China is."

To honour this "Hero of Honan" and to hear his inspiring messages there will be eager faces at the Presbyterian places of worship to-morrow.

A MYSTERIOUS SHOOTING AFFAIR

Cyril Devey Injured by a Stray Bullet on the Chemong Road, the Missile Piercing Two of His Fingers.

WHO FIRED THE SHOT?

Cyril Devey, son of Mr. R. J. Devey, organist and choirmaster of St. John's Church, was the victim of a painful and mysterious accident on the Chemong Road last night, when a bullet from a .22 calibre rifle penetrated two fingers of his hand.

Just how the accident—if indeed it was an accident — occurred, is unknown to thei njured boy. With another young lad, he was on his way to a party at the residence of Mr. Harold Sanderson, in Smith Township. On leaving their destination they observed a group of boys engaged in a Hallowe'en prank of tearing down a fence, and made a rush at the party, driving them away. Shortly after the sharp crack of a small calibre rifle sounded from a field and young Devey felt a pain in his hand as if he had been hit with a stone. He did not realize that he had been shot until he reached the Sanderson house when it was found that the bullet had passed completely through one finger, and almost through another digit, remaining at the back of the finger. Medical assistance was summoned and the injury attended to.

It is a mystery as to who fired the shot. Inquiries in the neighbourhood last night failed to throw any light on the mystery.

High County Constable Cochrane was on the job in the district and rounded up thirteen youths who will be brought before the Magistrate on a charge of disorderly conduct.

THE POLITICAL POT IS BOILING OVER

British Isles Will be Seething With Enthusiasm Next Week When the Biggest Schemes of Education in Politics in History Will Commence.

BOTH SIDES ACTIVE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 1.—(Special Cable)—Next week the British Isles will be seething with political enthusiasm, the big speakers of both parties being billed to speak at various points. The organizers of the parties have planned for the biggest schemes of education in party politics in the history of British election by people. Every little hamlet will have its political debating clubs, Unionist or Liberal, or both. It is quite evident that the Unionist leaders regard Ulster and anti-Home Rule as their top card. On Monday next in Aberdeen, ex-Leader Balfour will open the Scottish campaign and will make Home Rule his principal topic. Carson will rally the Belfast business men on Tuesday, and the campaign in England itself will be opened with simultaneous meetings addressed by Austin Chamberlain and F. E. Smith. Outside of Ireland, the Liberals in their announcements of next week's meetings are pinning their faith more to the land campaign than to Home Rule. Their idea is that the Government's Irish Policy has now been sufficiently well explained and it rests with the Unionists to convince the people if they can that the Home Rule scheme should not be carried out. In the meantime there are more evidences this morning that King George si using his personal influence towards a settlement of the Irish problem.

Reuben E. Truax—A new picture of Mr. Truax, the Liberal candidate who won the election in South Bruce. He got a majority of 125 over the Conservative candidate, Wellington Cargill. The last member of the constituency was J. J. Donnelly, now a Senator. Senator Donnelly is a Conservative and had a majority of 103.

"THE LAND OF GOLDEN DREAMS"

D. Hope Leonard's eastern success —"Land of Golden Dreams"—spectacular dramatization of Miss Leonard's masterpiece of literature is to be repeated here at the Grand Opera House under the auspices of the ladies of St. John's Church. Miss Leonard will personally superintend this magnificent spectacle with all of its wealth of rich costumes, properties, scenic light enects, etc.

"Land of Golden Dreams". It's a new thing and people always like something new; but more than that, it is one of the prettiest things ever seen here. This gorgeous spectacular production will be presented to the Peterborough public.

It's an operette, a little one — a light one—but an altogether delightful one in which three hundred and fifty of our own people will take part, and the rich and beautiful costumes they will wear will render the scenes charming. The operetta was adapted by Miss D. Hope Leonard, of New York, from her famous story that has been the delight of young and old. The libretto is full of sparkling witticisms and lively dialogue, and the music bright and catchy, and all will follow with joy the development of the pretty plot.

PROBABILITIES.

Forecasts—Strong westerly winds, fair. Sunday, fresh southwest winds, fair, with a little higher temperature.

ALBERTA TOWN NEARLY WIPED OUT

Special Wire to The Examiner.

STROME, Alta., Nov. 1.—The whole business section of this town has been destroyed and fire appliances are being rushed from Camrose, Wetaskiwin, Hardisty and Edmonton on special trains to help save what remains of the residential section. The loss is already $100,000. An overturned lamp started the fire.

Note—Strome is about 80 miles southeast of Edmonton on the Hardisty branch of the C.P.R.

Recital By Jessie Alexander

The recital by Jessie Alexander in the Conservatory of Music Hall on Mnoday evening promises to attract a crowded house. The talented elocutionist who is a prime favourite here, will give an entirely new programme, featuring a delightful novelty entitled "Their Daughter's Voice," in which a solo by Madame Sembrich on the Victrola will be effectively introduced. The Conservatory will assist. Tickets 35 cents.

Deputation Made Request

A deputation from the local Council of Women waited on Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., manager of the Grand Opera House, yesterday afternoon, in an effort to prevent the presentation here of Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw in Mariette. However, Mr Turner informed the ladies that the attraction had been cancelled. It was originally booked for November eleventh, but it has been replaced by the musical comedy "The Moon Maid." The local Council of Women believed it not to be in the highest interests of the patrons of the Grand to attend "Marsette" with Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw as the chief drawing card.

WELL LIGHTED SHOW WINDOWS

Modern business methods demand the use of the most efficient equipment available. The progressive merchant is doing all he can to-day in lighting his show windows in such a way as will display the merchandise he is offering, and not his lighting fixtures. Such is the evident design in the lighting of the Creesman store show windows. They are brilliantly illuminated, but the lamps are not placed so that the organs of the eey are affected by the bright illumination. The light is reflected down on the goods, and is not wasted on the ceiling. This equipment was installed by Messrs. Grant & Thorpe, 430 George Street, who are intelligent il luminating experts.

MISS PALMER TO PLAY.

Miss Edwina Palmer will play as a violin solo, "Come With Me," from "The Messiah," at the evening service in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church to-morrow.

C. B. ROUTLEY PREPARING FOR CHRISTMAS TRADE

Any one taking a survey of Mr. C. B. Routley's Fancy Goods Store at present, will be strongly reminded that Christmas will come this year, as usual. The contents of boxes, bales and crates of goods from European manufacturers of fancy crockery, cut glass, lamps, leather novelties, toys, and fancy goods galore, as well as fine wall papers and window decorations, are arriving in quick succession.

A heavy shipment of next spring's wall papers has just been received, and every effort is being made to find room for all the goods. These wall papers are being pushed out at manufacturers' prices in order to help lighten the load in the store. Mr. Routley's is one of the three oldest established business houses now in the city, and he is just as ambitious and enterprising as he was over things years ago when he first hung out his shingle in Peterborough.

REV. MR. KEITH AT CENTREVILLE

Rev. H. Keith, Moderator of the Centreville Charge, will conduct service there to-morrow morning, the last service before the new minister takes charge. Mr. Keith will return for his class and the evening service at 7:30.

Chief Of Police Is Discharged

PORT HOPE, Oct. 31.—A. W. Gummerson was removed by the Town Council at a special meeting from the office of Chief Constable, and other offices appurtenant thereto and dismissed from the services of the Corporation.

On October 21st the Town Council passed a resolution requesting the Chief Constable to resign forthwith, but the resignation did not materialize.

A motion was placed on the books requesting Gummerson to forthwith furnish the Council statements of all moneys received or collected by him as Chief Constable, municipal license inspector and collector of dog taxes and to pay over to the Town Treasurer all moneys so received or collected by him not heretofore returned, if any.

The by-law recording his appointment which was passed on May 5th of this year, was repealed, and Night Constable Allan Royce was temporarily appointed as acting Chief Constable.

A NEAR SUICIDE

Old Pontypool Resident Cut His Throat in House of Refuge

Albert Fallis, an old resident of Pontypool, tried to commit suicide at the House of Refuge, on Monday, by cutting his throat with a knife or razor. He is in the hospital.—Port Hope Guide.

The Royal To Be Enlarged

One Thousand Seating Capacity Will Be Provided

The Royal Theatre, already the most commodious of the local moving picture houses, is in a short time to have its capacity practically doubled. A gallery is to be installed which will provide 400 more seats, and give the theatre accommodation for one thousand people. Mr. H. C. Winch, representing the Chamberlain estate, the owners of the property, entered into an agreement with Mr. M. Pappas, the lease-holder of the building to have the work done for Mr. Herb. Clayton, the proprietor and manager of the Royal, and it is planned to have the operations commence immediately after the New Year. Mr. Pappas, who has some good ideas in regard to the decoration and arrangement of the theatre, has arranged with a Toronto architect for complete plans for the improvements and local contractors will be asked to submit tenders for the work. The alterations will make the Royal Theatre one of the largest and prettiest moving picture theatres in Canada.

Entertained The Inmates

Several young ladies from St Luke's Church went to the Protestant Home last evening, where, for an hour and a half they entertained the inmates of the institution. A programme of music was given, Mrs. James McDonald and Miss Bryce rendering several vocal numbers.

The ladies brought grapes and candy, and altogether a very enjoyable time was spent.

Local Militia Officers in Training

The officers of the 3rd Dragoons, the 24th Field Battery, and the 57th Regiment were engaged Thursday and Friday afternoon in a series of tactical manoeuvres; in the district surrounding the village of Nassau.

General Staff Officer Major Horden, who is in charge of the training for this division, was in the City Thursday and Friday. Col. Hemming was also in the City to see the progress of the training.

The officers worked out a scheme on the ground around Nassau, using imaginary armies and supposd strategic positions as ases for the plans of campain.

There was a large turnout of officers and they spent the whole of yesterday and Thursday afternoon on the flats and hills a few miles north of the City.

WILL ADJUST CAIMS.

Chief Commissioner Fraser is going through this district finally adjusting Trent Valley Canal claims, leases, and all other than engineering government business. He will be in the City at a date in the near future, when various matters will be considered.

STREET PAVING.

We have made a beginning of permanent street paving, and, obviously, the first consideration is that of seeing that it deserves the name; that it will be permanent; that it is properly constructed in every particular; that the pavement when laid will represent full value for the large expenditure made.

So far as things have gone, the ordinary observer is not in a position to decide. But many have their doubts. On October 27th, the Examiner published a letter, from "One of Those Interested," asking that the terms of the contract should be made public, so that the ratepayers who watch the progress of paving operations with great interest might see whether or not the specifications were being properly carried out

The people are deeply concerned. In to-day's issue, we publish two important letters on the subject—one from the writer of the first letter referred to, and the other from "Some Ratepayer," dealing with another phase of the matter. The authors of both letters are substantial citizens—one a gentleman of technical professional training, and the other of wide experience in practical affairs, and familiar with electrical instalment conditions. From what we know of both writers, it can be asserted that both are inspired, in calling public attention to the matters their letters treat of, by an zeal for the best interests of the citizens and ratepayers. Their letters, printed in this issue, are worthy of attention and careful reading.

If the conditions they point out as hostile to the stability and tending to the danger of disturbance of pavement, exist, or are likely to arise, then steps should be taken in continuing paving operations to remedy imperfect construction if there be any, and to prevent the occurrence of undesirable conditions if they are likely to develop. If there is no foundation for the doubts suggested, the public should be assured, on both points, by some authoritative official statement.

Governing bodies too often forget this special feature of their responsibility to the people they represent. The governing body itself may know all the circumstances that govern and, possibly, justify the course they are taking. But the people who pay the piper do not know the details, and when in the public, open and visible performance of work under their eyes, doubts arise, the people who pay have a right to have these doubts settled, if this can be done.

We have been waiting for years for permanent paving, and when we are actually undertaking it, we expect that it shall be the best possible of the kind adopted. Our waiting has not been without its compensations. In the waiting interval, other cities have been experimenting with paving and have discovered the advantages and disadvantages incident to the material employed, and the mode of work adopted. We can profit by these experiences and are therefore in a position to gain by the knowledge developed and dearly paid for by other cities. We are in a position to have permanent paving done properly, and it will be only neglect of ordinary business precautions; neglect of the lessons of engineering experience, and of the lessons of actual test in the matter of permanent paving, that will rob us of the best results.

If we are doing the best possible; if we are taking the best means known to paving science and engineering authority to secure the best results, let us know it unmistakably. If, as appears to the writers of the letters referred to, we are neglecting some essential precautions, if we are taking improper steps, let doubts upon this point be settled; or if such doubts are justified, let us take such steps as will make doubts give place to positive assurance.

Under the circumstances, the questions of "One of Those Interested" seem to deserve an answer. The reputation of the contractors is somewhat in question according to his contentions. They may be fulfilling the terms of the contract; carrying out the specifications to the letter. If so, according to the letter of our correspondent, the contract and specifications are defective. If the contractors are not living up to the terms of the contract, we should know it. In any case the public who are interested might have their minds set at ease.

These matters should be settled decisively. The ratepayers will then know where they stand; know what they are getting, and know what to expect in the future, and the tendency to complaint will be removed; or, at least, lessened, for there are no conceivable conditions under which "Taxpayer," "Ratepayer" and "Citizen" won't grumble.

From what we see of the paving contractors, they are well qualified for their work. They have a splendid mechanical equipment and admirable organization of their working forces. If our Board of Works were as well organized, had as good system, we should perhaps see better results.

While on the subject, attention might be called to conditions on Hunter Street, which cannot by the greatest stretch of charity, be regarded as evidence of good method or good business. At one point west of the bridge over Hamilton's creek, the sidewalk on the south side had sunken below the general level—in some places five or six inches. The city knew of this condition, the city knew that permanent paving was being done on the street. The city stood idly by and saw the level of the permanent pavement conformed to this dip in the footwalk, and the work of raising the sunken sidewalk to enable the pavers to make a good job, was left till after paving was completed and only begun on the first day of hard frost, when, we all know, good concrete work cannot be done! Further comment is so obvious as to be unnecessary.

Another thing. Since the above was written, it is observed that the city employees are already spending money to repair defective paving work on the north side of Hunter street. Workmen are breaking up—and this seems to be easy work, for the cement does not appear to be of the best quality—to replace the approaches put in—three or four distinct bumps instead of a regular slope—by the paving contractors. Has there been any efficient inspection—except as to levels—of the details of paving construction?

After Halloween, and all its Spookeness, let us get down to liquid facts.

For Peterborough's drink we have learned that something light, bracing and invigorating suits the palate best.

And so our Wine Vaults have been replenished and made ready with such rousers of the Spirits as Highland Malt, Scotch Whiskies, Seagram's Canadian Whisky, aged in wood before bottling, and Heublin's Club Cocktails.

Guinesses' Stout and Bass Ale, so invigorating for a late supper.

The Central Liquor Store, 182 Simcoe Street, has a brew for every taste. Call phone 719

FELL FROM A HAY LOFT

Suffered Tortures With His Kidneys Until He Tried Gin Pills

You might think that Mr. Baker needed a surgeon more than GIN PILLS. But there were no bones broken. His back was strained, which was harder to cure because nothing seemed to do any good. It is the same with a sprained ankle and broken leg. You can set the fracture and it will be well in six weeks—but the sprain may take months to get well.

However, Mr. Baker found the quick way to get relief from the pain—here are his own words.

AULTSVILLE, ONT.

"I have been a great sufferer from Kidney Trouble from an injury to my back caused by falling from a hay loft about six years ago. This left my kidneys weak, so that every cold I got would settle in my kidneys and cause intense suffering. I was advised to try GIN PILLS. I found, to my surprise, after taking two boxes, that the pains were relieved and I began to feel better. I am still taking GIN PILLS and feel sure I will be completely cured. I recommend GIN PILLS to all who suffer from any Kidney Trouble". C. BAKER.

A BAD FALL.

You see, the fall had strained the kidneys and they were affected by the slightest chill. GIN PILLS immediately strengthened the kidneys—soothed any irritation and thus enabled the kidneys to overcome the effects of the fall.

If you are having pain in the back—or trouble with kidneys or bladder through accident or overwork—do just as Mr. Baker did—take GIN PILLS. They will help you—cure you—or we will promptly refund your money. Buy six boxes at your dealer's. If, after taking them, you feel that Gin Pills have not helped you, return the empty boxes and get your money. We will take your word for it. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. Sample box sent free if you write National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto.

The Girl With The Good Home Was The One Who Went Wrong

MONTREAL, Oct. 30. — They were a strange contrast. Came first the girl from the good home, the girl with leisure, with her allowance of spending money, with good clothes and a fair education for her age. There followed the child whose home has been a house of ill-fame, whose mother was the keeper of it, the girl whose clothes were very poor, and who was so glad to get five cents to put aside toward the new dress she was to have some day.

The first girl went for a joy-ride and spent the night in a garage. The second, living in an atmosphere of immorality and degradation, came through clean.

Contrasts such as these, which seem to hit the traditions of the influence of environment and heredity a smashing blow, cause the social workers of the Juvenile Court to wonder sometimes, pause, and ask, "Why?"

The first little girl, every feature refined, her pouting lips pale, her dimpled face white, stood trembling before the desk of Judge Choquet. Her manner of standing, straight, yet graceful, showed the convent training her brother, a member of the local police force, who had laid the complaint, stood beside her.

Automobile Temptation.

She began her story in a hesitating way. First she told how she and a girl friend had been walking along St. Denis street one night. An automobile drew slowly up beside the curb. The voice of the chauffeur, low and persuasive, invited them to jump in. At first they did not heed him. He kept the machine slowly alongside. They laughed slightly at the adventure. He persisted, and his friend also coaxed. Finally they did get in. A moment later they were being whirled up the street. Their laughter floated back down the empty stretch of road.

But in the morning as they stole from the garage they did not laugh.

Judge Choquet asked them for all the particulars. She knew the men only as Jack and Bill, but she could tell where the garage is. There will probably be further action in this case. The girl walked out on remand, and smiled in her nice way at her big brother.

The other girl wore a faded "bath towel" hat, a torn grey sweater coat, a cheap white dress. She had no patent leather pumps on her feet. An officer from the Recorder's Court brought over word of the sentence on her father, her mother and her grandmother. The father, being unable to pay the fifty dollar fine, went to jail for six months for selling liquor without a license. The mother was fined a like amount for keeping a disorderly house. The grandmother was given to the police matron, who will see that she is provided for.

Tearful Plea For Work.

The girl burst into tears when Judge Choquet asked her what she would like to do. "If I could only get work," she sobbed. "If I could get a place in some nice home I would work hard, indeed I would."

"I'm not a bad girl," she said later. "Those men would sometimes give me five cents when they passed through the room, but I never talked to them, or anything. I stayed with my grandmother."

She only left the convent last spring, and has not been home more than six months.

The First

"Did you ever really love any girl before you met me?" asked the beautiful one.

"No," replied the titled foreigner, "you're the first girl I have ever met who had money in her own right."

ONTARIO'S BIRTHS LOWER, MARRIAGES SHOW AN INCREASE

Statistics of Interest Pertaining to the Province—Death Rate is Very Much Lower

MIXED MARRIAGES LESS

The little, scantily-clad gentleman known as Cupid, spent a busy 12 months in 1912, his efforts in Ontario bringing an increase of 3,038 marriages, or at the rate of 0.9 per thousand population; but in spite of this fact the provincial birth rate continues on the down grade. The report of the Registrar-General, which will shortly be issued, shows a birth rate of only 22.4, the lowest since 1903, and two points below 1911.

The responsibility for Ontario's declining birth rate apparently rests with the cities and towns. The cities which a record of 22,929 marriages, were able to report only 15,917 births while the rural municipalities of the province, with but 10,910 marriages, had 32,028 births, or a considerably better percentage.

The total number of births in Ontario was 30,870, with 28,845 marriages.

Death Rate Lower.

The province is still making progress in the reduction of its death rate, and now has a rate lower than most of the leading countries of the world. During 1912 there were 32,150 deaths, a ratio of 12.4 per thousand, or .2 lower than in 1911.

The saddening part of the report, that dealing with illegitimate births, shows an increase of 168, bringing the rate up to 21.3 per thousand births. The cities of the province contributed 72 per cent. of the illegitimacy.

Mixed Marriages Less.

The records show less marrying between Protestants and Roman Catholics, 820 men and 1,096 women of the Catholic church marrying outside their faith. Almost two-thirds of the marriages are contracted between the ages of 20 and 30. A number of unusual marriages were recorded, one man of 25 marrying a woman over 70. Three women under 30 years of age married men over 70.

The fight against the "white plague" is making steady headway, although the reduction in the death rate from this disease was less in 1912 than in several years previous. The death list was 2,250, a decrease of 103, and a reduction in ratio of .05 per cent. At the present time about seven per cent. of the deaths in Ontario are due to tuberculosis, and the heaviest toll is taken upon young people of between 20 and 30.

One Out of Ten Die Young.

It will astonish some people to know that one out of every ten children born in Ontario dies before reaching five years of age. In 1912 8,230 children under the age of five years died, 6,494 of them before completing the twelfth month, a rate of 110.3 per thousand births. There were 200 less deaths from diarrhoea than in 1911, the rate from this dangerous infant trouble being the lowest in six years, due largely to the greater interest taken in child welfare and in educating young mothers to take more intelligent care of their children.

WELL, HARDLY.

The conversation turned to rapid-fire hash houses the other evening, which reminded Congressman Edward Keating, of Colorado, of an incident that occurred in one of the big Eastern cities.

One day, so related the Congressman, a man entered a restaurant and ordered chicken pie. Finally the order arrived, and eagerly the lunching party pried it open, but alas! No chicken! Not even the faintest echo of a distant cackle.

"Look here, Sambo," called the luncher to the coloured waiter with a cussful expression, "there isn't a particle of chicken in this chicken pie that I ordered!"

"Yes, sah, boss! Yes, sah!" answered the waiter, good-humoredly smiling. "Dat jes' natchally follahs."

"Just naturally follows," exclaimed the luncher, displaying large emphasis. "What do you mean?"

"It am jes' dis way, boss," explained the waiter, "if yo' done went an' ordahed dog biscuit, yo' sush wouldn't 'spect to find no dog in it, would you?"

A LITTLE BUSINESS CORNER

Recent foretastes of winter have been enlivening general business conditions of the City. The hardware man finds a good demand for stoves, the grocer says there is a stronger trade in rolled oats, the men's clothing stores are running to woollens, and heavy coats, and the big dry goods houses find an expected change in the purchasings of their feminine customers. All along the line there are anticipations of a good season's business and following a summer of widespread industrial activities, Peterborough's late fall and winter trade should surpass previous figures. You meet individuals who are making a noise like the muskrats—they are predicting a hard winter. But, "thank goodness," the pessimists are always in the minority.

A Barometer of the Merchant.

An advertising card, concerning some past entertainment should not be found in a merchant's window after the date of the affair. It seems to indicate that the window has not received attention for some time, and is all the more noticeable by the prominence with which the date is usually shown.

Window Display of Price Cards.

The window dresser in one of the large Boston stores, in connection with a recent "anniversary sale," tried the experiment of using no merchandise at all in one of the most prominent windows. Instead, he filled the window with cards, each one telling about some article that had been specially priced for the week. The cards themselves were triangular in shape and the entire display was arranged in the form of steps. By reason of its novelty this window is said to have shown better selling power than some of the more elaborate displays of goods.

Sale Limited to One Window.

A dry goods merchant in a western city has materially increased his Saturday receipts by selling the contents of one window at considerably reduced prices. When buyers have taken all the goods in the window the sale ends. Dress goods are shown one week, wearing apparel the next, and other goods in regular order. As a leader to the sale, the window is cleared of foods on Thursday afternoons and a placard shown: "Watch for Saturday afternoon's display."

Scene From "The Land of Golden Dreams" which will be presented at "The Grand" next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Nov. 6, 7, 8. There are 350 local people taking part in the production which is under the auspices of the ladies of St. John's Church.

AULL SAYS HIS PROPOSAL WAS NO MOONLIGHT AFFAIR

Proposed to Doris Reid in Broad Daylight and Both Were Fully Aware of Their Actions—Wooed Her in the Usual Way.

DRANK NO LIQUOR

COBOURG, Oct. 31.—That his wife knew they were to be married three days before the ceremony took place, and was not only willing but eager to have the ceremony performed as soon as possible, was the statement made by Robert Aull to-day. From the time the marriage was performed until the present, Aull has absolutely refused to discuss his wife or to make any statement regarding his courtship, but the statement of claim issued by his wife's lawyers, in which he is referred to as a degenerate, a person of low habits, and of no social standing, has caused young Aull to speak freely of his wooing and winning of the Toronto society girl and the events which preceded the marriage.

"According to that statement of claim, my wife did not know what she was doing when we were married. Why, we planned the whole thing three days before the marriage took place. I made the proposal to her one afternoon, when we were strolling beside the lake. It wasn't in the moonlight, but in broad daylight. We were not married at night, either. I didn't sneak away with her to a justice of the peace, but went in the daylight to a minister.

Thought Ceremony Long.

"Then there is another thing that shows that she was in her right mind and knew what she was doing. I wanted to have the marriage performed by the Rev. Canon Spragge, of the Anglican Church, but she wouldn't hear of it. She insisted upon being married by Rev. John Garbutt, of the Methodist Church. After the ceremony was over she asked me if I didn't think that it took an awfully long time. Does that look as if she was unwilling to be married?" demanded Aull.

"According to that statement she was supposed to have been in a trance or stupor from liquor. She had nothing to drink that morning but one glass of claret lemonade. She answered all the questions of the minister, and made her responses clearly and distinctly.

"The statement further says that I met her only occasionally, and was practically a stranger to her. Why, from the first day we met we were together practically all the time. Every morning, afternoon, and evening it was the same thing. We were always together. If she saw me talking to any person else or if I was with another girl she became quite peeved, and was evidently jealous when I spoke to or associated with other girls.

Relies on Witnesses.

"I am quite confident that the application for the annulment of the marriage will be refused. The testimony of Clarence Doheny, who drove us to the church in his automobile and then to Port Hope, and of Dorelle Walker, my wife's girl friend, and then, too, of the minister, Mr. Garbutt, will show that she was in her right senses, and was not dazed or befuddled at the time the ceremony took place."

Aull's Lawyer Confident.

The three people mentioned by Aull will probably be his most important witness. Doheny and Miss Walker were both quite friendly with Aull and Doris Reid during their stay in Cobourg, and their evidence should throw considerable light on the actions of both parties during their sojourn here, while the testimony of the minister will show her condition at the time of the marriage. "I cannot see where there is a single chance of the marriage being annulled," declared Thomas F. Hall, Aull's lawyer. "We will prove that both Aull and his wife were sober at the time of the marriage. The evidence of Doheny and Miss Walker will show this clearly, while that of the minister will also show that she realized what she was doing when the marriage took place.

"The license was obtained in the regular way, and there was no fraud or deceit. The Rev. John Garbutt is an accredited minister of the Methodist Church, and as such performed the marriage. It was a case of love at first sight. Robert Aull met Miss Reid down here, and from the first time they met they were together practically all the time."

Says Money Was Offered.

That an attempt was made in Toronto on Wednesday last to persuade him to sign an affidavit declaring that his marriage to Miss Doris Reid was "all a piece of foolishness," and "that he was drunk at the time the ceremony was performed," was another statement made by Robert Aull here to-day. Aull declares that the proposition was made to him by two newspapermen. He declares the names will be told at the proper place and at a time when they will have more effect. "Name your own price was the way it was put up to me by the newspapermen," said Aull. "But I absolutely refused to consider the proposition. I suppose they thought they could get me to leave town for a few hundred dollars. As soon as the proposition was made to me I went and saw a lawyer for advice, and he told me not to talk to these people at all, and not to consider the proposition.

"Then I decided to call upon George P. Reid, my wife's father. I went into his brokerage office, and he received me very pleasantly. I wanted to find out if he was behind the proposition to have me sign that affidavit, and I intended to tell him what I thought about it. He refused to discuss the matter with me, however, and referred me to his lawyer."

The date will be decided upon at the meeting on Tuesday.

The Charm of Comely Skin

Stuart's New Calcium Sulphide Treatment Quickly Vanishes All Skin Eruptions and Restores Colour to the Face.

You don't want to wait forever and a day to get rid of your pimples or other skin eruptions. You want to get rid of them right now. Next week you may want to go somewhere where you wouldn't like to have to take the pimples along.

"Everybody Likes My Complexion Since Stuart's Calcium Wafers Quickly Cleared It of Eruptions."

You can get rid of them just in time by taking Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

These wonderful little workers have cured bad boils in three days, and some cases of skin diseases in a week.

Remember this, too, that most pimple treatments reek with poison. And they are miserably slow besides.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have not a particle of poison in them. They are free from mercury, biting drugs or nefarious opiates. This is absolutely guaranteed. They cannot do any harm, but they always do good—good that you can see in the mirror before your own eyes a few days after.

Don't be any longer humiliated by having a splotchy face. Don't have strangers stare at you, or allow your friends to be ashamed of you because of your face.

Your blood makes you what you are. The men and women who forge ahead are those with pure blood and pure faces.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will make you happy because your face will be a welcome sight not only to yourself when you look into the glass, but to everybody else who knows you and talks to you.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers are sold by all first class druggists at 50 cents a box. They are very pleasant to the taste and in results are truly remarkable.

PEDLARS' LICENSE FEES TO BE INCREASED

Resolution to That Effect Passed at Meeting of Finance Committee—Will Liquidate Debt to Board of Education

SALE POSTPONED

A meeting of the Finance Committee of the City Council was held on Friday afternoon, when it was decided to issue debentures to the amount of $5,250 to be expended for the payment of land which was acquired some time ago by the Board of Education. The property adjoins the King Edward School grounds, and was obtained for the purpose of enlarging the present school grounds. The City's account with the Board of Education has been outstanding for some months and at the last meeting of the Board a resolution was passed requesting that the amount be paid without "further delay." The majority of the aldermen were of the opinion that the Council should have been consulted before the land was purchased. The School Board held that the Council was fully cognizant of the Board's intention to acquire the property.

License Fees Increased.

Aldermen Duncan and Buller introduced a motion to have a by-law prepared to make the license fee for non-resident pedlars fifty dollars, for peddling on foot, sixty dollars for those with a push-cart, and with other vehicles, seventy-five dollars. The present fees ar thirty dollars, forty dollars and fifty dollars, rspectively. The resolution was carried.

City Treasurer Adams eported that there was only one lot in the City to be sold for arrears of taxes. He recommended that the sale be postponed. This suggestion will be acted upon.

Those present at the meeting were His Worship Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen J. Andreson, (Chairman), G. A. Gillespie, W. J. Johnston, W. Buller and G. H. Duncan.

DRESS REHEARSAL

Of the Fairy Play Will Take Place With Cast of 350

"Land of Golden Dreams," to be presented by an amateur cast at the Grand Opera House, is nearly ready now. Dress rehearsal will take place Wednesday night, Nov. 5th.

The cast is composed of 350 in all, 100 being children. The play is to be given under the auspices of the ladies of St. John's Church. The big cast has been under constant coaching for some time and things are running with great smoothness. The enormous task of handling such numbers of untrained people was a work of great difficulty, but it is now nearing the end. By next Wednesday night everything will be in shape for the performance.

Prices for the Dress Rehearsal—25c. to any part of the theatre. No reserved seats for this special performance.

OYSPEPTICS WARNED BY GERMAN PHYSICIAN

Prof. Riegel, World Famous Authority on Stomach Diseases, Points Out Lurking Danger.

Franz Riegel, Professor of Clinica Medicine in the University of Giessen, pronounced the world's greatest authority on diseases of the stomach, makes the positive statement that pepsin must not be used in treating acidity of the stomach. Millions of people are taking all sorts of dyspepsia tablets because they contain pepsin which affords slight temporary relief. But every dose contributes to serious harm in time. What is needed is something to neutralize the excess acid. The best thing for that purpose is ordinary druggist's bisurated magnesia. You can get it at any drug store for a few cents. Take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water after each meal. You will get immediate and complete relief with no danger or bad after effects. Authorities agree that acidity is the cause of nearly every form of stomach disorder, and if not checked it is likely to lead to stomach ulcers and cancer.

Is There Economy in a Cheap Corset?

Certainly there is, if it is well made and is fitted to the figure, but how many such corsets possess these attributes?

Will they not break at the sides, does not the corset edge show through causing an unsightly ridge, and worst of all, are they ever really comfortable?

So then, just as it would be meerst folly to put a rubbishy foundation beneath a handsome building, so is it most unwise to use a poorly made corset as a foundation for lovely graceful proportions.

American Lady Corsets are fitted to the figure and are correct and comfortable.

City Council "In Action"

Posed Before a Moving Picture Camera and May Therefore Expect to Appear in the Limelight

The latest feat in moving-picture photography was consumated in Peterborough shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon when the 1913 Peterborough City Council were taken "in action" by a motion picture operator. The pictures were taken by Mr. Harris outside the Peterborough Club, and will be used in connection with a series of lectures that will be exposed to destiny and public opinion in the near future. Patrons of the "Nickleodirum" need not be startled if at some time they should find themselves confronted with a picture of the Peterborough City Council franctically waving their hats at the audience.

DEPREDATIONS OF THE HALLOWEEN MARAUDERS NOTICED

Hallow-e'en is past and the City in general has not suffered any unusual amount of damage during its passing. Bu the young bloods were out in force, as custom has come to demand, and a number of fences, gates, flagpoles, etc., succumbed to their efforts.

In spite of the augmentaion of the police force for the suppression of disorder, the marauders visited every portion of the town and wherever they went they left their mark.

But in spite of their difficult task, the police force succeeded greatly in protecting the property of the City in general. The fence and gates of Mrs. Hounsell, Edinburgh Street, were torn down, several fences on George Street, north of Smith, were razed, Mr. Alex. Elliott's fence on Gilmour street, and Mr. J. D. Tully's on McDonald Street, were among those that will need considerable repairing before they will answer the purpose they were originally erected for. Some lamps were also broken.

All over the City young ladies and girls, in masqueraders' costumes, were parading the street, and several crowds of young men with less innocent designs were taking shelter in the shadows of the street corners.

Ten of the latter appeared in Police Cour this morning. All pleaded not guilty to the charge of being disorderly and were remanded until Wednesday by Acting Magistrate Rush. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared in their defence.

POTATOES A LITTLE FIRMER THAN USUAL

"This was such a fine day for taking in turnips that there are not as many farmers as usual at the market," said one of those who either had no turnips or had them all in their bins.

"And that explains why potatoes, for instance, are up to-day and down a week from to-day. It depends upon the supply. Now, there are not many farmers in with potatoes this morning and I've been getting $1.15 a bag. But the price will tempt quite a few to come in next week with potatoes and down goes the price to a dollar or lower. And when you get it down it is hard to raise it up again."

There was but little variation from last week's prices. Butter was from 28 to 30c per lb, with eggs steady at 35c. Lamb, pork and beef were unchanged in price. The supply of poultry was quite ordinary.

DAUGHTERS OF EMPIRE HELD HALLOWEEN PARTY

And Gave an Afternoon Tea Yesterday in the Band Room of the Armouries

The 57th Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, held two most successful functions yesterday, and were amply rewarded for the days of preparation that led up to the Hallowe'en event of events.

Yesterday afternoon they held a Hallowe'en Tea, in the band room of the Armouries. For the occasion the room was most picturesquely decorated in a scheme of yellow and black, and every imaginable means had been employed by the ladies in charge, to carry out the design in numberless details.

Pumpkins, cut to make faces, were hung so that all the light in the room filtered through the holes in the pumpkins Yellow and black streamers, designs on the walls depicting black cats, witches, etc., were features of the decorations. The ladies pouring tea wore pumpkin coloured witches' caps.

Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, and Mrs. J. C. Davidson, poured tea.

Over two hundred attended the affair yesterday afternoon, and the offerings of the ladies of the local Chapter were pronounced delicious by the guests. All afternoon an orchestra provided bright musical selections.

Last night the ladies gave a Hallowe'en party, which was largely patronized. Dancing, cards, and music were the order at the evening function.

Mrs. Clegg, regent of the local Chapter, and Colonel Clegg, received the guests. Mrs. L. M. Hayes, Mrs. Basil Hall, Mrs. Carruthers, and Mrs. Gliddon poured tea last evening. The ladies are to be congratulated on the success of both affairs.

Pictures May Be Shown Here

Messrs. Harris and Cuthbert of Chicago, who are in the City taking moving pictures of the lift lock, were very well pleased with the pictures they got yesterdays of the lock in operation, and the "Bessie Butler" entering and leaving the huge iron pontoons. Besides that, some views of the lift lock and canal were taken from the deck of the steamer.

Yesterday only about 200 feet of film were used, but Mr. Harris telegraphed to New York for an additional 2,000 feet, and he will spend the next couple of days in the City getting photos of the details of the workings of the lift lock.

The pictures are being made by a moving picture company for use in illustrating lectures to the Western Engineering Association of he United States.

Peterborough people will, in all probability have an opportunity to see the pictures of the lift lock, the film of which, when completed, will be a comprehensive one. Arrangements are being made by the moving picture company to have them put on in a local theatre.

PROMINENT IN PHOTO OF SUN LIFE AGENTS

In the October issue of "Sunshine," published by the Sun Life Assurance Co., Messrs. W. H. Hill and D. H. Moore, of Peterborough, are mentioned among the prominent representatives of the company who attended the 1913 outing of Sun Life agents at St. Andrews-by-the-Sea. A fine likeness of Mr. Hill is shown in a reproduction of "four veterans," and Mr. Moore is listed in the Macaulay Club picture, each member of whom wrote and paid for $100.000 or more of business during the year. The party numbering 150 spent the first week in September at St. Andrews, N. B.

Caledonian Society Celebrate

President oJhn Moyes, of the Peterborough Caledonian Society, had a happy duty last night in the W.O.W. Hall.

The above fraternity celebrated the annual event—Hallowe'en— in grand Scottish style, and Mr. Moyes gave a resume of the yearly "goloshan" season, following which a musical programme was gone through—Miss Jean Girven, pianist.

Early in the evening, from the among the large assemblage, there entered the hall a procession of both grotesque and beautiful masqueraders—all arrayed in the most original garments connected with 'goloshans."

It would be difficult to single out the most freakish or pretty costumes, but Mrs. R. D. Dickson as a Jap lady, Miss Jean Wilson as a peasant, Bill Elliot as a huntsman, Jack Pearson as a Toreador, Alex. McArthur as a Jack Tar, Mrs. Gillespie as Miss Canada—and as the clown, George Hutton remained unknown till about three oclock. There were tramps, niggers, brides, queens, and many other get-ups.

Lunch was served at 10 o'clock—a real Scotian repast. A Hallowe'en cake presented by Mr. Hutton was a feature at this stage, with the usual articles foretelling one's fate.

Dancing was indulged in till the proverbial "wee sma' 'oor." Fruit was an important service.

For this evening's entertainment the ladies of the club were responsible, and the least that can be said about their thoroughness, was excellent. No better night has been spent by the local Scots folks.

SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR AT THE Y. M. C. A.

There were over a hundred boys at the Y.M.C.A. last night, when one of the most enjoyable Hallowe'en parties in the history of the institution was held in the large game room upstairs.

The affair opened with a medley of all the popular tunes by one of the boys. These were followed by Hallowe'en games, such as "ducking" for apples in a tub of water. All the games were entered into with enthusiasm by the boys, and more than the usual amount of fun was got out of the games.

Mr. Carte, a local magician, mystified the boys with a number of sleight of hand tricks, and with his assistance the evening passed off merrily.

The game room had been liberally decorated with Hallowe'en designs, and altogether it might be claimed, that the boys who spent last night in the Y.M.C.A. had about as enjoyable an evening as any of those who celebrated the occasion.

HEAD WAS BADLY CUT LAST NIGHT

Last night at the G.T.R. station, a man from Lindsay by the name of McDonald, sustained painful injuries. He was walking along the edge of the platform, about 7.30 o'clock, when he slipped on the edge of the platform, and fell against the rails. His head was badly cut, and Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch was summoned to attend his injuries. He was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where he was given professional attendance.

When seen this afternoon by the Examiner, Dr. McCulloch said that McDonald's injuries were not serious. As a matter of fact he progressed so well that he was discharged from the hospital at noon to-day.

HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL ENTERTAINMENT

In St. John's Sunday School-House—The Provisional Committee of the Proposed Young People's Association Entertained Some 150 Guests.

One of the most successful social gatherings of recent years was held last evening in the school-house belonging to St. John's Anglican Church.

As our readers are aware, a meeting to take into consideration the re-forming of a Young People's Association, was held on Friday, Oct. 24th, when a provisional committee, having Mr. Edds as President (pro tem), and Mr. Frank Russell as Secretary (pro tem), was appointed. This provisional committee was responsible for last night's entertainment, which, judging from the remarks made by the large majority, of some 150 persons, who accepted the invitations, proved highly successful. On entering each visitor was tagged—the tag having his or her name—and these tags served as "letters of introduction," slips of paper and pencils were provided for each guest and their part was to write down as many of their fellow guests' names as they could within a limited space of time. A few minutes were then devoted to the count, when it was discovered that Miss Wallace had won the prize with 105 names.

The chairs having been placed in an informal manner some sociable time was spent during which Mr. Edds described the lines upon which the proposed association would be run. Mr. Edds further remarked to the effect that he could see no reason why there should not be a very thriving society of this kind at St. John's. If the young people would come, others would follow, and, judging from the enthusiasm displayed on the present occasion, it augured well for the future.

The great feature of the evening was a millinery contest. Each guest was tagged with a number, in pairs, one being given to a man and the other to a lady. The couples then mated off, receiving two sheets each of tissue paper—one black and one yellow—and a row of pins. These sheets had to be fashioned into hats and marvellously pretty and chic creations were produced in some cases from the simple materials, some really being veritable works of millinery art.

Time being called the couples formed up in a line for procession, parading three times round the large school-room in front of a bench of judges, the elect being separated like sheeps from the goats, for a further consideration. Eventually prizes were awarded as follows:

1st—Miss Ada Graham.
2nd—Miss I. Wesley.
3rd—Mrs. E. Flemming.

Considerable amusement, too, was caused by the proviso that each prize winner should open her prize on the platform before the assemblage, and as the prizes were of a humorous nature, much fun was elicited.

Two quasi "booby" prizes for the couple wearing the most grotesque hats were awarded to Mrs. Conway (a Punch and Judy) and Mr. Frank Russell (a baby). The latter's partner had made him a "stove pipe" hat about a yard high.

The prizes were distributed by the Rev. Canon Davidson, the Hon. President of the Association, who made a few fitting observations on the object of the gathering.

Surprise packages of eatables were then handed round comprising dough nuts, apples and "taffy". The popping off the empty bags made quite a fusilade, while the hearty singing of "God Save the King" brought the proceedings to the close of what was generally conceded to be a highly successful and enjoyable, bright evening's entertainment.

A party of Hallow-e'en masqueraders, very well got up and equally well disguised, visited the room during the proceedings and caused a good deal of merriment by their fun and antics.

A further meeting will be held in the same place on Friday next, when permanent officers and committees will be nominated. This will be held on the same pleasant and informal lines and all interested are again invited to attend.

The provisional committee responsible for last night's entertainment consisted of: Canon Davidson, ex-officio President; Messrs. Edds, acting president), Seymour, and Frank Russell, Secretary), Mrs. Conway, the Misses Shaw and Kincaid, while Miss Byers rendered very efficient assistance.

QUESTIONS STABILITY OF STREET PAVING

"One Who is Interested" Asks If Proper Foundation Has Been Laid

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—As the authorities of the City have not seen fit to comply with my very reasonable request which appeared in your edition of the 27th ult., to publish the agreement between the City and the paving company, I would, with your kind permission, like to call the attention of the people to the following facts:

I wish to say on the start that I am not writing in any pessimistic or factious spirit, but solely that the people may get at least a fraction of what they are paying for, if not now, perhaps at some time in the future.

In my letter of the 27th ult., I made the statement that the paving foundation on George Street was made up of a mixture of about fifteen parts of gravel to one of cement and laid on the street about three inches thick. I may say that I have not had an opportunity of making exact measurements, but I am not far astray. Now let us see what this mixture should be—how thick a layer of it should be put on the street, and how it should be treated during the process of setting. Let me quote one of the highest and best authorities on paving in America. First as to foundation—

"The stability, permanence and maintenance of any pavement depend upon its foundation. If the foundation is weak, the surface will soon settle unequally, forming depressions and ruts. With a good foundation the condition of the surface will depend upon the material employed for the pavement and upon the manner of laying it."

Now let me quote the same authority on the proper ingredients for concrete used for pavement foundations, the depth to which it should be laid and its treatment during the process of setting:

"The proportions of the ingredients for concrete used for pavement foundations are"—

"One part Portland cement, three parts sand, seven parts of broken stone; or, one part natural Hydraulic cement, two parts sand, five parts of broken stone."

"The thickness of the concrete bed must be sufficient to provide against breaking under transverse strain caused by the settlement of the sub-soil—on a well drained soil six inches will be found sufficient, but in moist and clayey soils, twelve inches will not be excessive."

"During settling, the concrete should be protected from the drying action of the sun and wind, and should be kept damp to prevent the formation of drying cracks.'

Now a word with regard to the gutters. These I consider are not made on proper forms and are not of sufficient depth at all points to carry off in safety the water of a heavy shower of rain. Let me quote from the same authority:

"The gutters must be of sufficient depth to retain all the water which reaches them and prevent its overflowing on the footpaths. The depth should never be less than six inches and very rarely need be more than ten inches."

I would be very sorry indeed to see this City pass through Brantford's experience in street paving. I have, however, some doubts as to the stability and permanency of our paving foundations, and wish to sound this faint note of warning before more work is undertaken.

Now, as I am only one of the people and have not been able to see the terms of the paving contract and know nothing of it, let us hope, at any rate, that the authorities of this City have had foresight enough to insert a clause therein retaining at least one-third of the contract price for three years—this being the minimum time for a proper test of a pavement of this kind.

Yours truly,
One of Those Interested.

Tax Payer Points Out That Electric Wires Are Not Easily Available

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Being a considerable property owner, and the high taxes being something formidable, I have an interest in the conditions that affect the rate of taxation. I wish to call attention to a matter of general interest.

Now that a good deal of permanent pavement is laid on George street and the tar-coated electric cables, securely sealed up and buried beneath concrete and asphalt, in the loose earth with no protection in the form of conduits, and with no means of easy access to them a rather important question arises, which is of interest to the citizens and City Fathers.

Suppose the electric current were turned on tomorrow, and suppose that a street lamp refuses to give proper light, and the fault is traced to the underground wiring, how is the trouble to be treated between the two poles? Is not some such trouble likely to occur in underground wires as has occurred in the case of overhead wires, for the underground wires are protected with what seems to be a very frail tarred coating. We have seen with our own eyes the lengths of tar-covered wire dumped into a shallow trench and threaded into the bottom of each lamp-post in what seems to be, but may not be, a flimsy manner.

Now what is to be done in case of the likely thing happening—some defect developing in the buried cable, prevently the proper burning of a lamp?

I should like to know what else can be done except smashing several square yards of asphalt surface and concrete base, to get at and repair the defect, and if the fault is not found at first, try, try again, and smash more pavement. This would be a serious matter for the pavement costs $2.25 per square yard, I believe, to put down and including the cost of breaking it up will cost much more to put down again, and can hardly be replaced, as good as at first, unless the city invests in a paving plant.

Now if the electric cables had been inclosed in conduits like the telephone companies have done, the electric wires, like theirs, could be easily got at without the slightest injury to the pavement and with no expense.

It semes that somebody has blundered, and through this blundering the ultimate cost of our pavement—after being laid, broken up, and laid again, perhaps several times or in several places, will be great enough. Especially when we add to this possibility the unknown but certain expenditure the city will incur and taxpayers have to meet for the electric enterprise we are entering into. Does anybody know, or can anybody tell, within several hundred thousand dollars, what expenditure the city is likely to incur before we are done paying, for the sake of the questionable boon of having municipally owned electric light and power equipment? The bill will be stiff enough without the added expense of the possibility of derangement of underground wires, and the cost of repairing pavement which might have been avoided by placing the cables in conduits, where they could be easily got at, instead of in the mud where they cannot be reached without the expensive process of smashing and relaying the overlying permanent pavement.

Yours truly,
Some Taxpayer.

DUKE WAS PLEASED

The fact that His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught is truly a "soldier prince" was made evident to the fullest degree during his recent voyage to Canada on the R. M. S. Empress of Britain. His Royal Highness, who is a patron of the ship's rifle club, showed keen enthusiasm in the exploits of the riflemen, and the presentation of prizes for marksmanship afforded the Duke an opportunity to express his appreciation of the men's work. The prizes were laid out in the ship's first class dining saloon, and, after being inspected by His Royal Highness and the Princess Patricia, the Duke made a few complimentary remarks to each recipient. The ceremony concluded with an address by His Royal Highness, of which the following is a brief resume:

"I amp roud to be a patron of your club, especially so as it is the first of its kind to be formed in the Mercantile Marine, and no doubt it will be the means of inducing other ships to da likewise. It was said in the olden days that we were the best archers in the world, and I do not see why, with a littlep ractice, we cannot become the best shots. I am glad to notice how this club is formed of all departments of your ship, and how one and all from these departments join together with a good feeling and engage in friendly rivalry in pursuit of these prizes. There is no doubt that through the initiative and encouragement of your Captain Murray, this club has met with such success, and I assure you I shall be most proud to hear of your further successes, of which, no doubt, you will keep me informed. I might mention that should my staff ever be in Quebec at the same time as your ship they will make a great effort to break your sequence of successes in rifle shooting In conclusion I wish the club every success, and when I get settled down in Ottawa, I will have great pleasure in sending you a cup for competition next year, and I thank you very much for making me your patron."

HOCKEY CLUB EXECUTIVE MAKE PLANS FOR SEASON

Enthusiastic Meeting of the Officers Held Last Night at Which a Number of Important Details Were Discussed.

MAY HOLD A CONCERT

The first steps in the ushering in of the Hockey season of 1913-14 were taken last night when the executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club met in the Oriental Hotel and discussed a number of important measures. There were present President Jos. Picard in the chair, Vice-President Fred Whatley, Secretary-Treasurer J. P. Bond and Messrs. Peter Spratt, Maurice Park, Chas. Curtis and F. D. Craig, executive members.

It was decided to nominate Mr. R. M. Glover as a candidate for the O. H. A. executive, a position which he has filled for the past couple of seasons.

The question of ways and means to pay off the deficit left from last season was thoroughly discussed by the executive and it was finally decided to hold a big concert, in the Royal Theatre if arrangements can be made, to raise funds for the club with a view of starting the season on a sound basis.

A committee composed of Messrs. Picard, Whatley and Bond was appointed to go into the details of this scheme.

The same committee was empowered to make arrangements with the Brock St. management for the use of the rink this season, and also to take up with the Y.M.C.A. authorities the question of having the players do their preliminary training in the Y gymnasium.

It is planned to commence the training operations within a short time.

SUNDERLAND AND BLACKBURN ROVERS WILL BATTLE TO-DAY

Interesting Fixtures in the Old Country Soccer Camps--Concerning Goalkeepers---See Late Edition of Examiner For Results of To-day's Matches.

Sunderland and Blackburn Rovers is the choicest morsel among football fare in the first division of the English lish League for Saturday. The men of Wearside will recognise fully they have a stiff hurdle to take all right with the Rovers from east Lancashire. The Rovers also are fully aware what they themselves are up against. True in every sense of the word it is that the battle may be likened unto the meeting of giants. Local enthusiasts will also be interested in the game on account of Charlie Buchan. Though he was not in the limelight much so far this season, all local men are confident he will be in the picture with great effect ere the season is over. In the corresponding game last year Rovers licked their powerful opponents 4-2. In 11-12 they lost 3-0, while in 10-11 the result was 2-2. The season 9-10 being a goalless draw, 0-0. Look at it any way one pleases, Saturday's game is an extremely delicate proposition.

In the Scottish League Hearts will visit the Saints Kilmarren, and let me whisper now—if the leaders wish to go back home to their ladyloves with glad hearts they will have to play football. Of course, the Saints may be checked again, one is quite aware of that; but it's mostly these kind of gentlemen that do something startling once in a while.

Humorous Pars From London Town. What Did He Think?

At the Clapton Orient and Fullham match a Fullham supporter kept shouting to his favourites every time they touched the ball.

During the second half, when Reynolds (the goalie) picked up the ball and hesitated to kick it, the excited spectator again broke out with, "Now, then, Reynolds, kick it." A quiet-looking young man who had heard this man's continuous shouting, turned to him and said: "What do you think he is going to do with it—eat it?"

Concerning Goalkeepers.

Leaving Stamford Bridge after Chelsea's defeat, two suporters — rivals— crossed verbal swords on the subject of Molyneaux, Chelsea's goalkeeer. "He's a good man notwithstanding to-day's result," argued the Chelsea man. "In fact there's few goalkeeprs going that could beat him."

"Our goalkeeper doesnt need to beat Molyneux," replied the Spur, "hes got forwards, aye, and half backs, too, as can do it for him.

Walden, Schoolmaster.

The huge crowd at Stamford Bridge were delighted with the fine display by Walden, the Spurs' right winger. Time after time he hoodwinked the Chelsea defence, and two boys in college caps were commenting on this, when one of them said:

"I wonder if that chap is a schoolmaster?"

'Of course he isn't,' replied the other. "What made you ask?"

"Well," said the first, "it seems to me he'd make a fine teacher of Euclid, for no matter what 'angle' he gets into he can always find the centre.'"

West Ham's Leafe.

At Boleyn Castle the Hammers supporters were very jubilant when Leafe equalized, and became more so when with a brilliant solo effort, he obtained another. One excited spectator shouted: "Well, done, Leafe, a few more like that you will soon make a 'book.'"

Chelsea's Mascot.

We were watching Chelsea and the Spurs, and my friend, commenting on the Pensioners' inability to get going, remarked: "I don't like their forward line. It seems out of gear. I'd like to see Woodward there.'

"Yes," I replied, "he's a fine player."

"Oh, he's more than that," my friend said. "I look upon him as Chelsea's mascot, and don't think they'd lose matches if he was playing."

"Oh, and why?" I asked.

'Because," he asked, "I think Woodward 'would ward' off defeat.

"Birds of a Feather."

During the match between Woolwich Arsenal and Leicester Fosse at Highbury, a pigeon was released. An old gentleman noticed it, and upon asking the reason, was told that it was to bring the Arsenal luck.

A few minutes went by and then he was heard to remark, "Well, they sent up a pigeon to bring Woolwich luck, so if Leicester want to win they had better sent up their 'Sparrow.'" (Sparrow was Leicester's centre forward.)

Up to Date.

A school master of Southend, examining his pupils on subjects of general information asked one boy if he knew the great question of the day.

"Yes, sir," was the prompt reply, "How Southend whacked Watford."

Parker's Promotion.

When the Orient players came on to the field it was noticed that Parger was leading them, he having been elected skipper for the coming campaign. As Parker appeared, one of the spectators shouted: 'What ho, Parker, P.C."

His friend at once corrected him. "He aint no P.C. now, he's been promoted in the 'force' to a captain."

PETERBOROUGH THIRD IN ATTENDANCE DURING THE SEASON JUST CLOSED

More People Saw the Ball Games Here Than at Any Other Canadian League City Except the Two Leaders, Ottawa and London.

THE LEAGUE MEETING

TORONTO, Nov. 1.—A meeting of the Canadian League was held yesterday afternoon at the Prince George Hotel, to wind up the season's business. President J. P. Fitzgerald was in the chair, and these representatives present:—

Berlin—W. Whitt, H. A. Bagen, E. W. Clement.
Guelph—W. H. Denham.
Brantford— T. J. Nelson and Roy Brown.
London—Geo. O'Neill, S. Stevely.
Ottawa—M. T. Bryce.
Hamilton—M. M. Robinson, K. Lee, J. J. Burns.
St. Thomas—E. Killingsworth.

The past was the most successful season the league has had. After $1,000 was added to the sinking fund of the league and other expenses were paid, the eight clubs divided $1,200 equally, the balance remaining of the ten per cent. of the total gate receipts of all the games played during the season.

Ottawa out-drew any of the other clubs in the league in the season by 12,000 attendance. London received the second largest patronage, while Peterborough was third. Hamilton showed a decided falling off from the previous year.

It was unanimously decided that President Fitzgerald should attend the meeting of the National Association of Baseball Leagues at Columbus, Ohio, on Nov. 11, and that an effort be made to protect the league from clubs of Class B. drafting players from the Canadian League and turning them over to the majors, at $250 less than the drafting price. Seven players were drafted from the league during the season, while another was sold, bringing to the various clubs a total of $4,850.

The matter of transferring the Guelph and Berlin franchise to other larger icties was left over to the annual meeting, which will be held in December.

It was stated that Erie, Pa., had been granted provisionally the right to oits territory as a member of the Canadian League, and that it was ready to join as soon as granted a franchise.

Two games were forfeited last season, and in order to avoid a repetition of this sort of thing, an dalso to protete the public, a motion was passed to the effect tha if a visiting team leave the field or forfeit a game before seven innings have een played, they shall not be entiled to the guarantee or a share of the proceeds. If the home team is at fault, the visiting team will receive the full guarantee. It is also compulsory that rain checks shall be issued, good for the next day. This new rule will make it a costly proceeding for any club to forfeit, especially on a holiday or a Saturday.

The most gratifying feature in connection with yesterday's Canadian League meeting was the statement of the attendance at the differtn towns in he circui. Peterborough, which stands fifth in population, was third in attendance, being beaten only by Ottwa and London, the two leading teams in the League standing. Hamilton, with nearly five times Peterborough's population, did not have as good an attendance record, and the figures are very gratifying.

A THREE-HOUR BOUT

The Great "Hack" Tells of His Hardest Mat Struggle

"In the course of a lengthy career as both an amateur and professional wrestler," says George Hackenschmidt, the famous wrestler, in the Strand, "I have taken part in so many strenuous bouts on the mat that I find it a matter of extreme difficulty to pin myself down to one performance as being my best. However, after carefully running over my record, I think I must give my vote to my success in the great Budapest tournament.

"In this important Continental tournament I defeated Albert de Paris in five minutes, Aimable in 25 minutes, and Vandenberg in 24 minutes. 'So far,' I remember thinking at the time, 'things seem fairly easy for me. Then came my bout with the famous Turk Kara Ahmed. The struggle which followed I shall never forget as long as I live. For three solid hours we wrestled and wrestled, until it seemed as if the contest would go on far into the night. At one moment Kara Ahmed seemed to be possessed of a winning advantage; then positions were reversed, and I looked to be 'top dog.' At the end of the third hour we were both almost as strong as at the start, but at last I saw a favorable opportunity. With the quickness of a panther I seized it, and in a trice the Turk's mountain of shoulders were pinned to the ground."

A GREAT YOUNG PITCHER

RAY KEATING

18-year-old spit-baller of the New York Americans. Frank Chance declares Keating is the best young pitcher he ever saw—and Chance has looked over some good ones. Keating uses a fast ball and the spitter. He has a near curve, but he seldom uses it. Keating's fast ball has such a hop and his spitter breaks so viciously that the batters failed to solve him.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Miller, 348 Water street, desire to thank their many friends and acquaintances, for the practical kindness and sympathy shown during their recent bereavement, in the death of a son, the late Herbert Miller.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Dan McDonald, of Toronto, are visiting friends in the city.

Mrs. E Smith and daughter Effie, of Parry Sound, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. McWilliams, 273 Park Street.

Mrs. Jas. O'Connell, of East City, has just returned from Toronto, where she has spent two very pleasant weeks, the guest of her daughter Miss Marguerite E. O'Connell, B. A.

Mrs. W. Gendreau and little son, Bernard, Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Delaire and son Gerard of Rochester, N. Y., who were called here by the death of the late Mrs. P. Delaire, returned to their homes to-day.

TWO FIRES TO-DAY

This morning at 10 minutes to seven, sparks from the cupola of the Lock Works set fire to the roof of a nearby residence. The fire brigade were called and put it out with the chemicals. Only a few shingles were burned.

At 10 o'clock this morning a chimney fire at the home of Mrs. Young, 345 Rubidge street, called for the fire brigade's attention. It was put out without damage.

APPEALS TO THE COURT OF REVISION WERE CONSIDERED

The Court of Revision met last night, with Mr. Wm. Langford presiding, and Mr. Bernard Morrow and Mr. W. F. Thompson present. A number of the twenty-six appeals were of minor importance and in other cases the appellant was not present. In many instances the assessor's figures were upheld

Mr. B. F. Ackerman was heard in regard to the appeal of B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co. He said the assessment on and and buildings had been increased $4,200, while the business assessment for 1912 was for school rates only, whereas now they are assessed for the full amount of taxes on the business assesment. Mr. Ackerman said there was a by-law fixing the comany's assessment.—Laid over.

The Toronto General Trusts Company asked that front part of lot 10, plan 12 and 77 Smith Street, be assessed to Mrs. Henrietta Sadler instead of Alex. Hamilton estate. Mrs. Sadler claimed there was an over assessment. Judgment: The Alex. Hamilton estate relieved and Mrs. Sadler assessed.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer over-assessed on income. Reduced from $1,200 to $900.

Mr. W. C. Barrie, that he was wrongly assessed $250 for income. Assessment for income struck off.

F. A. Dalton, that he was over-assessed on 276 Dalhousie Street and 582 Chamberlain Street. Appeal dismissed, assessment confirmed.

From D. Desautel, that the north half of block F, S. Perry and E. George Street, was wrongly assessed in two parcels. The assessment of $300 on Lock Street was struck off. The same amount was placed on the other, leaving the total unchanged.

From. Geo. Evans, that 139 and 140 Robinson Street had been sold to the R. C. Episcopal Corporation. Assessment on land $3,300, buildings $1,000, total $4,300. Mr. Evans relieved and R. C. Corporation entered as owner, and value placed in exempted property column as it is used for school purposes.

F. E. Kerr, 586 Gilmour Street, that he was wrongly assessed for $450 income. Appeal dismissed. Assessment confirmed.

From N. T. Laplante, that 283 and 288 Romaine Street were over-assessed. No. 283, land $680, building $200. Reduced to land $800. No. 288, land $480 and building $100. Total $580. Land reduced to $440.

Geo. Pollard, wrongly assessed for a dog. Appeal allowed, assessment for dog struck off.

James Sutherland, that he was over-assessed. Properties and judgments were as follows:

323 George Street, land $3600, building $1,200. Total $5,000. Business assesment $1,500; reduced to $1,050, otherwise confirmed.

540 Albert Street; land $570, (67.3 ft.); building $450; vacant land (65.3 ft), $500.

Lot 20, 63 ft. of land $570, building $30. Lot 21, land $590. The land reduced to $8 per foot.

539 Albert (64.3 ft.) land $580, building $100. Confirmed.

Toronto Savings and Loan Co., that they were over-assessed for 164 Charlotte Street, $2,500.—Reduced to $2,000.

D. Webster, that he was over-charged for 287 Dalhousie Street. Appeal dismissed. Assessment confirmed.

D. Cushing, that there were two charges of $1.05 each on No. 153 Rubidge Street. Only one charge resulted.

London Life Insurance Co., that they were over-assessed for business. Appeal dismissed; assessment confirmed.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., over-assessed for several properties. Laid over until Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

J. H. Callander asked that E. D. Martin be assessed for 502 Bonacord street, instead of himself. Change made as asked, with consent of Mr. Martin.

WEDDING BELLS

ARMSTRONG—ADAMS.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Adams, Smith, was the scene of a pretty house wedding on Wednesday, Oct. 29th, when their eldest daughter, Eva M., was united in marriage to Mr. Albert Armstrong, also of Smith, by the Rev. Mr. Peever of the George Street Methodist Church, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Ireland of the Bridgenorth Circuit.

Among the numerous gifts to the bride was a handsome mantle clock from the Ladies' Aid of the Fairview Church, and a set of hand-painted china from her Sunday school class.

The bride's going away dress was a golden brown serge, with hat to match, also wearing the gift of the groom, a Persian lamb muff and stole.

Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong left on the 4.20 C.P.R. train for an extended trip to Chicago and points west.

OBITUARY

VIOLET MAY WHATLEY.

The death occurred last night of Violet May Whatley, daughter of Mr. Samuel Whatley, of North Monaghan, after a week's illness of pneumonia. The child was three years and a half old.

The funeral will take place from the family residence on Monday afternoon, at 2:30, to the Little Lake cemetery

BIRTH.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

Monday promises a sagging stock market on account of the very uncertain character of developments immediately pending and not likely to be more definite inside of several days. We refer first to the Mexican situation which is exciting apprehension on account of intervention reports. Second to the holiday in London to-day and Tuesday in New York. We think the Supreme Court will hand down a decision of importance on Monday.

The money situation reflects the disbursement preparations which will be past in a few days. The outlook, therefore, favours the waiting attitude which has been favoured by a number of the largest traders. We still think the buying is better than the seling, in fact we have strong evidence to that effect, but the absorption is only on a scale down. We suggest a waiting policy until the market shows a little more strength.

'Is Royal 'ighness.

An amusing story of King George when he was a young prince is related. His Majesty always greatly liked the old-fashioned London horse-bus, and as a young prince knew and patronized every route. He himself has recounted this adventure. Seated immediately behind the driver, he heard the latter say to a troublesome horse: "Come up, yer Royal 'ighness; come up."

"Why do you give him that name?" asked the unknown prince.

"Well, y' see, guv'nor," answered Jehu, "that 'oss is so 'aughty and lazy and good for nothing that I—well, I just calls 'im 'is royal 'ighness—there ain't nothin' else for it."

MANY DISAPPOINTED

Crowds Fought For Places at Booth Meeting in Toronto

AUDITORS WERE IN TEARS

TORONTO, Nov. 3.—Eager to hear General Bramwell Booth, and excited by fear that they would not be admitted to the meeting, hundreds of citizens fought desperately for places in the lines formed near Massey Hall yesterday afternoon and evening. Women were crushed and children jostled about until driven to tears, while many robust men found their strength useless to cope with the throng. Thousands were turned away, but remained nearby in the hope that room would be made for them when the fortunate people vacated their seats.

To the police must go the credit for preventing serious injury to scores who risked body and limb in the mad scramble to reach points of vantage to see the general on the street or to force an entrance into the hall.

Except a few women who became faint, nothing serious resulted.

After a short preliminary service, the tall, white-haired leader advanced to the front of the platform and began a most impressive and interesting speech. The first part was taken up with a sketch of his father's life, which he described as a life of service, of complete surrender to the will of God. He was above all a worker who knew no weariness in his chosen and absorbing task. The secret of his success was summed up by a saying of the late general, "I made up my mind that God should have all there was of William Booth." The mainspring of his life and work was love, love for all God's creatures, and a love which found its highest expression in never-ceasing humble service. To himself he was not only a father, but also a companion and friend. "I rejoice that God gave him to us," simply and reverently said the general.

GENERAL BOOTH.

At the conclusion of the general's speech, Commissioner Lawley made an impassioned appeal to the people to join the movement. As he spoke a storm of emotion swept over the audience, several of whom became hysterical and gave vent to their feelings in an unrestrained manner. Large numbers, burying their faces in their handkerchiefs, sobbed and moaned and advanced to the penitent form.

TO BOYCOTT MILKMEN.

Mayor Allan of Hamilton Urges a General Milk Strike.

HAMILTON, Nov. 3.—That Mayor Allan is firm in his desire to conduct a crusade against the high cost of living in this city, was evident Saturday when he issued the following request: "I strongly advise and request every citizen of Hamilton who is in good health and who desires to get milk at a reasonable price, to refrain for the next four days or a week from taking milk from the retail dealers of this city. I also advise these citizens to try condensed milk. It will not be a very great hardship, and I am convinced that it will have very great results."

His worship regards the situation as critical and he is taking every possible course open to him to force the retailers to abandon their high price for milk.

WHIPS FOR ASQUITH.

Suffragettes First Threw Red Pepper Into His Car.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Suffragettes attacked Premier Asquith again Saturday afternoon, throwing pepper on him and trying to get at him with whips, as he motored from Larbert House to Stirling.

The onslaught took place as the Prime Minister passed through Plean Village. Several militants surrounded his automobile and jumped on its steps. One of them filled the car with pepper while another wielded a dog whip, but the lashes failed to reach Asquith.

Scotland Yard men following in a police car drove the woman away. Asquith was unhurt and refused to have the suffragettes arrested.

Four women well known in Edinburgh and Glasgow as militant suffragettes were arrested last night as principals in the attack on Premier Asquith.

Mrs. Pankhurst and Gompers.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the English militant suffragette, arrived in Chicago early Saturday from Nashville, to fill a lecture engagement yesterday afternoon. She plans to remain here until to-morrow, when she will go to Minneapolis to address a meeting Thursday.

Saturday night the British militant and Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor led the grand march at a Hallowe'en dance given by the Women's Trade Union League.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Miss Emily Taylor, formerly of Hamilton, was seriously injured when knocked down by an automobile in Winnipeg Saturday.

Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden left Ottawa on Saturday on a six weeks' trip to the south for the benefit of his health. Mrs. Borden has accompanied him.

Practically the whole business section of Jackson, Ky., the scene of many feud murders, was destroyed by fire Saturday with a loss of $150,000.

James W. Mercer, ex-treasurer of the United Farmers of Alberta, of Strathmore, was sentenced to 18 months in the penitentiary for embezzlement of funds.

Moose Jaw Presbyterian College was formally opened Saturday. This is the first boys' college established under the supervision of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

J. G. Taggart of Sydenham has handed in his resignation of district agricultura' representative for the Government. He is leaving to take up other work in western Canada.

George Major, aged 59, was killed, and four other firemen were badly injured when automobile hook and ladder truck overturned while responding to an alarm in Rochester.

Dr. Odell Robertson, the oldest medical practicioner in Waterloo County, died Saturday morning at his home in St. Jacobs, aged 86 years. He had practiced in the village for 45 years.

Major R. J. Birdwhistle, general secretary of the Canadian branch of the St. John Ambulance Association, is making a tour of the Maritime Provinces in the interests of first aid work.

The steamer Pomeranian, from London and Havre, went through a terrific ocean storm on Oct. 24 which so disabled the vessel that she did not reach Montreal until Saturday, three days late. Two lifeboats were swept away.

FELL OFF TRAIN.

Harold Williams of Gananoque Succumbs To His Injuries.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 3. — Harold Williams, aged 18 years, whose home was at Gananoque, died Saturday afternoon at the hospital here as the result of terrible injuries received on the line of the G. T. R., some three miles east of Belleville, earlier in the day.

With two companions, Williams was riding on a freight train and in some manner fell off. The result was his right arm was amputated at the shoulder by the wheels and he was otherwise injured. The victim was brought to the city hospital but never regained consciousness.

An inquest was opened and adjourned for the taking of evidence. The remains were subsequently shipped to Gananoque.

Will Electrify Swiss Railways.

BERNE, Switzerland, Nov. 3.—The Swiss Government is providing for the expenditure of $7,600,000 for electrification of the St. Gotthard Railway. This, it is said, will be the first step in the electrification of all the Swiss national railways.

EUROPE WILL WAIT

Will Defer Action in Mexico Until Situation Clears

BANK AVERTED A CRISIS

LONDON, Nov. 3.—In British diplomatic circles there does not seem to be much concern regarding adverse press comments relative to the handling of the Mexican situation. The tendency is to wait for definite action that will show just what course President Wilson and the United States Government intends to pursue. It is believed that a definite pronouncement by the United States Government will not be long delayed.

Bank Aids Financiers.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 3. — Dario and Evaristo Madero, who are confined in San Juan prison at Vera Cruz, have been placed at the disposal of the Federal District judge here for a period of seventy-two hours, during which time evidence against them will be considered. If this evidence is inconclusive. It is probable that their release will be recommended to the Federal authorities.

The financial stress apparent Friday has been relieved temporarily by assistance given to the Government by the National Bank. All the Government employes are now said to have been paid.

The members of the special Mexican embassy to Japan, who are now on their way back to Mexico from Havana aboard the training ship Zaragoza, are not under arrest, according to officials here, but they will be subjected to an inquiry as to the expenditure of 90,000 pesos by them on their trip abroad with General Felix Diaz.

Calero Goes to Havana.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 3.—Manuel Calero, the candidate of the Liberal party in the recent Presidential elections was a passenger on the steamer Corcovado, which sailed for Havana yesterday. Senor Calero will proceed to Washington. He was closely watched by detectives while here.

A Baffling Situation.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Daily Telegraph, in an editorial, this morning argues that for the European nations the Mexican question is not one of ethics but of practical politics. It readily admits, however, that there is a great deal to be said on the other side, and that the whole matter is so perplexing and baffling that the only prudent course is to wait on events.

"We believe we are right in saying that both France and Germany, as well as Great Britain, will take no decided action until the situation is clearer," says the paper.

The Daily Graphic again urges the Government to retrace its steps in the Mexican affair.

SCALDED IN BATH.

Toronto Woman Succumbs To Scalding at Boston, Mass.

TORONTO, Nov. 3.—It was learned in Toronto last night that Miss Agnes Horgan, superintendent of the St. Philip Neri Hostel, Sherbourne street, died in the City Hospital, Boston, Mass., at 1.30 yesterday afternoon.

Miss Horgan went to Boston two weeks ago with a party attending the Catholic missionary conference, and was scalded in her bath tub on the night of her arrival. She was attended by the house surgeon and staff of the city hospital, where the best medical care and attention was given her, and it was expected that she would be able to return to Toronto in a week. Instead of this the scalding was so severe that it resulted in her death.

Miss Mary Hoskin, president of the women's auxiliary, and Mrs. Bannon remained with her in Boston when the rest of the party returned to Toronto last week, and were with her at her death. Her own sister, Miss Mary Horgan, left Toronto yesterday and reached her bedside just before she died.

The body will reach Toronto on Wednesday morning.

THEY FAVOR THE JEWS.

Only One Theologian at Trial Believes In Ritual Murder.

KIEV, Nov. 3.—Counsel for the defence in the trial of Mendel Beilis, charged with murdering the Christian boy Yushinsky, have succeeded in preventing the prosecution from having the minutes read of previous cases dealing with alleged ritual murder. The medical testimony having been concluded, the sitting yesterday began with the testimony of theological witnesses, among whom only one upholds the views of the prosecution, namely, the priest, Father Pranaites, whose evidence has already to a great extent been repudiated by the Vatican authorities.

Among other experts to be heard is Prof. Kakavsoff, a relative of the Russian Premier. A long list of abstruse questions concerning ritual murder was put to the theological experts, neither questions nor answers apparently being comprehensible to the jury, which is composed of peasants and small shopkeepers. The list included such questions as "By what did the Jews replace the victim in the case of the first-born sacrificed to Jehovah?" "What portion of the body, according to the interpretation of the Talmud and the Cabala, is it out of which the soul is mostly held to issue with the blood?"

While Father Pranaites was testifying he mention Christ, whereupon the president of the court declared that the name of Christ could only be mentioned when the court was sitting behind closed doors. Pranaites contended that the extermination of the Christians was the main object of the existence of the Talmudists.

Smallpox In Russell County.

OTTAWA, Nov. 3—Owing to a visit paid to St. Onge, in Russell County, near this city, by Dr. Lomer, medical officer of health, and Dr. Hollingsworth, civic food inspector, the shipment of milk or cream from that place to Ottawa has been prohibited. The reason is the large number of smallpox cases. In one school, out of a class of 52, there were only 18 pupils in attendance. Dr. Lomer visited a couple of houses to make sure it was smallpox and found practically all in each house either suffering from or just getting over a milk attack. He was told that the same conditions existed on both sides of the road for two miles and a half. The disease is of a mild type.

STRIKES AN ICEBERG

Steamer Manchester Commerce Crippled in Straits

ABLE TO STEAM TO PORT

MONTREAL, Nov. 3.—The Manchester Commerce struck an iceberg while passing through the Straits of Belle Isle early on Saturday morning and sustained injuries which, though severe, did not incapacitate her entirely, for she was subsequently able to shape her course for St. John's, Nfld., where she will be docked for overhauling and repair.

The weather report from Point Amour on Saturday morning, as supplied by the signal station at that point, was "cloudy," no mention being made of fog; but fog sometimes falls quickly in the straits at this time of the year, especially when ice in floating in the vicinity, so it may yet transpire that it was on account of sudden fog obscuring her course that the Manchester Commerce met with the accident which compelled her to make for the nearest port. Meagre details of the accident reached here late last night.

J. R. Binning, managing director of the Furness-Withy interests in Montreal, stated that he had merely been informed that the Manchester Commerce had struck an iceberg. As to the extent of her injuries he had received no details. However, he was confident that she was in no immediate danger of sinking.

Icebergs are known to be afloat in the steamer track in the Straits of Belle Isle, as the White Star liner Canada encountered four of them during her last trip from Liverpool. Capt. Jones reported upon arrival here that the first of these bergs had been met 80 miles to the east of Belle Isle; the second five miles to the east, the third off Cape Norman, and the last 13 miles west of that point, all four being directly in the track of the steamers navigating the straits.

The Manchester Commerce, which is commanded by Capt. Couch, is an iron screw steamer built at West Hartlepool in 1899. She is of 5,663 tons gross register, 430 feet 5 inches long, 48 feet 2 inches beam, and 30 feet 1 inches deep. Her officers and crew number about 40. She has few if any passengers aboard.

Crew of Schooner Saved.

BOSTON, Nov. 3.—The crew of the schooner Gypsum Emperor, which was dismasted in a storm, were picked up by the Hamburg American line steamer Barcelona, from Philadelphia for Hamburg, according to a wireless message received here yesterday.

The Gypsum Emperor was bound for Halifax from New York with coal. She was built in 1892 at Parraboro, N.S., and was owned by her master, Capt. Thomas Martin of Philadelphia.

WATERSPOUTS REPORTED.

One Was Six Hundred Feet High Say Liner's Officials.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—A remarkable story of waterspouts in mid-Atlantic is told by officers of the White Star liner Cedric, which arrived at Queenstown Friday. The first they saw had the appearance of a black, funnel-shaped streak. This was a few miles off the starboard bow in mid-Atlantic on the outward voyage from Queenstown. The waterspout, which was estimated to be 600 feet high, was traveling at the rate of five miles an hour.

As the column faded away in the distance it was succeeded by a smaller spout, which in turn was followed by a severe squall, accompanied by vivid lightning. Then came two more waterspouts, bringing to an end the strange phenomena, which the officers unite in saying were the most remarkable they ever witnessed.

Barge Blocks Canal.

CORNWALL, Nov. 3.—The barge Cornwall of the Montreal Transportation Co., in tow of the tug Emmerson, parted its lines while coming down the Cornwall Canal and swung around, blocking navigation for a short time. She was finally faced about and taken out of the canal to the lake, where she was beached. Shortly afterwards the barge sank, and it is feared she will be a total loss. Part of the bow is out of the water. The Cornwall is one of the old barges which navigate with tow lines. She was laden with 40,000 bushels of No. 1 hard wheat, and was bound for Montreal.

Can Prove an Alibi.

OTTAWA, Nov. 3.—R. T. Richardson, a prominent dairyman, residing at Woodroffe, near this city, has been served with a summons to appear in Toronto police court to-day on the charge of driving an automobile on the wrong side of Dundas street, Toronto, on Oct. 25. As a matter of fact, however, he has not been in Toronto since Exhibition week. This is the third case of Ottawa people being erroneously summoned to appear in the Toronto courts for similar bylaw infractions. Richardson has turned the summons over to the local authorities and says he will not appear.

Health Expert Goes To Africa.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Col. W. C. Gorgas, whose work in producing healthful conditions in the Panama canal zone brought him world-wide fame, left here Saturday for South Africa, on a mission to help the medical experts in the Transvaal, devise ways and means to decrease the deaths caused by pneumonia. Mrs. Gorgas and Major R. E. Noble accompanied him abroad. He expects to return in January.

CARS ARE MOBBED.

Crowds In Indianapolis Aid Strikers Against Company.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 3.—The Indianapolis Traction & Terminal Co., whose men went on strike Friday night, attempted to run its cars yesterday, but gave up when notified by Supt. of Police Hyland that the police would be unable to prevent bloodshed unless the cars were withdrawn. Joseph Johnson, a striking motorman, was shot and wounded by a policeman, who fired into the crowd that surged around the first car to be sent out. Two cars were taken from the barns, each filled with policemen, but the crowds packed around them so tightly they could not be moved. Soon after the shooting of Johnson they were ordered back to the barns.

Governor Ralston, in a statement last night charged that the city authorities are not doing their duty in failing to provide police protection. He refused a request of Mayor Lew Shanks that he call out the militia, and declared that the mayor has full authority and power to provide sufficient protection to run the cars.

A further attempt will be made to start cars to-day. Supt. of Police Hyland notified Robert I. Todd, president of the traction company, that he would supply as many men as possible and Todd declared he would start the cars as soon as the police were ready to go with them.

The downtown streets remained packed with people all day, although most of the disturbances ended when the attempts to move the cars ceased.

More Rubber Horrors.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3. — Unofficial reports have been received here of alleged outrages on Bolivian natives in the rubber country, almost paralleling the Putamayo atrocities in Peru. Following the precedent set in the Putamayo case, officials here expect Great Britain will call on the United States to investigate, and in that case the facts will be examined by consular officers and a report made to London.

Degeneration of Names.

Thomas Hardy showed his keen eye for the characteristic in giving his heroine the distinguished name of D'Urberville, corrupted by long rustic wear to Darbyfield. But many stately English names have gone further down hill than that, for example the mean and trivial Snooks, which has little to recall Sevenoaks. One would suppose that an easy prize winner in a degeneration race, yet Professor Weekley, in his book on the romance of English names, finds some that have descended as far and started higher. There is nothing very distinguished, for example, about Codlin—a novelist would hardly dare use it save for a comic figure. As Quodling it is merely queer. As Querding it begins to seem foreign, and the etymologist can make a shrewd guess where he is coming out; while Querdelyon is but the thinnest of masks for the illustrious Norman original, Coeur de Lion. In England the meanest little names may have the greatest history, especially if they started as French, which fares badly on English tongues.

"THE MEDIATOR"

By ROY NORTON

His face had settled into a frown as he saw the urgency for action.

"Why didn't you go back to the Canada Hill and tell Murdock?" he asked.

"I was afraid! They got on the road between me and the mine. I had to come this way. I couldn't go back. I was afraid to strike off onto the hills, because the woods are dark, and they might hear me, and—"

"Well, how long did you hide there?" he demanded.

"Almost an hour."

"And they were still there?"

"Yes."

He turned toward his tent with a rapidity that suggested decision.

"Maggie," he said briskly, "you go on down the gulch and wake Channel, and tell him what you've told me. Then get him to take you over the hills and down to the Canada Hill, and tell Murdock to get his men out as quick as the Lord'll let him, and come over toward the Big Horn. There's a short cut across the tops of the hills up there that I'll take, and I'll head off the expressmen and tell 'em to turn back. I'll wait till I see 'em, and maybe by that time Murdock and his crowd will be over, and we'll put an end to this thievin' that's been goin' on here in this country. Now, don't be afraid; but just go! And get a hustle on you, Maggie, because there ain't a whole lot of time to be thrown on the waste dump!"

Frightened as she was, she obeyed him, and ran down the trail, while he went ahead with his preparations. He threw on his coat, emptied the box of cartridges into the pockets, slipped the gun into his belt, and, without looking back, plunged across the gulch and up the hillside.

"Lucky thing I made a trip over to that road one day," he muttered to himself, as he gained the top of the first hill, and looked around him. Although the moonlight changed the appearance of the landmarks, he soon found his direction, and hastened onward. At the top of the second and last hill the sweat was running in steaming rivulets over his face, and he was almost breathless from his exertions. "Now she'll be downhill," he grunted, with satisfaction "Whew! But that was some climbin'! Wonder how long it took me? I'll have to get a jump on me to reach that road and watch for the expressmen. 'Twon't do for Big Bill's gang to see 'em first!"

He was rapidly developing a plan in his head, that consisted of striking the road, looking to see if there were any fresh tracks on it, then turning back toward Peaceful Hill, as fast as he could go with caution, and thus intercepting the gold waggon in case he was not too late. The one feature that worried him was whether or not Big Bill had not grown tired of waiting on the Canada Hill road, and already moved around in the other direction and planted his band in readiness for the ambuscade. He wondered how they could have got the information, and then allowed himself to dwell on the suspicion that some millman in one of the mines must have been dishonest, and got word to them for a possible share in the loot.

"Lordy!" he exclaimed to himself in that same whispering mumble, "I wish I had two or three good men with me. I don't like this lay-out at all, at all! It looks right bad!"

He stumbled now and then as he plunged down the mountainside, and began to go more cautiously. It would not do to warn anyone of his approach, if there were those lying in wait, and that was a chance which might be possible. He wished that he had moccasins instead of the heavy mountain shoes, for then he could, with his wood lore, have travelled noiselessly. From the high brow of a hill, where the trees had come to an end against a barren space, he looked down, and, far below, saw the pale thread of the road as it wound along in its course toward the crest of the Divide. It was bare and white and nowhere was there a moving object.

His hope mounted higher. He would be in time. He went forward, however, with the same caution, for there was no telling what might be concealed behind those grey rocks, grouped in grotesque, rugged shapes below, and bordering the trail. He stopped to listen now and then, but all was as still as it could be only in the high, calm hills. Once he thought he heard the sound of a horse's shoe clinking against stone, and for a full minute repressed his breathing and strained his auditory nerves for a repetition of the sound. It rendered him fearful lest he be too late, and more cautious. He stoopd down and pulled off his shoes, tied their laces together, and fastened them to his belt behind. Now he went catlike, slipping swiftly from boulder to boulder and hoping all the time that it was a useless precaution.

"Humph! Ain't this tough luck!" he exclaimed softly, as he came out to another point and found himself looking down a sheer drop of a hundred feet. "Nice place for a dark night! I got on the wrong lead, somehow. Wish I knew this hill better. Guess I'll have to go around."

Still annoyed by this misfortune, he made his way slowly and with considerable effort back along the hillside, and was compelled now and then to climb, hand over hand, over some miniature cliff, or rampart, that had resisted heroism. He entered a belt of timber where the shadows were lacework at his feet, or so dark, and heavy, and threatening that he traversed a dim way of terror. He was eager for contact with the road, where the dust might tell its story, and yet went ever more quietly as he approached it.

He emerged from the trees, and found himself on a rugged, bowlder-heaped slope, and gave a sigh of satisfaction as he saw at the foot the same pale ribbon where wound the highway Ordinarily its poetry would have appealed to him, with its history of argonauts, adventures, and rattling stages bearing men to and from the land of promise, but now he was too absorbed in his mission.

He paused, crouching behind a bowlder, and looked down toward it to see if it was clear. Off down its slow declivity lay Peaceful Hill. Still beyond that would be the fork turning over toward the Canada Hill Mine. But a little way farther would be the cut-off to the head of the canon, to which it clung as if in desperation. Away up back of him, after a sharp climb, would be the cut of the Big Horn, where Big Bill and his ruffians proposed to make a stand.

"It's sure he thought rapidly, "that they wouldn't do it anywhere else, because their chance for a getaway is better there. It's safe for me to slip down to that road and see what it has to tell."

He was already starting downward and was threading his way around the grey stones, when he heard a sound that keyed him to the highest tension, and instantly he threw himself flat on the ground, crept to a bowlder, and peered around it.

Not more than fifty feet from him he saw a dark shape hastening to the shadow of a pinnacle of rock. Even as he looked he saw another shape running in the same direction, and at the same instant heard a man's voice calling to another to "Hurry up and get behind cover!"

If these were the bandits, and they could not be no other, he thought, they were between him and the way he must go. He lifted his head higher and looked up the road, wondering if it were possible that they had all arrived too late, and that the messengers were already past and in safety. He wished that the bare spots above him afforded protecting shadows that would enable him to escape and examine that road. He did not stop to consider that Big Bill's informant, whoever he was, must have made fairly certain of the time of starting, and that, in any event, the robbers, being mountain men like himself, must have examined the trail and made certain that their prey eluded them.

He was worried, and for once mistrusted his own judgment. He thought over the possibilities of support, how long it would take Maggie and the weary old miner, to get word of the peril to Murdock, and of how soon they would be able to start. The whole affair looked desperate. The only hope he could reasonably sustain was that the special messengers had been delayed in their start, whatever hour it might have been scheduled, and thus be so far down toward the camp that the men from the Canada Hill would get there ahead of them.

In the tensity of the situation the time dragged. It seemed to him that he had been lying here an hour behind the bowlder. He began to wonder if no one would ever come, and to strain his eyes in the effort to discover some of those others in ambuscade. He was angry at them because they had changed their plan and made this, instead of the Big Horn, the scene of the hold-up. He did not stop to reason that, perhaps, they had decided, at the last moment, that this would prove a safer ground, with its possibility for escape across the canon, and off toward the railway on the other side, before pursuit could become keen and menacing. Nor did he think that, perhaps, they had come to the conclusion that this was to be their last coup around that part of California, and that they had best scatter, and seek other and less-disturbed fields. It was all a muddle, with nothing to do but wait and hope for assistance.

"Great Jimminy!" he thought and whispered to himself. "Lish Henley, you're forever a-buttin' into trouble, no matter where you be! What did you ever come here for, anyhow? Ain't you got enough to do without actin' as sheriff? You certainly are four hundred kinds of jackass, out here all alone in the night, with six men ready to gun for you the minute they know you're here! Why under the sun don't them slow dubs from the Canady get here to help you out of this mess!"

Suddenly he shut his jaws hard and lifted his head, and listened. There was the clear, unmistakable sound of hoofs and wheels coming up the road from the direction of Peaceful Hill. He raised himself to his knees and pulled his hat farther over his eyes, with an automatic, useless motion, as if striving to shut off sunlight.

"Too late!" he whispered. "It's a cinch that's the express fellers, drivin' right into this wild cat's nest, and what in the name of the great horn spoon can I do to warn 'em!"

From where he had stationed himself he could not see very far down the road, and it was difficult in that still night to estimate the distance beween the watchers and the oncoming team. He hesitated for an instant, and then, bravely reckless, lifted his pistol and fired into the air.

Of a sudden the night became hideous with sound. He had tried to give an alarm in the hope that the drivers would turn back and lash their horses to safety, without regard for his own chances of escape; but he had not thought that, perhaps, Big Bill's gang might take the shot as being the accidental discharge of a gun by one of their own men and instantly force the issue. And the latter was the case. Into the patch of open road came the mountain waggon with the driver frantically tugging at the startled animals, and an express messenger on his feet with a sawed-off shotgun clutched in his hands.

Before the echoes of the prospector's shot had begun there was a second report from the side of the trail, and the messenger doubled over, the gun flew from his hands, and he pitched forward and fell limply across the dashboard. The driver still pulled at his reins. A second shot lashed the night, and a horse screamed with pain and dropped to the road, while its mate struggled frantically to extricate itself from the entanglement.

BAD BLOOD

IS THE DIRECT CAUSE OF Pimples.

Pimples break out on the face and body, and it is impossible to get rid of them, unless you cleanse the blood of all of its impurities.

Burdock Blood Bitters is without a doubt, the very best medicine for this purpose.

This old, and reliable medicine has been in use for nearly forty years, and has a reputation unequalled by any other preparation for removing all the impurities from the blood and banishing the pimples.

Mr. Edward Paquette, Navan Centre, Ont., writes:—"One month ago my face was covered with pimples and a rash. I had tried a number of these so called blood purifiers with no avail. Seeing an almanac of yours in which you strongly recommend Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to try a bottle, and after I had taken it I could see a decided change, and after using three bottles more all the pimples had completely disappeared."

GREATEST HEADACHE CURE IN THE WORLD

Tortures of Chronic Dyspepsia Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"

SMANLEY, ONT., SEPT. 23 rd. 1912

"You certainly have the greatest Headache Cure in the world. Before "Fruit-a-tives" came before the public, I suffered tortures from Headaches caused by Stomach Disorders.

One of your travellers called on me when I had one of my raging Headaches and had my head almost raw from external applications. He insisted on my trying "Fruit-a-tives".

I did so with what I would call amazing results. They completely cured me and since then (nearly six years ago) it is only necessary for me to take one occasionally to preserve me in my present good health."

NEW CONVENIENT TRAIN TO WINNIPEG.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

The popularity of Canadian Pacific service, and the excellence of that road's equipment, has ben so greatly appreciated by the travelling public that it has been found necessary to put into service an entirely new Through Standard Express Train between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Commencing Sunday, October 26th, the "Gate City Express" will leave Toronto at 2.30 p.m., and will run daily thereafter, arriving Winnipeg at 8.25 a.m. second morning. The train will consist of the highest-class modern equipment; Observation Compartment Car, Standard Sleeping Cars, Tourist Sleeping Car, Dining Car, First-class Coach and Colonist Car. This will be found the most convenient and best train between Toronto and Winnipeg on account of the daylight departure from Toronto at an hour when the Union Station is not badly congested, and also on account of the early hour of arrival at Winnipeg.

The present "Vancouver Express" will continue to leave Toronto at 10.20 p.m. daily and will consist of the same equipment as the "Gate City Express." This train is the best to take for points west of Winnipeg, but for Winnipeg and east the "Gate City Express" is the right train to travel by.

CLUE TO A TREASURE.

Irish Stone Unearthed in Donegal Arouses Great Interest.

A discovery which he believes is of great archaeological interest has been made by Prof. Edward Spencer Dodgson, M.A., of Jesus College, Oxford, who, in company with Prof. Sawa Ichikawa, a savant from Tokio, is at present studying Gaelic at the Gortahork College, West Donegal.

He has found a peculiarly-shaped stone, which apparently has been lying unnoticed at Killult, Falcarragh, West Donegal, for several hundred years. One face of the stone is covered with Ogham-like characters, and there are indications suggesting that the stone provides a clue to the whereabouts of an extensive treasure belonging to an ancient Irish chieftain and believed to be hidden in the immediate neighborhood.

Ogham is a peculiar alphabet of straight lines used by the ancient British and Irish. Only a fractional part of the inscription has as yet been interpreted, and no further light on the message can be had pending the arrival of Ogham scholars, who are on the way to the scene of the discovery.

Prof. Dodgson was returning from an excursion to Tory Island, and had reached the neighborhood of Killult when his attention was attracted to a stone over a yard in length which lay partially exposed in a field less than 100 yards away from the east side of the local Protestant church. Some parts of the stone's surface bore a resemblance to the body of a big net of fish. The Ogham-like markings revealed themselves on the nearer view.

The professor called the attention of the owner of the field (Mr. Brady) to the position of the stone and its peculiarities, and Mr. Brady said he never noticed the markings before. With the permission of Mr. Brady the stone was removed to Gortahork College, where it attracts the attention of many teachers and the students there. Some of the markings on the stone have been deciphered, one group being interpreted as signifying soul or "spirit."

There is an old tradition in Killult that the treasure of an ancient Irish chief is hidden there, and some rare gold ornaments were found during the digging of a local mound sixty years ago.

The "Northern Whig," Belfast, suggests that the discovery of the stone is the result of a practical joke on the part of the students at the Gaelic College, who may have thought it excellent fun to provide a new version of the famous incident in "Pickwick Papers."

An Adventurous Life.

That remarkable novelist, Mr. Joseph Conrad, who now receives a well-deserved pension from the British Civil List, is a Pole by birth. He was born in 1857, his father being a well-known poet and critic, and the proprietor of a review in Warsaw. As the elder Conrad was an ardent patriot, he came under the notice of the Russian Government, and was arrested just before the Polish rising of 1861. Various members of the Conrad family were concerned in this rising, and the novelist's mother was banished to Siberia.

Mr. Joseph Conrad was educated in Cracow, and in his youth followed the sea. His first voyage was made on an English trading vessel, and in his manner he acquired a knowledge of the English language. He stuck to the sea for many years, and qualified as a master in 1884, becoming at the same time a naturalized British subject. About ten years later he wrote his first novel, "Almayer's Folley," and though it did not secure many readers, the literary critics were kind, and Mr. Conrad resolved to adopt writing as a profession.

Coster Queen Dead.

"Old Mother Snow," the queen of Clerkenwell, London, costers, is dead. Thousands of costers from all parts of London lined stretches of the road from Clerkenwell to Leytonstone as a last mark of respect to the woman who in private life was known as Mrs Catherine Snow. Never has Clerkenwel seen so impressive a funeral as that of "Old Mother Snow," as she was affectionately called, and the countless wreaths that covered the hearse showed the kindly memory in which she is held by the people of Clerkenwell. The flower girls of the district sent their tribute of white flowers in the shape of a broken column, more than four feet high. There is little time in a flower girl's life for anything but work, and the honored few who were deputed to make the column cheerfully gave up a night's rest to the task. "Old" was but a title of affection, and by the death of Mrs. Snow at the age of fifty-eight, Clerkenwell costers have lost a friend who was ever ready with practical help as well as sympathy when any of her subjects fell on evil days.

New Use For Salt.

"I have seen salt put to many usages," says a local writer, "but the other day to an entirely novel one. A man, obviously 'under the weather,' entered a shop and called for a packet of table salt. On being supplied, he swallowed a couple of mouthfuls and then took a quantity after the fashion of snuff. Then he departed. 'He often does that,' said the shopkeeper; 'it is a grand thing to sober him!'"—Cardiff Western Mail.

Proved His Claim.

While a building was in process of construction two of the tilers became engaged in a violent quarrel. So violent was it that the police were called in and the offenders taken before a magistrate. Both of the men were sober and industrious and good workmen. This, according to the testimony of the foreman in charge of their work, who had followed in hopes of being able to intercede for them.

The magistrate asked in astonishment the cause of the quarrel. It seems that one man had accused the other of stealing his coat.

"And I can prove it, too," added the man.

"How?" asked the magistrate.

"I always keep my card in the pocket," said the man.

The policeman were directed to search the garment. But they found absolutely nothing. "Gimme my coat," said the workman. It was handed to him. He took two dried peas out of the pockets and held them up triumphantly. "P. P. Peter Powell. That's me name. There's my card."

He got his coat.—New York Globe.

TORES ON THE "LINE"

HE BOUNDARY EMPORIUM IS AN INGENIOUS DEVICE.

here an Imaginary Barrier Separates the Dominion of Canada From the United States Shrewd Dealers Have Built Shops and the Goods of Two Nations Are Found Under One Roof.

A writer in The Montreal Standard ils in a recent article how he was ce asked by an "inland" Canadian hat marks the International Boundary—were there gates, or bars or ards at the points where the King's ighways cross the "Line," run on oth, pass into the States, and beome the highways of our neighbors? he questioner was inland born. He as always lived on a farm in Pontac County, and the only boundary e had seen was that separating his ounty from the county of Renfrew—is province from the Province of Ontario. And it is a boundary that none ould fail to observe and respect—he Ottawa, broad, deep, swift and rbulent. That boundary nature had t, and none can move or efface it. ut what about the boundary along housands of miles of our southern rontier, where there is no natural emarkation, and the "Line," like the arallels of latitude and the meridians of longitude, is a thing of commas and science, and of treaty too? /hat indicates it; what marks the orthern edge of our Dominion and he northern edge of their Union?

The inland enquirer thought of ates and bars and guards. There re none; and yet the line is marked, nd if one knows where to look for he markers he will know when he rosses the line. If he does not observe the markers and is not familiar ith the locality, he might cross the ine and travel for several miles beond it to the north or south without knowing that he had passed from ne country to the other—from the rovince of Quebec into the State of ermont or the State of New Hampshire, from a part of the British Empire into a part of the United States. t is easy to know when one crosses he line; it is also easy for one unamiliar with the frontier to cross it ithout being aware of the fact.

There is no gate to open, no bars to ut down, no guards to encounter. he road is open, and it runs straight from one country into the other, ike any other bit of road thereabout, ut with one all-important difference —beside the road and exact / on the ine stands the "iron post," and when t has been passed the traveler has hanged countries. If he has seen h post he will be aware of the fact; f he has not seen it and 's unfamiliar ith the locality he will go his way gnorant of the line.

One of the curious institutions of ur International Line is the "line-tore"—a sort of half and half store, hat is, one half in the United States nd one-half in Canada. There are alling houses built in the same ashion, so that their occupants lead ouble lives so far as nationality of omicile is concerned. For instance, here the highway leading from hillipsburg, in Missisquoi county, Province of Quebec, to Highgate Springs, in Franklin county, Vermont, rosses the line, there stands one of hese half-and-half houses — a new one, which is rather remarkable, for, s a rule, the line houses were built ears ago. This one is comparatively ew, and it belongs to and is occupied y a man who owns farms on either ide of the line that here meet. His anded property is divided by the International Line and possibly to preserve symmetry, he built his house across the line. His eals are prepared in a Vermont kitchen and eaten n a Vermont dining-room; he reads his newspaper and smokes his pipe in a Canadian sitting-room, and he takes h rest in a Canadian bedroom. In such an environment one should be able to take a broad and comprehensive view of international problems.

The line-store is an old institution, h age of many of the buildings telling this. The men who devised them and who built and maintained the first ones, must have been as bold as they were enterprising, for there is something about the arrangement that seems to suggest defiance of the revenue laws, and if not defiance, at least a disposition to play with them. That, of course, applies only to the line-stores of long ago, when people forgot the tariffs and smuggled both ways. That was in the past, for whoever hears of smuggling now?

All along the frontier, but particularly the older settled frontier from Compton county on the east to Dundee in Huntingdon county on the west, where the line strikes the St. Lawrence, these line-stores are to be found, still carrying on an international business in a comparatively small way, and thereby serving a number of the inhabitants of two countries.

They are much of the one type—in fact, the usual country store found at cross-roads and in small villages. In the front are two windows and a door, and through the centre of the doorway runs the imaginary line that separates the two countries that occupy this part of the continent. Inside are two counters running lengthwise, so that one counter and the shelves behind it are in Canada, and the other counter and the other set of shelves are in the United States, and so from cellar to attic there is the division of goods on the national basis.

In the cellar the barrel of coal oil is rolled up against the Canadian wall, the barrel of kerosene is rolled up against the American wall. Upstairs shelves on one side hold Canadian print, those on the other side hold American calico. And so through the whole stock—the rival products of the two countries meet here under a common room in friendly rivalry.

Do they never mingle? Do the principles of free trade never prevail here, when the customer and the merchant are alone, and a Canadian customer decides that she will purchase the cheaper American kerosene across the cellar, or the American customer "guesses" that he will try some of the Canadian woollen goods on the north shelves? These are the secrets of the line-store.

The case of the Chicago baby not a year old that required an operation for appendicitis rather knocks out some of the theories as to the cause of that sort of trouble.

FATAL AMBITION NOBLE AMBITION

Ambition a Prime Necessity to a Successful Life.

TEXT IS WRONGLY TRANSLATED

Its True Import—Two Notable Examples In the Bible of Right and Wrong Ambitions—A Glorious Life and Prospect Ruined by Wrong Ambitions—In Contrast, Another Glorious Life Enhanced In Eternal Glory by Following Right Ambitions—The Lesson to the Church of Christ—Incidental Lessons to All and to Angels.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

Washington, D. C., November 2. —Of Pastor Russell's two discourses here today we report the one on "Ambitions—Noble and Ignoble." He took for his text Philippians 2:6, 7, but corrected the translation, declaring that he had the support of scholarship in rendering it thus: "Who, being in the form of God, did not meditate a usurpation to be on an equality with God, but [contrariwise] made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant." He said:

Whoever has no ambition has not properly begun to live. Ambition implies appreciation of the value of life—a weighing of prospects and possibilities—a decision, and a fixed determination of will. Parents and teachers should aim to lift before the mental vision of the young noble ideals, and to assist them in determining what they would copy and which goal they will bend life's energies to reach. To such parents and teachers many of those successful in life refer in terms of endearment, declaring how much they owe to the encouragement of ideals and ambitions to which these assisted them.

As we learn to read character and to observe people, we perceive that many are wholy without ambition; or that their ambitions are so low and trivial as not to be of real benefit. In a crowd of a thousand people, less than a hundred will show by their faces and their energy that they have an ideal, an ambition, and are pursuing it. In other words, nine-tenths of our poor, fallen race lack the very mainspring of life.

This lack of proper ambition not only makes life a drudgery instead of a pleasure, but it is a menace to our social fabric. According to the Bible, it is this nine-tenths of the human family, without lawful ambitions, that will be anarchists, striving to pull down the structure of civilization in a kind of blind fury —the awakening of an ambition which, knowing not how to vent itself, will bring trouble upon all.

It is the ambitious tenth of humanity that cause the wheels of progress to turn. Their ambitions are keeping their own minds actively occupied and are giving employment to the remainder of men. The ambitious mechanic hopes to become an inventor and to rise in the social scale. The ambitious clerk strives for success, hoping to become a successful merchant. The successful merchants, princes and captains of industry take pride in building up monumental edifices, in the construction of great bridges, tunnels, etc. Others have ambitions along professional lines.

There is a general tendency among the ambitionless to view these successful people harshly, to think of their ambitions as purely selfish, giving no credit to the pleasure of an exercise of ambition which the majority cannot appreciate because they have none themselves.

Men with ambition leading on to genius should be admired, appreciated; and it should be remembered that they have helped mankind in general to larger conceptions of life and to wider possibilities. I grant, indeed, the necessity for legislation in restraining the rich, and especially trusts and combinations of brain and money which might endanger the liberties and prosperity of the masses. But let us never forget how much we owe to the ambitious men whom we seek to restrain from power to crush those of less ambition and less capacity, who are more or less dependent upon them.

As proving that some of our successful men were moved by ambition rather, than love of money, we note the fact that, having accumulated vast fortunes, some are directing their energies in expending the money in the endowment of colleges, the building of libraries, the financing of political and medical investigations for public weal. Whether their judgment and ours agree as respects the wisdom of their benefactions is another matter. They have a right to exercise their own judgments in the use of money which came to them through the exercise of their own brains and ambitions.

We can surely agree that a beautiful library building becomes an incentive for the erection of other beautiful buildings, even though comparatively few of the public make use of the books therein and prefer the trashy kind. Perhaps some good may also result from the endowment of great colleges, even though they are doing more than anything else to undermine faith in the personal God of the Bible, and thus hastening the great day of anarchy by destroying faith and hope in Messiah's promised Kingdom, which are an offset to the trials and difficulties of the present life.

And if to you or me should come the thought of how much more wisely we could use the money, let us check the thought, remembering that God has not entrusted it to us, and that all our time and thought may be more wisely used in connection with our own stewardship of what talent, influence and money we do possess.

We should remember that our text, and indeed the entire Bible, is addressed to the Church of Christ — to those who have left the world, who have given their all to the Lord, acceptable through Christ, and who are intent upon knowing and doing God's will. The world is left by the Lord to try out its own ambitions, to realize eventually that these result in disappointment. It is when we experience the disappointment of our own plans and ambitions that we are truly prepared to look to the Lord.

In our text the Apostle does not specify Satan in contrast with Jesus; yet we may read between the lines that He had in mind the opposite course pursued by Lucifer, who became Satan, and the Logos, who became Christ. The Scriptural record is that Lucifer was one of the highest and most glorious spirit beings—a cherub. But a sinful ambition took possession of him. Instead of the righteous ambition to serve and honor his Creator, he thought that if he had an empire of his own he could improve upon the Divine order of things.—Isaiah 14:12-15.

This ambition ultimately led Lucifer to carry out the program in connection with mankind. Thenceforth he was known as Satan, God's Adversary, "the Prince of this world, which now worketh in the hearts of the children of disobedience." According to the Bible, Satan has been permitted to have a certain amount of liberty, to show what the evil course would be and what its evil results. But according to the Bible he is soon to be restrained for a thousand years, while Messiah's Kingdom will break the shackles of sin and death, and give all the fullest opportunity to return to harmony with God and to attain everlasting life. Ultimately, Satan is to be destroyed, together with all who have his spirit of antagonism to God—insubordination—evil ambition.

Mark the sharp contrast between Satan's course and that of the Logos, the Only Begotten Son of God. The latter meditated no such usurpation of Divine authority as Lucifer aimed to obtain. On the contrary, He was the very personification of loving obedience and self-abnegation. Instead of meditating a usurpation to make Himself equal to the Father, He declared, "My Father is greater than I"; "I delight to do Thy will, O My God."—John 14:28; 10:29; Psalm 40:8.

As in due time Satan found opportunity for manifesting his ambition, so in due time the Logos found opportunity for manifesting His humility and loving obedience. Man's fall brought the opportunity —the need of a Redeemer. As it was man who was condemned to death, so the redemption of Adam and his race must be accomplished by the death of a man. The death of bulls and goats could be only typical. Neither would an angel be a corresponding price. Hence the Divine proposal to the Logos—that if He would become a man, taking the sinner's nature, but not participating in the sinner's weakness or sin, He might thus be the Redeemer of men and accomplish the Divine will.

Attached to this proposal was the promise that so great a manifestation of love, loyalty and obedience to the Father would receive a great reward—an exaltation to the Divine nature, glory, honor and immortality. Thus Jesus declared that for His faithfulness He had been rewarded by His Father with a place in His Throne.—Revelation 3:21.

St. Paul was seeking to impress the lesson of humility, as the context shows. Jesus exemplified in His own course of humility the ambition to be and to do just what would be pleasing to the Heavenly Father, not meditating for an instant to grasp Divine glory and honor, and association with the Father in His Throne. He did God's will at the cost of His life—even the death of the cross.

And behold God's wonderful grace! He who sought not to usurp the Throne, but who humbled Himself, has been exalted to the right hand of God! What an exemplification of the teachings of God's Word! Did not God declare, "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall"? He permitted Satan to be an illustration of just such a result; and this illustration is forceful in its application to all, "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble."

The Apostle points out that the Heavenly Father, who so highly rewarded our Saviour's loving obedience, has made a similar proposition to these whom He is calling during this Age to become associates with His Son. If we become dead to the world and lay down our lives in obedience to the Father's will, as Jesus did, we shall share His Throne, as He has promised. Justified by faith in our Redeemer's sacrifice, presenting our bodies living sacrifices, and faithfully persevering in the narrow way, we shall "make our calling and election sure."

The Apostle (V. 10) declares that our Master's exaltation, as a result of His humility, is so great that all eventually must recognize Him as Lord of all. Unto Him every knee shall bow of the Heavenly and the earthly families. Already the angels acknowledge Him. As we read, the Father saith, "Let all the angels of God worship [acknowledge] Him." The bowing of earth will come later.

The work of the entire thousand years of Messiah's Reign will be for the uplifting of mankind from sin and death. Whom the Son will make free will be free indeed. But all those made free will know that their release is due to the great sacrifice which Jesus accomplished in the carrying out of the Divine Plan. And all will know that the Redeemer has been honored of the Father and exalted to the chief place. And those reaching perfection will be glad to bow the knee to Him and to confess Him with their tongues.

We are not to gather from these statements that Jesus, in any sense of the word, will take the place, the glory, the honor, of the Father. Jehovah God declares, "I give not My glory to another." (Isaiah 42:8.) St. Paul explains that although Jesus will be hailed as Lord of all, nevertheless it is manifest that He is excepted who puts all things thus in subjection to the Son. St. Paul emphasizes this by telling us (1 Corinthians 15:27, 28) that it will be the Father's Power that will bring everything in subjection to the Son; and that when the Son, in carrying out the Father's gracious plans, shall have put all things in obedience to Himself, then shall He deliver up the Kingdom to the Father, that the Father may be all in all.

Truly the Divine Program, as stated in the Bible, is beautiful and wonderful. It illustrates to us elements of the Divine Character that we never could have appreciated except as man's fall into sin and death gave opportunity for the exercise of Divine Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power. Had there been no sin, no death, there would have been no opportunity for God to manifest His Justice in dealing with the sinner, no opportunity to manifest His Love for the world in providing that they should be rescued from the power of sin and death. Neither would there have been an opportunity for demonstrating Satan's disloyalty and whereupon it would lead. Neither would there have been an opportunity for testing the Only Begotten of the Father, and demonstrating the depth of His love and loyalty even unto the death of the cross, unless sin had been permitted.

Neither would there have been an opportunity for God to show His generosity in dealing with the Logos, in His high exaltation to the Divine nature and glory. There would have been no opportunity to show the length, breadth, height and depth of the Love of God in lifting the Church from the horrible pit and miry clay of sin and death, justifying them freely through the merit of Christ's sacrifice, inviting them to share in His glory, honor and immortality, and finally bringing the Elect to participation in the Divine nature, and in the great work of Messiah.—Revelation 2:10, 26, 27.

In view of what we have seen of the Divine arrangement there surely is room for the exercise of the most boundless ambition imaginable amongst those blest with the hearing ear and the Gospel Message. It would be a great ambition to strive to become kings or queens of the kingdoms of the world. It would be a great ambition to hope to become judges, senators, or the President of the United States. But such great ambitions would be as nothing when compared with that set before believers of God's Word—the ambition to be received by the great Creator as sons, partakers of the Divine nature (2 Peter 1:4), heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord, to a Heavenly inheritance and Kingdom everlasting.

If any one wants a grand ambition, here is one worth dying for! Indeed, it can be attained only by dying. First must come the death of this will as respects earthly aims, projects, ambitions, etc. Then gradually must come the transformed mind, which rejoices to die daily and to suffer with Christ, if so be that we may be also glorified with Him. (Romans 8:17.) This is the ambition necessary to make true, loyal soldiers of the Cross, willing to endure hardness in the Cause of the Captain of their Salvation, and to lay down life in the service of the King of kings.

One might suppose that such a Message would find millions anxious and willing to lay hold upon its terms. But no! only a few have faith—and without faith they cannot be pleasing to God. Some have a little faith and render a little obedience, take some steps, refrain from certain sins and seek to walk hand in hand with the Lord—and with mammon. There is no promise of joint-heirship with the Saviour except by a full cutting loose from the world and by a vital union with God through Christ.

"He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear." He that hath a humble heart of obedience, let him lay hold of the promise and attain the greatest of all ambitions. As for others, let them choose the noblest ambitions of which they are capable, assured that in proportion as they are honest and loyal they shall eventually be blessed under Messiah's Kingdom.

Backache Banished.

Thousands of men and women are suffering from weak, lame and aching backs, and many of them unable to do any work for the pain.

The stitches, twitches and twinges are bad enough and give enough misery, but, back of the backache, and the cause of it all are the disordered kidneys crying out in warning through the back.

Backache is kidney ache, and there's serious trouble ahead for you if you neglect it.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure every form of backache by curing the sick kidneys that cause it.

Mrs. Jack Mason, Springhill, N.B., writes:—"I have been suffering from backache for a very long time. I tried everything and did everything, but still I would suffer. One day I was looking over your Almanac, and saw your advertisement for Doan's Kidney Pills, so I got 5 boxes, and I am glad to say that they brought me back to life again, and from now on I will never be without them."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Had A Stroke Of Paralysis

And Found a Cure In Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is always better to prevent serious diseases of the nerves. There are many warnings, such as sleeplessness, irritability, headaches and nervous indigestion.

Prostration, paralysis and locomotor ataxia only come when the nervous system is greatly exhausted. Even though your ailment may not yet be very serious, there is a great satisfaction in knowing that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will cure paralysis in its earlier stages.

Mrs. R. Bright, 215 Booth avenue, Toronto, write: "Two years ago my husband had a stroke which left him in a weak, nervous condition. He started taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills, and we saw the good results almost immediately. They have made a new man of my husband and we cannot speak too highly of them."

Father's Room.

Father's room! Is there such a place in your house? Should a man have a room of his own?

Think over the men you know. Aren't most of them treated as visitors in their own houses? If the average man gets an easy chair, a small table for his smoking things and his books and a good reading lamp he is doing pretty well. The idea of his having a room of his own would astonish his wife. He is supposed to be company, and very well behaved company at that, says the Delineator.

A man should have a chance to express his untidiness, if he has any. It is good for him. It gets it out of his system, and it is very much better that it should be worked off in his own room than in the rest of the house. Of course in a small household of two people there is room enough for both husband and wife to spread out, but there are more than two people in most families, and the happy, normal family lives all over the house.

Curious Signboards.

An eighteenth century Glasgow sweep suspended over the door of his house the announcement:

Barny Keir, he does live here.
He'll sweep your vents, and not too dear,
And should they chance to go on fire
He'll put them out at your desire.

Edinburgh once enjoyed the distinction of possessing the most prolix signboard on record:

"John Main, Stationer, Bibles, Testaments, Psalms, Hymns, Prayer-books, Catechisms, Proverbs, Books, new and old, in various branches of literature. Money or exchange for old Books; Papers, Pens, and Ink; Wax and Wafers; Blackleads, Hair, and Hair Pencils; Colored Books, Memorandum Books, Religious Tracts, Books neatly bound, on moderate terms."—London Mail.

WINTER COLORS.

Brown to Be a Favorite Shade.

CHIC CALLING COSTUME.

There is every reason to believe that brown will be one of the leading colors in the dress world this fall and winter. In the soft, velvety materials that are novelties of the season this shade shows up attractively in a tobacco tone.

The calling costume pictured is of a beautiful silk and wool mixture in a tobacco brown fabric. The skirt is slightly draped, and the short jacket has long tails. Indeed, longer coat models are to be the "thing" this season. A collaret of mink adds a pretty wintry finish.

SOME GOOD RECIPES.

Pocketbook Rolls and a Delicious Sweet Cake From Holland.

Pocketbook rolls are dainty to use as a dinner bread. They may be placed in the individual napkin or one laid on each bread and butter plate. The following recipe for these rolls may be depended upon:

Sift six cupfuls of flour, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of salt and stir into it three well beaten eggs, one-half cupful of lard or butter, one-half cake of yeast dissolved in tepid water, enough sweet milk to make dough and set to rise. After it has risen, roll out one-half inch thick, cut with a large biscuit cutter, butter each one and fold it over. Place these rolls apart in a greased pan, let rise again and bake in a moderate oven. Serve while hot, says Table Talk.

Swedish Rolls.

These rolls are usually made with yeast, but baking powder gives equally good results, and its use is a great convenience in hot weather, when one wishes to spend as little time as possible in the kitchen. One cupful of milk, one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of sugar, half a teaspoonful of salt, three cupfuls of flour and six teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Sift the dry ingredients and roll out until one-quarter inch thick. Spread with butter and sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of sugar mixed with one-third teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-third cupful of raisins finely chopped and two tablespoonfuls of chopped citron. Roll up like jelly roll and cut in three-quarter inch pieces. Place in a buttered pan close together and bake in a hot oven thirty minutes. Brush over with egg whites, slightly beaten and diluted with half a teaspoonful of water. Return to the oven to glaze the surface.

Holland Brioche Cakes.

One cupful of scalded milk, one-third cupful of sugar, one-third of a yeast cake, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, two eggs, one-third cupful of melted butter, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, grated rind of half a lemon, juice of half a lemon and one and one-half cupfuls of flour. Add the sugar to the scalded milk. When lukewarm add the yeast, broken to pieces, and the flour. Beat, cover and let stand until it bubbles. Add the eggs well beaten and remaining ingredients. Cover and again let rise. Toss on a floured board, pat and roll in a long rectangular piece one-quarter of an inch thick. Spread with softened butter and fold from sides toward center to make three layers. Cut off pieces three-quarters of an inch wide. Cover and let rise. Take each piece separately in the hands and twist from ends in opposite directions, coil and bring ends together at top of cake. Let rise in pans, bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven. Cool and brush over with confectioners' sugar, moistened with boiling water and flavored with vanilla.

Cookery Points

Old Housewife's Pickling Recipes.

An old housekeeper noted for the good things which are concocted in her own kitchen lays down the following laws for pickling, and all who would learn should profit by her instruction:

One.—Use none but the best cider vinegar.

Two.—Use porcelain lined kettles.

Three.—Keep pickles well covered with vinegar.

Four.—If you use ground spices, tie them up in thin muslin bags.

Five.—Sweet pickles should be rich and sufficiently cooked to keep without being sealed.

Six.—Nasturtiums or small pieces of horseradish thrown in each jar prevents the vinegar from molding.

Our grandmothers used to make what they called "oil pickles," and their recipe is worthy of being handed down to posterity:

To fifty small cucumbers, sliced, add one teacupful of salt and let stand three hours, then drain carefully. Add one quart of small onions, also sliced; one-half cupful of celery seed, one cupful of white mustard seed and a small pinch of pulverized alum. Mix well and then add one teacupful of the best salad oil and gradually enough vinegar to make the pickle sufficiently moist.

Tomato ketchup retains its pristine popularity, and an uncooked variety, said to be excellent, is very simply made. The ingredients are: Four quarts ripe tomatoes, chopped fine and drained slightly; one cupful of chopped onion, one cupful grated horseradish, five stalks of celery, two red peppers and one green one, chopped rather fine; one-half cupful each of salt and mustard seed, one cupful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful each of black pepper and mace, two teaspoonfuls each of cinnamon and cloves and one quart of cider vinegar. These should be mixed well and then sealed up in glass jars.

Plum ketchup is another delicacy suggested by the abundance of the fruit. To two quarts of tart plums add two pounds of sugar and two cupfuls of vinegar, also one-half teaspoonful each of black pepper and salt, one teaspoonful of clove and one tablespoonful of cinnamon. This mixture should be cooked together until soft, strained through a colander and then boiled until the consistency of cream is attained.

Bordeaux sauce is another of the winter table delicacies. A good housekeeper gives us the following recipe:

Slice and drain two quarts of green tomatoes. Add four quarts sliced cabbage, six onions, three red peppers, one-half ounce each of celery seed, whole cloves and whole peppers, two ounces of white mustard seed, six cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of salt and eight cupfuls of vinegar. The mixture should be boiled for an hour and a half, or longer if not thick enough at the end of that time, and then put into jars and sealed.

Where Vanilla Came From.

The history of vanilla is closely associated with that of cocoa and chocolate, for vanilla came with cocoa to Europe. In fact, these three highly important products of New Spain were introduced into Europe by Spaniards. In the year 1520 cocoa was first drunk at the court in Madrid, and with chocolate, also a Mexican product, was quickly adopted.

For commercial reasons the method of manufacturing chocolate was kept a strict secret, and it was made almost exclusively in Mexico. In some manner, however, the carefully guarded secret reached Spain, and in 1640 the first chocolate factory was established at Barcelona.

In the production of a delicately flavored chocolate vanillin is a necessary, and we may therefore conclude that the first introduction into Europe of vanilla for commercial purposes dates back to about 1540.

NOTICE TO BE GIVEN TO PRISONER.

George Lansbury is this day discharged from Aylesbury Prison in pursuance of the Secretary of State's Order of 2-8-13, subject to the following conditions:—

1. The prisoner shall return to the above-mentioned prison on the 11th day of August 1913

2. The period of temporary discharge granted by this Order may, if the Secretary of State thinks fit, be extended on a representation by the prisoner that the state of his health renders it undesirable that he should return to prison. If such representation be made, the prisoner shall obtain forthwith such certificate, if so required, for medical examination by the Medical Officer of the above-mentioned Prison or other registered medical practitioner appointed by the Secretary of State.

3. The prisoner shall notify to the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis the place of residence to which he goes on discharge. The prisoner shall not change his residence without giving one clear day's previous notice in writing to the Commissioner, specifying the residence to which he is going, and he shall not be temporarily absent from his residence for more than twelve hours without giving a like notice.

4. The prisoner shall abstain from any violation of the law.

If he fails to comply with any of the foregoing conditions, the prisoner is liable to be arrested and taken back to prison. While at large under this Order the currency of his sentence is suspended.

Copy of Release Under "Cat and Mouse" Act.

(Copyright, 1913, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

MR. GEORGE LANSBURY, who for twenty-one years has been connected with the English government in one capacity or another, who resigned his seat in Parliament because he did not like the treatment accorded to women in the consideration of the suffrage bill, and who was arrested last summer for his inflammatory speeches and soon afterward released under the "Cat and Mouse" act, is coming to the United States to tell what is the matter with England and incidentally to explain why he has rebelled against the party that put him in office, as well as the government under which he served.

He is one of the restless, picturesque public characters that seem to be bent in these days on destroying the one time boasted conservatism and law abiding character of England. The son of a railway contractor of Oxford, he was formerly associated with his father in that business. His present occupation is officially set down as "timber." His interest, however, has always extended far beyond the exactions of any such hundrum business. He cast his eye over the East End of London years ago and his activities in behalf of the poor there made him a hero. He lives in Bow, and as the representative of that district and of Bromley he was tremendously energetic and many improvements in the conditions of working men and women are due to his efforts.

Since he was twenty-one years old he has been a poor law guardian, and he was a member of the first body for dealing with unemployment in London. He opened the first labor colony and has been a member of the London town and county councils.

Through all the troublous times of labor complications and crusades in behalf of the poor Mr. Lansbury maintained his place as a law abiding citizen, and although there were sometimes stormy sessions, he was elected to act as lawmaker for the British Empire. He was a very busy man, what with his public official duties and the speaking and other activities on behalf of his poor neighbors and constituents—so busy that his only recreation, as set down in the official record, is walking or sailing when he has time.

Frequently he was engaged in protesting against existing conditions, but never did he get into actual conflict with the administrators of the law until he espoused the cause of woman suffrage. He has always taken an interest in the efforts to get more and better opportunities of all kinds for women. Many years ago he helped in W. T. Stead's campaign, and he has always insisted strongly upon industrial organization among women, as he thinks economic freedom even more important than political freedom. It was through his organization of Bow and Bromley that the first woman, Jane Cobden, was elected to the London County Council.

When, therefore, carried away by his enthusiasm for the freedom of women, the former member of Parliament assailed the government in public declamation and was sent to prison for his offence, it was only to be expected that they would rally to his defence. He was sentenced on July 30 to thirty days in prison, and, emulating those in whose behalf he had spoken, he at once went on a hunger strike.

Women marched the streets demanding his release. The authorities were not moved by this demonstration, however, and the former lawmaker who had become a lawbreaker remained in prison until he became so weak from fasting that under the so-called Cat and Mouse act he had to be released. His return to freedom was made the object of great rejoicing on the part of his followers, and the document granting his release was sold for $500.

It is significant that this one-time prisoner who won his release by a hunger strike should be coming to America so soon after the arrival of the most conspicuous woman exponent of that method of getting out of prison and of getting the vote. In the step that he took in refusing to act with the members of his party in Parliament, and which led to his resignation, Mr. Lansbury occupied a unique, not to say solitary, position, and he is coming to America to tell, among other things, how an Englishman without a party feels. In a statement that he recently issued Mr. Lansbury said: "Parliamentary business is so arranged that it is very difficult for a member to vote on principle." Referring to the action of the labor party in the last session of Parliament he added that during the Parliamentary history of the last fifty years no more complete failure had been witnessed in any country.

"So far as I am concerned," he asserted, "I want people to understand that there has been no martyrdom and no self-sacrifice on my part. I came out of Parliament because to have stayed in would have been martyrdom."

Although he speaks so boldly of the severance of his connection with his party and Parliament, it is evident that he is not without hope of returning, for he says:—"Let everybody understand quite clearly that I am out of Parliament by my own action. I have not been driven out and shall remain out until Bow and Bromley or some other place cares to send me back, unfettered and unbound to any party. My conception of Parliament is a place where every kind of opinion is fairly represented by men and women, with freedom to speak the truth and freedom to vote. I know that to those who love a machine this sounds very bad. But machine made politics have been proved in America and in other countries to be the worst kind of politics.

"Despite all the talk about the hard work in the House," Mr. Lansbury sums up, "Parliament is a very comfortable place. Very few members sit in the chamber itself listening to debates. Strangers who go to the House notice that our benches are as empty as the others. Well, where are we? You will find us in the smoking rooms, in the reading rooms, in the dining rooms, anywhere but in the talking place. And when voting time came we would march in like sheep. You don't want men for this work. Machines would do it just as well. It is certainly not worth £400 a year. If the workers know that this sort of thing is going on and are content then there is an end to progress."

All of this Mr. Lansbury explained to the British public. He is going to amplify it so that Americans may understand what Parliament stands for when he comes to New York. He is going to talk, too, about England's problem of the unemployed and what she is doing to solve it. He will visit our east side and compare it with the East End of London, which he has represented and worked for.

Meanwhile he has been convicted of crime in his own country and has served a part at least of a prison sentence. Will he have any difficulty about getting past Ellis Island when he arrives in New York?

Strange Trades That Flourish in New York Impossible in Smaller Cities

(From Our Special New York Correspondent.)

AMONG the occupations of New York city are many of an unusual nature, which could not exist elsewhere than in a centre of vast population. Specialized occupations these are, which demand a huge population from which to draw their patronage. New York is the city of specialized trades. Innumerable articles which in smaller cities could be but a by-product of some more general business find here a sufficient market to make their separate existence possible.

There is the sawdust man, for instance, who in New York is a very important business man. The wholesale sawdust dealer advertises all kinds of sawdust and requests that you will telephone your needs so that there may be an early delivery.

It used to be that any one who wanted sawdust went to the saw mill and asked for as much as he wanted. There was only one kind of sawdust in the good old days and that was an unimportant product which anybody could have for the asking. Now the sawdust wholesaler will tell you that sawdust is a very valuable product and that the sawdust business is offering greater opportunities every day.

There are about sixty kinds of sawdust on the market, so says the sawdust expert, and all of them have their stated uses in the realm of trade.

Mahogany sawdust is just as aristocratic and elegant a product as mahogany furniture. It is useful for smoking—not as tobacco; that is an exploded injustice to the cigar and cigarette manufacturer. Mahogany sawdust is employed because of the good, clear kind of work that it does in smoking hams, fish, &c.

All the way from the preparation of food to the polishing of precious metal ranges the usefulness of sawdust. The hard wood dusts are used for polishing in many jewellers' shops and cheaper sawdusts are used for polishing less valuable metal work. In packing and making cushions, for the covering of floors and in the fur business sawdust is useful.

There are several firms in New York who have no other care in this world than to discover the dark secrets of why chimneys smoke. They don't bother to attend to the big buildings, either. They are almost entirely devoted to solving the secrets of the domestic hearth. Business is plentiful, too, for nowadays everybody who builds a new house in the country or the suburbs of New York wants at least one open fire in it, and, strange to say, there are more new chimneys that smoke than there are new chimneys that don't smoke. So there you are with an excellent opportunity for the smoking chimney specialist and all directly in New York town. In fact, nearly upon the fitted regions the new householder with a smoking chimney is obliged to consult an architect, a mason or an oldest inhabitant—usually with results much more doubtful than when the chimney specialist is called in.

In line with the chimney expert is the man who devotes his life to defective hot water pipes. He calls himself a domestic engineer, but hastily asserts, on being interviewed, that he isn't intending any interference with the domestic relations court and that his domestic engineering ceases when the hot water pipes are in perfect order and there are no general heating repairs to be made in the flat. He is a specialist in these two lines of work and he is on tap for emergency service all the time.

Useful in the world of business as well as that of the home is the firm which takes care of floors. The householder or the owner of a large office building who wants his floors kept in beautiful order without having to assign his superintendent to the task of seeing that the proper sort of cleaners are used and that the beauties of the wood are not ruined by neglect or over-application of the strong arm method signs a contract with the floor scrubbing and oiling firm to take the whole matter off his hands. This is one more step toward placing the housekeeper's art on a basis with other up to date enterprises. Systematization and specialization are supposed to make for efficiency in housekeeping as elsewhere, and when contracts have been signed with the floor cleaning firm, the vacuum cleaning firm and the window cleaning firm another specialized business which finds much patronage in New York, the housekeeper may feel that her premises are pretty sure to be kept in fairly good order, at least in regard to the essentials, no matter what servant problems she may be called upon to confront in the future.

Making over store fronts is an industry which has found so many patrons in New York that a number of firms have found it profitable to set aside all other forms of building and devote themselves wholly to helping New York merchants improve the appearance of their establishments by putting a new face on the matter. All classes of merchants, from the small dealer in the suburb to the great dry goods firms which do millions of dollars' worth of business in a year, indulge in the luxury of a new kind of front every few years. The new store front builder is also an architect and his art demands all the taste, discretion and sense of appropriateness which are required for the erection of an entire new building, with perhaps a greater degree of ingenuity. In line with the new store front enterprises there are certain firms of architects which have made a reputation for their ability in the making over of house fronts in city houses, so that, while the remodelled residences fit perfectly into their place in the city block, they at the same time are greatly improved in appearance and are given an originality of aspect which enables the occupants of the mansion and the friends of the family to recognize a residence without referring to the number on the transom.

In New York the great cleaning houses for carpets of all kinds who are engaged in the detection of crime, and among these are the expert detector of typewriting and the expert on thumb prints. The criminal who reasons that by sending a typewritten letter he will be able to escape the handwriting sleuth finds to his disgust that the typewriting sleuth has taken the trail in his direction, and that the situation is quite as hopeless as if he had indited his incriminating epistle in his own handwriting. Typewriting has individual characteristics as well as handwriting, the expert will tell you, and his deductions have led to the detection of crime in so many instances that he has now become a recognized institution.

Then, if the criminal has been canny enough to beware the typewriter and refrain from any sort of writing whatever, there is still the thumb print expert to reckon with. Tracking criminals by thumb prints has now become so well recognized an industry that the thumb print expert is turning restlessly toward the conquering of new worlds and is having the thumb print system installed in banks, especially in banks which have a great number of ignorant depositors who either cannot write or who may be robbed of their bank deposits by forgery. The thumb print expert gives his services for a fixed charge to such banks as have installed the system, that the clerks of the bank may be instructed in the methods of making and recognizing finger prints.

One of the large businesses which might escape ordinary attention until interest was directed to it by a personal need is that of the water softening firm, which is also the water purifying firm. While in the city itself there is not a great deal of need for the services of the firms engaged in the business, in the immediate suburbs of New York there is constant call upon the good offices of the water doctors.

To the dweller in the rural districts who is a profound believer in the insurance and sinfulness of the good old-fashioned manufacture of artificial ice, and pulling and brimstone as the main purifying characteristic of New York,

The discovery of dictaphones in the Chicago city hall need not disturb the officials. Probably some one is just getting a record of the proceedings for vaudeville purposes.

Despite the partial failure of the corn crop there will be a national Thanksgiving this year as usual. Word comes from Cape Cod that the cranberry crop is O. K.

An English critic of American manners says that Americans do not even know how to "sit up." That may be, but it must be admitted that we know how to take notice.

Only a half dozen women cab drivers are left in Paris, and six years ago there were twenty times as many. It looks as if Frenchwomen didn't take kindly to legalised brigandage.

The second bankruptcy of a well known and once popular night restaurant in the white light region testifies anew to the proverbial fickleness of New York's after theater appetite.

New York is boasting of having produced the biggest book in the world. No; it doesn't contain an alphabetical list of New York officeholders, with an itemized statement of the debt of the city.

Now that so many women make their own living instead of just asking for money whenever they want it it is no more than natural that the season's designs for women's dress should include pockets.

Want ad. in the Columbus (O.) Dispatch: "Respectable elderly lady wants a situation as grandmother to a good home." That ought to meet with an instant response. Think of the grandmotherless homes in this great and bountious country.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

EVIDENCE IN A PICTURE

By F. A. MITCHEL

Touring on foot along the coast of France between St. Nazaire and La Rochelle, sketching by the way, I came to a picturesque spot where stood a cottage. A boy often came and looked on while I worked. I was tempted to cease my landscape drawing and sketch the boy instead, for I never saw a finer model of a child of that age. I chatted with him and learned that he lived in the cottage with his mother, a widow; that his father had been a wealthy man, and until his father's death a few years before the family had lived in a chateau.

Curious to know something more of the story, I asked the boy if he would present to his mother the compliments of an American artist who was on a sketching tour and beg shelter for the night under her roof. He ran away with my message and soon returned to say that his mother would be happy at least to receive a visit from monsieur. I folded my stool, easel and other equipment and, slinging the package on my shoulder, accompanied the child to his home.

I found Mme. Clairmont, his mother, as aristocratic looking as her son. I told her that my curiosity had been excited by her boy as to her family story, and if it would be no intrusion upon her feelings I would like to know more of it. She made me welcome and gave me the facts.

She had married late in life a man much older than herself who was both rich, high born and in every way prominent. One child, my little friend Gaston, had been born to them at a time when it was supposed that she was too old to bear a child. Her husband's brother, who had been looking forward to inheriting the estate, had shown from the birth of Gaston that he was bitterly disappointed at being supplanted. But he gave no sign of any intention to dispute the succession till after the death of her husband a year agone.

M. Clairmont had scarcely been interred when his brother, Martin Clairmont, claimed the property on the ground that Gaston was not his son nor the son of his wife, but the child of one Annette Voudray, a laundress, who had been brought into the chateau to be palmed off as the child of Mme. Clairmont. The claimant obtained from this woman what purported to be a confession to that effect. There was a trial that was dragged through the courts for two years; then the highest court confirmed the decisions of the lower ones, deciding in favor of Martin Clairmont, giving him his deceased brother's estate and Gaston to Annette Voudray.

Mme. Clairmont had possessed a little money of her own, with which she bought off the woman so far as Gaston was concerned, and he remained with his mother. They had come to live at the cottage, Mme. Clairmont having a small allowance from her relatives.

Such was the story I got from the lady's lips, and I could not doubt her statement. One thing surprised me—that a court should be made to believe that Gaston was the son of a laundress. True, he did not especially resemble his mother, but I have observed that sons and daughters bear the closest resemblance to their parents at a corresponding age. One can hardly expect a child to resemble a parent of sixty.

Mme. Clairmont kindly offered me a room for the night, which I gladly accepted. Her personal effects, furniture, heirlooms, pictures, etc., had been removed from the chateau to the cottage. The room I accepted showed evidence of this. Over the mantel was a picture that interested me. It was roses arranged in an oval shape to make a border for a portrait. The portrait was that of an old woman. Stopping in strange places as I did, I carried with me the most powerful electric hand lamp I could buy. In order to see the portrait more distinctly I brought my lamp to bear on it. The strong light revealed that the old woman's picture had been painted over another picture. The one first painted was too indistinct for me to see any more of it than to warrant my assuming that it was the head and shoulders of a boy.

The next day I called Mme. Clairmont's attention to my discovery and was surprised to find that it was also a discovery for her. Being an artist, I was familiar with processes for removing paint and offered to attempt to take off enough of the first portrait to reveal the second, suggesting that there was a remote possibility of some family evidence behind it that would bear on her fortunes. She assented, and I at once began my work.

But I was obliged to work in a dark room and with my electric light, for the boy portrait was only visible under my electric lamp.

By very careful work I succeeded in removing enough of one layer without the others to show the boy's head and was surprised to reveal a portrait of little Gaston. But his mother said no: it was the head of Gaston's father at Gaston's present age.

That picture brought about a return of the Clairmont estate to its rightful owners. As to the picture, there was but one explanation. The original must have been painted in colors requiring certain artificial light to bring them out. Later some one not knowing that there was a portrait within the flower border had used the canvas for a second portrait.

An Old Time Merman.

An amusing and detailed account of a merman seen in the Atlantic, written apparently in good faith, ends with the following description of the monster, which may possibly have been a seal or a sea lion. "That monster is about eight feet long, his skin is brown and tawny, without any scales, all his motions are like those of men, the eyes are a proportionable size, a little mouth, a large and flat nose, very white teeth, black hair and chin covered with a mossy beard, a sort of whiskers under the nose, the ears like those of men, fins between the fingers of his hands and feet like those of ducks. In a word he is a well shaped man. Which is certified to be true by Captain Oliver Morin and John Martin, pilot, and by the whole crew, consisting of two-and-thirty men." (An article from Brest in the "Memoirs of Trevoux." The monster was mentioned in the Gazette of Amsterdam Oct. 12, 1725, where, it is said, it was seen in the ocean in August of the same year.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

How to Read the Moon.

Few people can tell at a glance whether the moon is waxing or waning. Here is a whimsical rule to remember by. It is very simple to those who know Latin and is not difficult for those who do not. The first thing is to notice whether the moon is like a D or a C—that is, whether the full semicircular curve is on the right or the left. If the moon shows a D that naturally stands for decrescit. "It wanes."

But then comes in the great principle "The moon is always deceitful," and one has to understand the opposite of what the moon says, so that a moon which shows a D is a waxing moon, while a waning moon is like a C.

Those who have no Latin will no doubt look to see whether the moon says it is "decreasing," in which case they will understand that it is waxing, while a waning moon will deny that it is "decreasing."—New York Sun.

Cost of First Class Traveling.

While on the Pacific ocean I met a life insurance man who told me that he traveled constantly and that his expenses, afloat and ashore, averaged $11 a day. He kept no expense account, he said. At the end of the year he charged the company $11 a day for expenses, and that was almost exactly what he spent. I made a calculation and found that the present trip has cost us $11 a day each, almost to a penny.

If you want to know what traveling costs, here is an estimate you may depend upon. This means rapid traveling, by railroad and steamship, and sightseeing in the towns with the assistance of a guide. The estimate includes the purchases a traveler is compelled to make and cannot be reduced much unless you travel second class and deny yourself many things.—Ed W. Howe in His Travel Notes.

His Morning Duty.

Ministerial duties and increasing dignity have not robbed a certain minister of his cherished boyhood accomplishment of making fritters. He frequently exercises this skill at breakfast time, much to the delight of the younger members of the family. Edith, the four-year-old daughter, recently took ten with a member of the congregation. "After the silent grace the little one, looking at her unmarried hostess, remarked with pity:

"You don't have any one to pray for you, do you?"

Said one of the ladies present, smiling:

"I suppose your papa prays for you three times a day."

"Oh, no, he doesn't," was the innocent and earnest answer. "He fries in the morning and prays in the afternoon!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

One Voice Music.

Composers have not scorned writing airs to suit the style of particular singers, thus, as Francis Rogers remarks, "storing up for the usual voices of subsequent generations much travail and sorrow." Mendelssohn crowded "Hear Ye, Israel," with high F sharps to give Jenny Lind, whom he adored, a chance to display the particular beauty of her voice in that region, with the result that that air has been a sore trial to most sopranos ever since. Faure, the famous French baritone, also had a particularly facile and mellow high F sharp, and many parts were written especially to give him a chance to exhibit it to the gasping multitude. But in most baritone voices this F sharp is the very limit of the upper range, and, although it may have both power and brilliance, it seldom possesses either mellowness or facility; consequently all the roles written for Faurse (Meyerbeer's "Dinorah," for instance) are particular trying for the ordinary baritone.—Argonaut.

Wearing Shabby Clothes.

It's a great thing to wear shabby clothes and an old hat. Some of the best things I have ever known, like these experiences of the streets, have resulted from coming up to life from underneath, of being taken for less than I am rather than for more than I am.

I did not always believe in this doctrine. For many years—the years before I was rightly born into this alluring world—I tried quite the opposite course. I was constantly attempting to come down to life from above. Instead of being content to carry through life a sufficiently wonderful being named David Grayson, I tried desperately to set up and support a sort of dummy creature which so clad, so housed, so fed, should appear to be what I thought David Grayson ought to appear in the eyes of the world. Oh, I spent quite a lifetime trying to satisfy other people!—David Grayson in American Magazine.

Kleptomania.

The paragraphist opened his typewriter, adjusted a sheet of paper, lit his pipe and sat for a moment immersed in thought. Then he clicked off a single line of copy. He glanced at what he had written, and a look of surprise came across his classic features. Then he gasped, shrieked and went into a fit of hysterics.

His colleagues rushed into the room, but he was beyond human aid. In ten minutes he had laughed himself to death. Then one bethought himself to look at the last lines those fingers, now cold and still, had written. At the top of the all but unsullied sheet appeared these words: "Another shoplifter arrested in one of our big stores has been dismissed with a warning and her name withheld from the papers. What used to be called a crime is now cylept a mania"—

That was all. But it had caught the paragrapher unawares. — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Dr. Sproule's French.

It may be a bit irreverent, but Mr. Speaker Sproule does not mean it that way. The former Grand Master of the Orange Order, after a careful tutelage, glibly offers the prayers of the House of Commons en Francais. It is true that the honorable gentleman, parlez-vous with an accent of his own, and no assurance has been vouchsafed that heaven understands. But Parliament has the assurance of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. F. D. Monk that he has done himself credit. Nevertheless, it is difficult for the French-Canadian members to preserve the orthodox solemnity of the occasion when Mr. Speaker undertakes the beginning of the Lord's Prayer. It is the presiding officer's accent. He has not yet been able to differentiate between the word "seeau," which he initiated tell us stands for "pail" or "bucket" in homely English tongue, and "cieux," which being translated, meaneth the Heavens. As a consequence, when the good doctor uses the "seeau" instead of the "cieux" in the opening bars of his daily chant, it is a severe test on the decorum of the linguists in Parliament.

But Mr. Speaker says it so solemnly that he saves the situation.

Prince Humbert, Son of the King of Italy.

Copyright by American Press Association.

Princes and princesses are a good deal like other people, especially when they are little. The young lad attired in a striped bathing blouse and with the trunks of his suit rolled as high as he can get them is Humbert, Prince of Piedmont, heir apparent to the throne of Italy. He is enjoying himself on the beach by the Adriatic sea. Crown Prince Humbert is said to be a studious boy and has a decided talent for music. He is the only son of King Victor Emmanuel and is named for his grandfather. The prince, who is nine years old, is the only son of King Victor and Queen Helena. The other children are all daughters—Princess Yolande, twelve; Princess Mafalda, who will soon be eleven, and Princess Giovanna, about six.

Experiment With a Tumbler.

Take a thin blown glass tumbler. Fill it nearly full of water and place on its borders, after drying them well, a cross of equal branches cut from paper. Turn down at right angles the ends of the branches of the cross, in order to prevent it from slipping down the sides.

If you now cause the glass to vibrate by rubbing some part of its exterior surface with your wet fingers, as if you were going to make it ring, you will perceive the glass to emit a sound. But more than this, you will notice the following: If your finger rubs the glass under one of the branches of the paper cross, the latter will remain stationary. But if, on the contrary, you rub a part of the glass situated between the branches of the cross, the cross will begin to turn slowly as if it obeyed some magical influence, and will not stop until the end of one of the branches arrives over the part rubbed by the finger. Thus, by moving the finger around the glass, you make the cross turn as you please.—Magical Experiments.

Polly's Pies.

You ought to see wee Polly's piest
She takes a bit of dough
That cook allows her, and she tries
To roll it out "just so."
But she must handle it a lot
Before it fits her pan,
And pie crust does show every spot
When hands aren't spick and span.
And pies, to be quite flaky, need
The very lightest touch.
The crust is very tough indeed
If it is handled much.
And when wee Polly's pie is made
She feels a sad surprise
When Cousin May says, "I'm afraid
I dare not eat rich pies."

And says: "Is this for me?
You're very kind, dear little niece,
I'll take it home for tea."

BRITONS PREDOMINATE.

English-Speaking Settlers In Canada Hold Their Own With Europeans.

The tourist who hurries through Canada from coast to coast often persuades himself that the British element in the population no longer predominates. But recently issued census bulletins show that people of British origin are in the majority, not only in the country as a whole, but also in every province with the exception of Quebec. It is true that the population of British Canadians fell from 57.03 per cent. in 1901 to 54.07 per cent. in 1911, though the actual number increased from 3,063,189 to 3,896,985.

Yet the proportional falling-off need not alarm us seeing that (1) the immigration from Europe, especially from the regions that may be said to form the European East End, is obviously slackening, and (2) the influx of American settlers, who make excellent citizens as a rule, is the chief factor in the increase of the non-British element. Furthermore, the statistics of homestead entries suggest that the greater part of the land occupied of late years has been taken up by English-speaking settlers.

Thus in the five months ending with last May, three-quarters of the 11,086 entries in the three prairie provinces were by Canadians, Americans, and immigrants from England, Scotland, and Ireland. And probably five-sixths of the lands sold during the last ten years by the great railway companies and other land-owning corporations are now effectively occupied by English-speaking farmers, the alien immigrants as a rule being content to form part of the floating labor-force of the cities and towns where they congregate in "ghettoes" or well-defined quarters—rather unpleasant features in the environs of Winnipeg and other important centres. In all probability the census of 1921 will show an increase in the percentage of British Canadians; and there can be no doubt whatever that their hold on the essential Canada—i.e., the agricultural principality—will have been strengthened.

Among the people of British origin, the English element shows the greatest increase during the decade in question—from 1,260,899 to 1,823,150, giving a gain of 44.5 per cent. The old warning: "No English need apply" (which never had all the contemptuous meaning imputed to it) need no longer form a theme for sermons on the Englishman's failure to "make good" in the transcontinental Dominion.

To-day Englishmen are so numerous in Canada, and so influential, that nobody dare run the risk of offending them by the utterance of criticisms that were applicable only to a few wastrels who wasted themselves and their money in the days when "the Colonies" were looked upon by stay-at-home parents as merely a dumping-place for the failures of English public schools.

"NA-DRU-CO DYSPEPSIA TABLETS Proved of Great Value to Me"

There is only one explanation for the numbers of enthusiastic letters that we receive praising Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, and that is that these tablets certainly do cure any kind of stomach trouble.

Here is a typical letter from Miss Eliza Armsworthy, Canso, N.S.:

"It is with pleasure I write to inform you that your Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets have proved of great value to me. I tried remedy after remedy but without any lasting good. Having heard of your tablets curing such cases as mine I decided to give them a fair trial. They proved satisfactory in my case."

The remarkable success of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets is such a success as can only come to an honest remedy, compounded according to an exceptionally good formula, from pure ingredients, by expert chemists. If you are troubled with your stomach just ask your Druggist about Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, compounded by the National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, and sold throughout the Dominion at 50c. a box. 142

Change of Front.

On a murder case in one of the southern states an old mountaineer was called as witness. The defending lawyer was cross examining him.

"You say you saw this murder committed?"

"Yuss."

"How far were you from the spot where it took place?"

"'Bout a quarter mile."

"What time was it when this deed was done?"

"'Bout half past 8."

"On the date this murder was supposed to be committed it would be almost totally dark, and you mean to say you could see distinctly what happened at that time at a quarter of a mile distant?"

The old mountaineer shuffled his feet, changed his quid and stretched. "Oh, well," he said as he started to leave the witness chair, "I don't give a gosdarn about this trial anyway."—Everybody's.

HALLOWE'EN DEATH LIST.

Chicago Has Five Fatalities After Friday's Pranks.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Two boys are dead as the result of Hallowe'en pranks played here Friday night. While trying to pull down an arc light, Morgan Campbell, 15 years of age, came into contact with a charged wire and was instantly electrocuted.

Tomaso La Quinto died in a hospital from injuries sustained when he was knocked down by a fire department wagon which was answering a false alarm some joker had turned in.

Mrs. Hulda Ewart, aged 52, and her daughter, Mrs. Alma Stenersen, 32, both widows, died of heart disease within thirty minutes, the latter at a Hallowe'en party and the former while on her way to join her daughter, when informed of her illness.

The daughter died within a half hour after being taken ill. Her mother was notified of her illness and dropped dead on the street corner. The body was found by a policeman.

Woman Burned To Death.

GUELPH, Nov. 3.—Mrs. Hewer, aged 66, living at No. 14 Oliver street, met a horrible death Saturday afternoon, being burned to death. The clothes were burned almost completely off her body, and death was caused by the inhalation of the flames. The cause of her being on fire is unknown, but it is supposed that it was done in attempting to light an oil stove which she was about to use. It is thought that she was bending over to start the fire, when she fell, the match setting fire to her clothes. The flames spread with terrible rapidity, and the aged woman rushed out of the room a mass of flames. Death occurred soon afterwards.

TO REAP HIS REWARD.

Informer McManigal on Eve of Being Set Free.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 3.—Ortie E. McManigal, whose confession as an accomplice of the McNamara brothers figured in the trial at Indianapolis of the union labor leaders, whose appeal was taken under advisement Friday after arguments in the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago, may be a free man within six days.

County authorities said yesterday that with the decision on the appeals, McManigal probably would be released from the Los Angeles County Jail, where he has been a prisoner for two and a half years, having left it only for a few weeks to testify for the Government at Indianapolis trials last year.

Failed To Break Record.

PARIS, Nov. 3. — The half-yearly competition for the Pommery Cup, it is officially announced, has been won by Marcel G. Brindejone des Maulmais, who last June flew from Paris to Warsaw by way of Berlin, a distance of 1,500 kilometres (approximately 933. miles), in 13 hours. Eugene Gilbert, who on Friday ascended at Villacoublay in an attempt to beat this record, covered only 985 kilometres (581 miles, in 5 hours and 11 minutes.

Fire at Strome Alberta.

STROME, Alberta, Nov. 3.—Fire which broke out in Douglas Bros., general store early Saturday destroyed five buildings with a loss of about $50,000.

Rudderless Boat Makes Port.

COBOURG, Ont., Nov. 3.—One of the most clever steamboat handling was done here late Saturday night when Capt. Cousins, of the steamer Ralph, belonging to the Point Anne quarries, brought the steamer right into Cobourg harbor with the barge Sophia Minch without the use of his rudder, which was broken out in the lake. It was very difficult to bring in both the boats as there was a strong gale blowing from the west, but he did so and had them tied to the dock without further damage. The boats left yesterday on their way up the lake.

Civic Paving Plant Pays.

CALGARY, Nov. 3.—The report of the city commissioners announce the Calgary paving plant effected a saving to the city of $25,000 during the 12 months, compared with the cost of paving by contract.

The municipal plant lays a paving at an average cost of $2.15 per yard. During the season 140,000 square yards were laid. Calgary's paved streets measure 52 miles.

BACKACHE VANISHES RHEUMATIC PAINS GO

Few Doses of Croxone Ease Stiff, Sore Swollen Joints and Muscles, Relieving Backache and Bladder Disorders

If you suffer with backache—have pains in the neck or sides—nervous or dizzy spells—a few doses of Croxone will relieve the congestion and you will be surprised how quickly all kidney, bladder and rheumatic troubles will disappear.

Croxone promptly relieves these diseases because it really does reach the real cause. It soaks right into the walls and linings of the kidneys, cleans out the stopped-up, inactive organs, neutralizes and dissolves the uric acid and makes the kidneys sift from the blood the waste and poisonous matter that lodge in the joints and muscles to scratch and irritate and acute rheumatism. It soothes and heals the delicate linings of the bladder and gives the kidneys renewed strength so they can filter the blood and keep you well.

Croxone is different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results. An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if it should fail in a single case.

Time "Pape's Diapepsin!" in five minutes all Sourness, Gas, Heartburn and Dyspepsia is gone

Sour, gassy, upset stomach, indigestion, heartburn, dyspepsia; when the food you eat ferments into gases and stubborn lumps; your head aches and you feel sick and miserable, that's when you realize the magic in Pape's Diapepsin. It makes all stomach misery vanish in five minutes.

If your stomach is in a continuous revolt—if you can't get it regulated, please, for your sake, try Pape's Diapepsin. It's so needless to have a bad stomach—make your next meal a favourite food meal, then take a little Diapepsin. There will not be any distress—eat without fear. It's because Pape's Diapepsin "really does" regulate weak, out-of-order stomachs that gives it its millions of sales annually.

Get a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. It is the quickest, surest stomach relief and cure known. It acts almost like magic—it is a scientific, harmless and pleasant stomach preparation which truly belongs in every home.

Three Killed In Auto Crash.

BAY CITY, Mich., Nov. 3.—Three men are dead as the result of an automobile accident during the late hours of the Hallowe'en celebration here early yesterday. The machine, carrying three women and five men, was wrecked when the driver lost control of his steering wheel. Marvin Luke and George Jones both of Detroit, were thrown beneath the car and instantly killed, and Alexander Turpin of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., lived but a short time after the accident.

Record Grain Shipment.

PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 3.—From Port Arthur elevators Saturday there was shipped 949,431 bushels of grain, a new record for a day's shipment. During the month of October 11,000 cars have been unloaded in Port Arthur, compared with 800 cars for the same month last year and 12,500,000 bushels came into the city during October, compared with 8,500,000 bushels for the corresponding month last year, which establishes another new record.

Greece Inciting Albanians.

ATHENS, Nov. 3.—Italy and Austria have presented a collective note to Greece, complaining that the delimitation of Albania by the international commission is being hampered by the attitude of the population under Greek incitement. Greece is informed that both Italy and Austria have instructed their representatives on the commission to regard as Albanian all villages where opposition is encountered.

Bridge Cuts Freight Charges.

EDMONTON, Nov. 3—The completion of the high level bridge over the Saskatchewan river by the C. P. R. results in a reduction in freight charges on the traffic effected by the bridge from five to ten dollars each car.

Berberine Belief.

Everything that goes wrong is attributed by the Berberines, a tribe of the Sudan, to the devil. Ethel S. Stevens, in "My Sudan Year," quotes a story told her by Bishop Gwynne of his "boy's" coming to him one day and announcing, "The devil is in the house."

"Oh," said the bishop, "that is very interesting! When did he arrive?"

"He came in with the cook from the souk market yesterday evening."

"Really?" commented the bishop puzzled.

"Yes, and in the night he came out of the cook and passed into me."

"Oh, and what did he do?"

"He went to the cupboard and broke a plate and the top of the jam jar."

A light broke in on the bishop.

"Oh, he was after the jam! I suppose he ate some?"

"Yes," said the boy, "he did!"

The idea of devil possession is not merely an elaborate form of excuse. The native servant really believes in it

Jewelers Are Warned.

Storekeepers throughout Canada who sell cheap jewelry, by adding carats to gold rings and chains and dealing in watches in which the "jewels" are discovered to be bright bits of celluloid, will have a beware from now on. The Government is waging war on such petty pilferers and is determined to stamp out all infractions of the "gold and silver act as these.

Most of the jewelers prosecuted thus far have been fined for representing gold rings and chains of 14 and 16 carats as 18 carats. A number were penalized for selling the so-called Grand Trunk special watch, an article imported at $2 net, and sold from $3 to $5.

Laws For Farmers.

The last session of the Nova Scotia Legislature was fruitful of enactments designed to advance agriculture. Notable among the new measures were those providing for demonstration work, for the encouragement of seed growing, for the appointment of a superintendent of dairying, for the appointment of a provincial entomologist, for increasing grants to agricultural societies and to county and district exhibitions, for the formation of a poultry association, and for the amendment of the law governing the enrolment of stallions for optional inspection.

Heavy Stamp Sales.

Last year there were more letters mailed and more stamps sold in proportion than ever before in the history of the Dominion. During the month of August, according to figures obtained at the Postoffice Department at Ottawa, there were issued stamps to the value of $1,01[illegible]. Eleven years ago the amount was only $419,134.

ON SENTENCE DAY.

The Awarding of Penalties for Crime is a Grim Affair.

Were you ever in a penitentiary—not, of course, to stay longer than you would stay at a friend's house when paying an informal visit, or, at the most, not longer than you would sit in a theatre to witness a tragedy to its thrilling close? If you have been there you have some idea of how hard is the way of the transgressor.

And it comes up with peculiar vividness and pathos as one sits in a criminal court on sentence day, and listens to the representative of organized society order men and sometimes women, too, to these places of confinement and punishment.

In the criminal careers of these men, the first step may have been taken years before, and when it was taken little did the guilty one think the goal of crime would be reached. On sentence day the goal is brought within sight—the grim walls, the armed guards, the solitary cells, the dusty stone heap, the days of monotonous and hopeless toil. They all loom up and cast their dark shadows over court, and audience and prisoners.

That shadow rested upon the Court of King's Bench recently, says a writer in The Montreal Standard, when ten men received the reward of crime. That crime does not pay has often been demonstrated. The truth was realized by those men when they received their wages for wrong doing—years within the grim walls with other criminals for associates and the men with the loaded rifles for keepers.

With few exceptions, these wretched men had never before stood in the dock as convicted criminals. For some it was the consequence of their first dabbling in crime. It was the tragedy of their lives, and no wonder they stood there with trembling lips and blanched cheeks, and with streaming eyes, too, before they stepped from the dock and began their journey to the penitentiary.

"Each was given a chance to speak. To each the Clerk of the Court repeated the question, asking if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon him according to law. With few exceptions each spoke a few words—rambling words, intended to suggest extenuating circumstances and to plead for mercy. Some began with forced calmness, but most broke down, and their last words were drowned in sobs. Tears streamed down the cheeks of some, but unavailing tears, because they could not wash away the past. These men came too late to a realization of the immutable truth that sin is a poor paymaster.

Two men stood at the bar, who had stood there before — convicts from the penitentiary, who had committed crime while undergoing punishment for other—showed no emotion, and little concern, although they went back with prolonged terms to the dreary place they knew so well.

They were dressed in prison garb—rough suits, one-half blue and one-half a rusty brown. Both were miserable looking specimens of humanity, of low intelligence, brutal, even ferocious. In the dock one of these miserable creatures betrayed his accomplice. They had assaulted a prison guard; and, when asked if they had anything to say before being sentenced, one charged the other with being the instigator. Partners in crime, one was traitor to the other when both stood at the judgment bar.

Singly or in couples, the prisoners came to the dock, and then turned away with the weight of their sentences upon them. Before them lay the short journey that ends at the iron-bound gate in the grim stone wall.

Sage And Sulphur Darkens Gray Hair

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Restore Colour, Gloss and Thickness

Hair that loses its colour and lustre or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even colour, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Common Weakness.

An interesting light is thrown on the purely human side of the late Edward VII. of England by a story told of his inability to resist the temptation to appropriate a particularly good anecdote.

Some one told a delightful story to one of his majesty's young nieces. "That is capital," she said. "I must tell it to the king.

"No," she instantly added, "I won't, for if you tell uncle a good story he forgets in a day or two that it was told to him and goes about repeating it to every one as his own."

"Husking bees!" exclaimed the girl. "How do you husk a bee, anyway, Mr. Simmons?"

Milady's Mirror

Hygiene For Business Women.

First of all, seven or eight hours of sleep are necessary and if possible nine. Always have fresh air circulating in the bedroom. Cold weather never be an excuse for tightly shut windows. No one who has honestly tried sleeping in a thoroughly ventilated room will willingly go back to the slow suffocation caused by the want of oxygen.

If after a day's trying ordeal the body is tired, the mind sore and discouraged and the spirit drooping, eat sparingly of something very wholesome and simple that is easily digested, relax for half an hour, read a light book or stretch out in some comfortable chair, then sponge the body over with the following lotion, which will soothe the wornout nerves, rest the limbs and induce sleep: Sea salt, four ounces; spirits of camphor, two ounces; spirits of ammonia, two ounces; pure alcohol, eight ounces.

Add sufficient water to make a full quart. Dissolve the salt in the hot water and let it stand until cool. Pour the spirits of camphor and ammonia into the alcohol, add the salt water and shake well, then bottle for use. Wet the body with this, then rub vigorously until the skin glows.

Whether the cold bath or the warm bath is taken, it is purely a question of individual taste and pleasure. If the cold water is chilling and there is no reaction after the friction the cold bath should not be indulged in. The French dermatologists object to the habitual cold plunge, preferring the warm bath with the use of a cooler spray afterward and a final rubdown with a toilet vinegar or astringent water. But this again is a matter of taste.

The next most important factor in the business woman's care of herself is exercise. Of course it is often impossible for her to take very much outdoor exercise except on Sundays and holidays, but a few moments in the morning given to physical culture or a few simple exercises adapted to her particular requirements will perform wonders.

Work will never injure looks or health if even ordinary care is bestowed on our bodies and if we follow conscientiously and carefully as far as possible the simple, homely rules of health. Physical culture is the result of long years of thought and experience and is designed to develop and does develop every muscle of the body. It gives poise and physical authority. Select three or four simple exercises and rise fifteen minutes earlier. It may seem trying at first, but after a few efforts the results will be so gratifying that the fifteen minutes given up to these exercises will become a pleasant habit.

Diet is another great factor in the care the business woman should give to herself. The first and most essential point in the matter of diet for the beauty seeker is that it should be plain and wholesome, not flavored with rich sauces or condiments, simple, nutritious and, above all, well cooked. Breakfast should be light, but ample and the midday meal be more solid for the hard worked business man and for the great army of women toilers it essentially applies that this meal should be wholesome, but not heavy—a repast that will give as much nourishment and stamina as possible in small bulk. Begin the day with a glass of hot or cold water; then the rest of the meals can be taken dry. Drink several glasses of pure water between meals.

No woman should ever go to bed hungry. A light luncheon of wafers and warm milk, hot water and brown bread or even a few dates is enough to stay the craving and induce sleep. The mistake is to eat heartily and hurriedly, imposing upon the stomach a full meal of half masticated food.

No Iced Drinks For Beauty.

Any girl who values or who is trying to cultivate a good complexion should not drink ice cold drinks of any kind. Plenty of cool water should be drunk, however, and two quarts each day is none too much, at least during the warm weather, says the Philadelphia Telegraph.

Some girls declare they never drink much water. To those I would say then it is high time they began. Just as the body requires to be flushed externally by bathing, so does it need internal flushing, and plenty of cool, fresh water will do this better than medicine. If you are no water drinker try it for the summer and note the difference in your complexion a few months later. But do not be like the young girl who said, "Oh, I tried it, but it's no good." When asked how long she had tried, she said, "A couple of weeks." She might better not have tried at all. Another girl said that she was just becoming discouraged when one day she noticed how soft and satiny her skin appeared, where formerly it was muddy and sallow. When asked how long it had been since she started to drink water regularly, she replied, "About a year," and added that she really thought it worth while to cultivate the habit of drinking water. She realized, as many girls do not, that all the old refuse had to be got rid of first before any change for the better could take place, and naturally this takes time.

Cured Diseases Of The Kidneys

And Is Depended On to Right Stomach and Liver Disorders.

Once Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are introduced into the family and their efficiency becomes known they are usually found too valuable to do without. For everyday ills arising from liver and bowel disorders they bring relief promptly, and when complicated diseases of the kidneys and liver develop they often prove a successful cure after doctors have failed. As an illustration, you may read the following, which was received a few days ago.

Mrs. John Wright, 53 McGee Street, Toronto, Ont., states: "We have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for two years, and would not be without them. My husband suffered from kidney trouble, and after taking treatment from several doctors without receiving any benefit, tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which worked a complete cure. Since that time we have used them for all stomach and liver disorders."

Indian Laborer's Song.

In India when drawing water from the wells the man in charge of the operation invariably encourages the bullocks with a cheery singsong at the critical moment when they are raising the heavy leather pouch of water from the well, and if he was to remain silent the Indian bullock, who is a strong conservative, would certainly refuse to start. A song which the men sing when they are making mortar runs something like this: "Oh, bullock, what a work you are doing, going round and round making mortar for the masons! Oh, bullock, go faster, go faster!" The masons will cry out: "Oh, bullocks, for more mortar, more mortar. So go faster, go faster."

An Amputate.

A mouse being chased by a cat in Mr. Joe's brewery fell into a vat of beer. The cat sprang to the edge of the vat and called. "Aha, Mrs. Mouse, you had better have let me eat you than to drown."

"Yes," replied the mouse, "if you will save me from this you may eat me."

The cat went to the edge of the tank and extended his paw, and the mouse landed and ran hastily into his hole.

"Come out," demanded the angry cat. "Redeem your promise and let me devour you."

"Oh, no," said the mouse; "when I made it I was in liquor."

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON

The blood must be filtered, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you set both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

UNIONIST PAPER CLAIMS THAT ULSTER MEN WILL FIGHT TO THE LAST DITCH

Sensational Story Published by London "Spectator" to Effect That 100,000 Men Are Waiting and Ammunition is Ready.

GUERILLA WARFARE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., Nov. 3. — While several of the more irresponsible Unionist organs have frequently spoken of the extent of the war-like preparations being made in Ulster to resist Home Rule it remains for the Spectator, which ranks among the most scholarly and cautious of the Conservative organs, to publish this morning the most remarkable forecast yet of the Ulstermen's campaign plans. It says there are in North-east Ulster one hundred thousand partially drilled but enthusiastic and well-organized men, with sufficient arms and ammunition to do the work required. This ammunition is scattered about, cached in the mountain fastnesses and bogs. The Ulster men will not attempt pitched battles against the Government troops, but will spread themselves in mobile bands throughout the country and fight literally to the last ditch. The Spectator says that immediately actual resistance starts there will be a movement in Protestant centres to drive away the Catholic minority. The Catholics will then invoke the aid of the Government and the approach of the Government troops will be a signal for fighting. There is much discussion in London to-day following the Spectator's outspoken announcements and some Liberal papers, in editorials, to-night, demand that the publishers and editors of the Spectator be arrested for inciting a rebellion.

THE PETERBOROUGH AMBULANCE CORPS

Will Make an Endeavour to Secure Use of a Class Room

The Peterborough corps of the St. John's Ambulance Association are making arrangements to inaugurate a series of lectures and demonstrations throughout the winter months. A committee has been appointed who will wait upon the Board of Education with a view of securing one of the class-rooms of the old Collegiate Institute for meeting purposes. The classes would be conducted on the same evenings as the industrial classes, which will obviate the necessity of providing additional heat. About thirty new members have been added to the corps and the prospects for a busy season are exceedingly bright.

FARMER DECLINED TO SELL PROPERTY

The Dominion Government has taken possession of part of the farm of Joseph Greer, Otonabee, for use in connection with the new rifle ranges. In the expropriation of the land, Mr. Greer was offered $70 an acre for the portion of his farm wanted by the Government, but he refused to sell out at that price, so the matter will be settled in the Exchequer Court.

The Government expropriated a little over seven acres of Mr. Greer's land, but he claims that it is worth more than the $70 an acre offered by the Government, and that he is entitled to damages, on account of the depreciation of the value of the remainder of the farm because of its proximity to the ranges.

The matter will be settled in the Exchequer Court at an early date.

Music & Drama

"THE QUAKER GIRL."

That demure little Miss, "The Quaker Girl," paid Peterborough a visit on Saturday and captivated the hearts of large audiences at matinee and evening performances. With bright lyrics, a logical if somewhat scanty plot, and tuneful music, the Tanner-Rose, Greenbank, Tanner production was altogether delightful. A splendid caste, headed by Victor Morley, and with Bernice McCabe in the title role, made the most out of their opportunities. As Tony Chute, Morley was irresistibly funny and kept the audience convulsed. Miss McCabe was dainty and loveable as the Quaker girl, singing and dancing in a charming manner. Harry Short, a comedian who is very popular here, did a capital bit of work as "Jeremiah," while Phil J Moore sang the song hit, "Come to the Ball," in splendid style.

ADDRESS TO BISHOP O'BRIEN

On the Occasion of His Lordship's First Visit to the T. A. S.

MEMBERS INDUCTED

The regular meeting of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society was held yesterday. Several new members were initiated. The appended address was presented to his Lordship Bishop O'Brien on the occasion of his first visit to the headquarters of the Society, since his elevation to the Bishopric. His Lordship replied in a few well-chosen words, in which he expressed his hearty appreciation of the kind welcome afforded him, and assured the members of his continued interest in the work of the Society. The address was as follows:

To Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., Bishop of Peterborough.

My Lord,—In the name of St. Peter's T.A.S. we offer you a hearty welcome on this, your first visit since your elevation to the position of Chief Pastor for the Diocese of Peterborough. It is indeed a great pleasure to have a visit from a Bishop, but when that person is one who for ten years was our Spiritual Director and one who has done so much for the cause we represent, we assure you that it is a double pleasure to welcome you this afternoon. We, as members of St. Peter's T.A.S. appreciate a visit from a distinguished official of the State, but when our visitor (as on this occasion) is not only a dignity of the Church, but the Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien, words fail us to express the welcome fitting the occasion. However, my lord, in an humble way we tender to you the freedom of our quarters.

We assure your Lordship how delighted we were to learn that one so near and dear to us was chosen by the Holy Father for the position of Chief Pastor for the Diocese of Peterborough, and we take pride in the fact that the choice was not only a member of our Society but our former spiritual director.

We were pleased to learn from your inaugural address that total abstinence would be one of the planks of your platform, the virture that means so much for our spiritual and temporal welfare. We will always have the parting of the ways—one the way of temperance and good Christian manhood, the other intemperance and the terrible consequences which follow; and we like to look into the future as we can look into the past and see one so noble and so able as the Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien standing, as it were, at this parting, directing all to take the path of total abstinence.

We offer, through your Lordship, our loyalty to theChurch and pray God to give you a long and happy life as Bishop of Peterborough.

Louis Riley, President.

CAMPAIGN PROGRESSING

Expected That Eight Hundred Men Will Sit Down at the Laymen's Missionary Banquet Next Week

COMMITTEES BUSY

A meeting of the Executive committee of the Laymen's Missionary Campaign being planned for Peterborough, was held Saturday evening in the Y. M.C.A. parlour with Mr. A. W. Cressman presiding and Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., as secretary.

Mr. R. F. Downey reported that 1,000 tickets had been printed for the banquet, which will be held in the market hall Thursday evening of next week, and at which it is expected that at least 800 men wil sit down. A certain number of tickets have been allotted to each congregation. Several churches report that they expect to send 100 men each to the banquet. The banquet will be in charge of a caterer, but it was decided to ask each church in the City to furnish a number of young ladies dressed in white, to help wait on the tables. As the banquet is to be open to the county of Peterborough, large delegations from out of the City are expected. One church at Hastings is sending eight delegates and reports have come to hand from Havelock, Millbrook and other points that they will be well represented.

Thursday of next week, morning and afternoon conferences will be held in the Murray Street Baptist Church. A programme for these meetings has been practically completed and will be submitted to the general committee for final approvement at a meeting to b held in the Y.M.C.A. next Friday evening.

Several citizens have made the suggestion that the City should purchase an asphalt paving plant next year. The morsel presented to them on Hunter and George Streets has served to whet their appetite for more, and there is a more or less general feeling that permanent road making should not cease with the completion of the present contract, which will be continued next Spring. It is understood that London purchased the plant with which the paving company carried out the first contract in that City. It is some proposal of this kind that has been heard here and there on the streets and it is evident that the permanent roadway idea has made a hit with the citizens.

Fears That Schooner Has Gone Down

Special Wire to The Examiner.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., Nov. 3.—It is feared that the two-masted schooner bound easterly went down on Saturday afternoon off the south side of Prince Edward Island. Fishermen saw her in distress during the heavy gale, then she lay on her side and completely disappeared. A government steamer and life boat left here, but could find not race of the vessel. It is believed she went down with all hands.

Ten Trainloads Of Live Stock

Purchased by Mr. H. P. Kennedy During the Month of October

Ten trainloads of cattle representing two hundred and fifty cars, were purchased during the month of October by Mr. H. P. Kennedy, of Toronto. Each car will hold an average of thirty head of cattle, so in all about 7,500 head were purchased. This represents an investment of approximately $35,000.

Mr. Kennedy, who was in the city to-day, in the course of an interview, said that the stock-feeders were beginning to realize the value of finishing their product at home. It means higher prices and consequently larger profits for the feeder. Mr. Kennedy states that he has shipped several carloads of cattle to stock-feeders situated in various parts of Ontario. These cattle will eventually again find their way into the market in the form of finished stock.

Mr. Kennedy admitted that he had been a heavy operator in the live stock market during the month of October. Fifty per cent. of the stock purchased by him were disposed of in the American market at prices which were accentuated by the new tariff bill. The month closed with cattle selling at fifty cents a hundred lower than the prices which prevailed during the early part of the month.

INTERESTING LECTURE BY CAPT. COLLINS

District Chief Superintendent of the St. John's Ambulance Brigade Will Give an Address in the Y. M. C. A.

MANY LANTERN SLIDES

An instructive and entertaining lecture will be given by Capt. George R. N. Collins, who is the District Chief Superintendent of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, on Monday, Nov. the 10th inst, at the Y.M.C.A., Peterborough, 8 p.m., and everybody is cordially invited to attend, no charge being made for admittance. His Worship Mayor Bradburn will occupy the chair.

The lecture, which will be illustrated by over 50 lantern slides, will deal with the various branches of work carried on under the Grand Priory of the Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in England, commencing with the foundation of the Order at Jerusalem in the year A.D., 1018, and describe briefly the many adventurous experiences of the early knights, as compared with the very practical work carried on by the modern Association.

When the Order was first founded at Amalfi on St. John Day, A.D., 1018, its object was to render aid to the many thousands of pilgrims to the Holy Land, who were constantly arriving at that port, in a state of destitution and suffering, due to their arduous journey across the Continent, often beset by wild beasts and robbers, apart from the hardship occasioned by the meagre means of tranportation afforded in those times. So great did the demand for such service become that eventually branches or leagues were formed all over Europe. Later the Order was granted Military Status by Baldwin II., after which they became a strong and formidable body, taking part in the many battles of the Early Crusades, and finally established a Sovereignty over the Mediterranean, which they held over three hundred years. At various times the headquarters of the Order were at Cyprus, Aden, Crete, and finally at Malta. Several times the Order was suppressed, and again revived, but the modern Order obtained its final recognition in the time of the late Queen Victoria, who issued a Royal Charter in 1884, providing, however, that the Reigning Sovereign should be the head of the Order, while the Prince of Wales should be the Grand Prior and President, this latter title being held at this time, however, by H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught.

The modern Order is divided into three branches, having for their objects, the alleviation of distress amongst the general public, and the instruction of the masses in First Aid, Nursing, Hygiene and Sanitation. The first branch is the British Opthalmic Hospital at Jerusalem, for the treatment of cases of opthalmia amongst the natives, where from 20,000 to 80,000 patients receive free treatment in each year. The second is the St. John Ambulance Association, which has charge of the instructional work of the Order, and the third is the St. John Ambulance Brigade. This is the part that has most interest to Canadians, since it is possible to organize divisions for men and women in every town or city. A

MILK PRICES MAY BE INCREASED

The Lacteal Fluid Will be Retailed at Seven and Eight Cents a Quart Respectively

WINTER PRICES

It is freely reported that the milk vendors of the City will increase the price of milk one cent a quart. The prevailing price is six cents for public institutions and seven cents for private householders. The new prices will be seven and eight cents, respectively. Milk prices have increased all over the Province and in some cases it is being retailed at eight and nine cents a quart. The new prices will, in all probability, prevail throughout the winter months.

The local milk vendors also charge a cent a quart more for credit accounts. The prospects for a plentiful supply of feed for the coming winter are said to be good and little difficulty is anticipated in supplying the demand.

The Death Of Edward Morris

Examiner Special:

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 3.—Edward Morris, of the packing firm of Morris and Company, and a dominant figure in the meat business of the United States and Canada, died to-day at his city residence, aged 47. His agents have during the last few weeks since the tariff changes, been most active in buying Canadian butcher cattle. He leaves two daughters, and $35,000,000.

YOUEG PEOPLE AT KNOX CHURCH HAVE ACTIVE SOCIETY

An open meeting of Knox Church Young People's Guild will be held this evening at 8 o'clock in the Lecture Hall. A good programme will be given and refreshments will be served. The Guild will have a flashlight photograph taken towards the close of the evening.

The Guild is holding at the present time a three-month aeroplane contest, under the captainship of Miss O. Kenyon and Miss Havery. The object of the contest is to increase the membership of the Society. Each member is supposed to contribute 5c. to his respective captain and the funds of the winning side are to be given to missionary purposes, while the funds of the losing side will go to provide a banquet for the winners. Up to last Monday evening Miss Havery's side was 10 points ahead. In view of the photograph to be taken to-night, a large turnout is expected. Strangers will be heartily welcomed.

TERMS OF AGREEMENT RE STREET PAVING

Empower City Engineer to Cancel Contract If Terms of Indenture Are Violated—City Engineer's Statement.

INSPECTION ENFORCED

The paving contractors commenced this morning to apply the wearing surface on the east side of George street. This consists of a layer of asphalt. Its completion, which will be recorded to-morrow, weather permitting, will terminate street paving work for the reason of 1913. It is stated that the work will be continued next year on a much larger scale than was anticipated when the original agreement was drafted.

The letters appearing in the press implying that an inferior mixture was being used in the construction of thec oncrete base is repudiated in a statement emanating from City Engineer Parsons. The latter states that constant supervision has been exercised over the work and that so far to date no fault could be found with the manner in which the work had been carried out. The mixture used in the construction of the concrete base is what is known as a one, three, six, mixture. Thisc onstitutes one part of cement, three parts of sand and six parts of stone. All the materials have been inspected by the City Engineer. The cement has been inspected from time to time and in each case has proved to be of standard quality.

The Agreement.

The agreement between Foley and Gleason, contractors for street paving, and the city, call for the construction of asphaltic concrete at $2.15 per square yard and for each lineal foot of concrete curb whether straight or curved, at twenty-five cents, and for each square foot of concrete sidewalk at eighteen cents; this being the lowest tender received by the corporation.

The contractors agree that if in the opinion of the City Engineer the progress of the work is not such as to ensure the completion by the time specified and that the contractors are not using and employing such material and workmanship as the Engineer may deem proper, and notice to that effect is given to the contractors by the Engineer, specifying same, they will supply such additional force and use such proper materials as may be required by the Engineer. If the contractors fail within three days after receipt of said notice to supply such additional force or use such proper materials, the Engineer, with the consent of the corporation may dismiss the contractors.

The judgment and decision of the Engineer as to whether the materials supplied and the work done under this contract comply with the requirements of these specifications, shall be conclusive and final. No material shall be used in the work until it has been examined and approved by the Engineer.

The foregoing represents an extract from the agreement between the city and the paving contractors. The indenture is on file at the City Clerk's Office and can be inspected anytime.

ONE WOMAN IS KILLED

And Several Other Ontario People Are Hurt When Train Jumps Track at Moosejaw

A FAULTY SWITCH

Special to The Examiner:

MOOSE JAW, Sask., Nov. 3.—Miss L. Pettypiece, of Carleton County, was killed, Mrs. Pettypiece, her mother, had her skull fractured, Shurdidge, of New Hamburg, Ont., back sprained, Ellis Johnston, of Crandon, Ont., badly cut and bruised. These were the Ontario people among the casualties here to-day, when the second class coach of the eastbound Toronto Express jumped a faultily placed switch and crashed into an engine going the other way. The coach was splintered to pieces, and the injured were all in this car. Several western people were hurt.

Venus Is Still Drawing Closer

Towards the Sun—Stars for the Week

To-day the planet Jupiter and the moon will be seen close together in the western sky.

On Tuesday the planet Uranus and the moon will be in conjunction within about 3 degrees of each other.

On Wednesday the moon will be at first quarter.

Venus is still a prominent morning star but is now drawing closer towards the sun than it was a week ago.

Mars is gradually rising earlier each night in the northeast. Mars is now about 85 million miles from us; some 5,000,000 miles nearer than it was this time last week.

Jupiter is now slowly slipping away and can only well be seen low down in the southwest just after sunset.

Saturn is the most prominent planet visible in the early evening sky to the northeast rising shortly after 7 o'clock and passing the meridian overhead to south at 1:30 in the morning.

Cepheus (The King.)

The group of faint stars between Cygnus (the Northern Cross) and the Pole star, seen in the western sky well up to the north at 9 o'clock at night, compose this constellation, which though faint has played an important part in the drama of the legends of old. It is mentioned in the story of "The Argonauts" in their quest for the "Golden Fleece" and in the ancient legend of Perseus and Andromeda, one of the best known of all classical myths and one that has survived all ages. Cepheus was known to the Chaldeans and other peoples prior to that of the Greeks. The constellation contains several double and variable stars and also the celebrated "Garnet Star" which though faint is one of the reddest stars in the sky, a beautiful object when viewed with a small telescope or opera glass. This constellation has a certain interest for us when it is known that because of the slow motion of the earth's poles the north pole of the heavens is gradually shifting towards Cepheus. At the present rate of displacement, in less than a thousand years the celestial pole will be displaced to this constellation and slowly move through it, so that in turn, the brighter stars of Cepheus will in years to come act as pole star in place of the one we now have.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The Life Problem Club held a meeting in the parlour yesterday afternoon in spite of the very fine weather out of doors. There was a good attendance. Mr. F. Dobbin was the speaker and his subject was "Early Life in Peterborough." Some very helpful lessons were drawn from the life of the earlier settlers.

Wednesday night at 8.15 Dr. J. E. Middleton wil give a brief address on the "Care of the Teeth" to gymnasium men, on the gym floor. This is the first of a series of health talks.

The wrestling class will open to-night at 8.30 p.m. under the direction of Mr. H. B. Cowan.

"C" COMPANY SOCIAL.

"C" Company of the 57th Regiment will hold a social this evening in the Recreation Room at the Armories at 8 p.m. All members to attend in uniform.

P. C. TUCKER RESIGNS

Term on Local Police Force Expired Friday at Midnight

P. C. Tucker, son of Reeve Tucker, of Apsley, has resigned from the police force of this city. He is a native of Peterborough county, who joined the Constabulary of this city several months ago. During his short term on the force he gave good service. Tucker resigned to secure a more lucrative position.

SPLENDID LECTURE COURSE AT NORMAL

Mr. Duncan Walker, principal of the Normal School, has announced the following course of lectures to be given at the Normal School during the academic year of 1913-14:

Nov. 21—Prof. Brant, of Kingston, on "Boundary Disputes With the United States."

Nov. 28—Mrs. Jean Blewett, of Toronto, on "Canadian Women Writers."

Dec. 5—Prof. De Witt, of Toronto, on "Rome, Ancient and Modern."

Dec. 12—H. W. Hill, M.D., of London, Ont., on "Germs and Diseases."

Jan. 16—Prof. Coleman, of Toronto, on "The Tooth of Time."

Jan. 30—C. T. Curelly on "The Development of the English Home."

There will be no admission charge for any of these lectures and the general public is invited to attend them. The subjects are comprehensive in their range and merely a glance at the names of the speakers, most of whom are widely known, is a sufficient guarantee that the lectures will be well worth attending.

SOUTH BRUCE'S BLACK EYE.

Our evening contemporary ventures the opinion that the result of the voting in South Bruce—the success of the Liberal candidate was influenced by the action of New Zealand. This is the nearest our contemporary has come to hitting the bull's eye in a long time. The Borden government forced the naval question as an issue in this election; it was fishing for an endorsation of the contribution policy of Mr. Borden. This idea was met by the Liberal idea of a Canadian navy, such as the Laurier naval law provided for—a home navy such as Australia is building and such as New Zealand has declared for. The Review is right, New Zealand's plucky, manly decision influenced the voting, because it is in line with the naval policy preached by the Liberals in South Bruce, and which the electors voted for. South Bruce gives the Borden policy of tribute a black eye.

WHAT PREVENTS.

Mr. Rowell says that the liquor interests of Toronto, put up two contributions of some thousands of dollars to the Conservative campaign fund in the last East Middlesex by-election; and maintains that the Whitney government is helped by campaign contributions of the liquor interests. Well, what of that? Isn't this a free country Why should Mr. Rowell or anybody else find fault with liquor dealers putting easy money, where it will make easy-going for a government that sympathises with the traffic, so long as good temperance Tories sanctify the alliance alleged to exist between the liquor interests and the government by their votes? If such an alliance exists, we can't blame the liquor interests—they are human, and we can't blame the Whitney government—it is human; both are fighting for their existence. If anybody is to blame it is the professed temperance electors, who, professing and preaching temperance—which does no good without being implemented by works—as is charged, vote for whiskey and Whitney. Though moral reform by legislation and neglecting the man, seems to be beginning at the wrong end, it will never have a fair chance for effective application so long as temperance electors, place party interests and party success above moral interest and the success of a moral movement.

POLICE PROTECTION, ETC.

Boys will be boys; and there is no one who will seek to deny them the pleasure of a little, or a good deal of, fun on "Holly eve"; but there is strong objection to malicious destruction of property, such as was done on October 31. Long stretches of fences were broken down and other damage done. This is likely to result so long as the outskirts are without police protecion. The City owns a house in Babb's Lane; it is, or has been till recently, vacant, and the windows have been broken, so that there are perhaps as many broken as whole panes of glass. This would not have happened if it were known that almost any moment there might appear on the scene a policeman in uniform. "In uniform," because there seems to be a sort of magic in a uniform representing the majesty of the law. On Friday night special policemen were put in the outskirts, but they could not be everywhere and bad boys did not know of their presence. If two or three policemen, in uniform, had been about, that of itself would have had a restraining influence upon the boys who were inclined to do damage to property.

More and more every day and, especially, every night, the need of police patrolling of the outskirts is demonstrated. Every night young girls are seen abroad in the comparatively dark residence streets on the road to ruin, and not a policeman to ward them home and rescue them from the destruction that awaits them. Our whole police force is centred in the business district, always brilliantly lighted and presenting no opportunities for assignments between silly girls and designing men. The ridiculous Curfew law that gives a policeman only optional authority, in dealing with children in the streets, is utterly disregarded by both authority and the girls and boys it was fatously designed to protect. It is an admitted fact that when a woman is bad she is worse than a man. An unrestrained girl is only a younger woman. The police say that when they warn a boy under age to go home, he disappears and loiters in some other place; but when a girl of, say fourteen, as happened the other night, is found loitering on the streets alone, and is warned by a policeman, she is indignant and "cheeks" the "bobby". It is appalling to those who know to think of the number of girls of about this age who are out on the streets alone, or what is worse, with designing men, at unreasonable hours. The Curfew law, if it is of the slightest value in its present condition, is made utterly useless and a mockery by neglect of provision and means for its proper enforcement. The authorities are constructively guilty of the ruin of some young girls in the residence strets of some city every hour of the night. The Curfew law is dfective in the first place, and if it were perefct, the failure to police the residence streets and the outskirts of the city, the places where the ruin of young girls is wrought, would make it a dead letter. The missionary spirit—the Layman's missionary movement—is now at its highest point of periodic fever — a temperature of about 104 degrees—yet, all around us, in this very city, there is missionary work that demands the attention not only of laymen and clergy, but of lawmakers, and fathers and mothers. The Devil's school is in full operation, with a record attendance, and sweet girl graduates every night receive the diploma of—ruin.

HON. A. G. MACKAY.

Ontario's loss has proven to be Alberta's gain. Hon. A. G. MacKay was practically hounded out of public life in Ontario, and perhaps jealousy of his power and influence, and ability may be regarded as a justification. Mr. MacKay went to the Northwest and it is no surprise that he has "made good" there. He was defeated in the first election by two, but the electors did not know the man, had not taken his measure. But it will probably be a long time before he is again defeated. He has "made good" as we all expected he would do. The Edmonton Daily Capital in a "reprospection" of the recent session of the Alberta Legislature, thus refers to Mr. MacKay:

In the government ranks, Hon. A. G. MacKay was a commanding figure. In committee, in debate and in repartee and anlysis the member for Athabasca was in power. It was his eleventa session and he brought to the house a ripe experience of intestimable value to his associates. The coup by which he placed the member for Edmonton South, Mr. Crawford, in the position of standing alone was the cleverest piece of work of the session. Mr. MacKay filled the big gap left by the late Hon. Malcolm MacKenzie in committee. He came out of the session one of the biggest and broadest men in Alberta politics.

LOVE-TAPS FOR THE POSTOFFICE

The Postoffice Department under the administration of Mr. Pelletier has become as fussy as the Postmaster-General himself. Every few weeks some new regulation is promulgated, intended apparently to make it more difficult to public newspapers. The Orillia Times has this to say of the latest of the series:

'All the fools are not dead yet, and the Postoffice Department of the Tory Government seems to have more than its share. The latest fool order issued from that department is one to the effect that newspapers and other publications shall not print advertisements larger in size than one page. Almost every periodical one picks up contains double-page advertisements, and within a year The Times has been guilty of this heinous offence of printing a two-page announcement. But it must not do so again. Not so long ago this brainless department instructed The Saturday Globe that its make-up must be changed because the illustrated section was different in size to that of the other pages. The next newspaper regulation may be expected to deal with the size of type to be used and the quality and colour of the ink!"

If the officials who are making the lives of publishers miserable by the multiplication of useless and foolish regulations would direct their talents to the production of stamps that will stick without a supplementary application of mucilage they would better serve the people.—The Globe.

EARL GREY AND HOME RULE.

Canadians having expressed some surprise that Earl Grey, whose experiences in this country should have shown him the advantages of home rule, is opposed to the adoption of that principle in Ireland, he has replied to their criticisms. An abstract of his views was cabled on Sunday. He seems to think Canadians do not understand his situation. We certainly do not understand his point of view. He tries by analogy to show us what it is. He asks:

"What would be said by the peoples of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick if they were to be told that their local affairs were to be managed for them against their will by the electors of the Province of Quebec."

We fail to see the appropriateness of the comparison. The provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia were always separate and distinct from Quebec. They had no association with it until Confederation. But Ulster is part of Ireland. Its representatives had seats in an Irish parliament until the act of union. To separate it from the other sections of Ireland might possibly be a politic act, but it would be decidedly a new departure. The analogy of Earl Grey is not a fair one.

Earl Grey says that "the attempt to compel the northeast corner of Ulster to accept the rule of Dublin is a crime." Why should it be more of a crime than to compel all the other provinces of Ireland and the southwest of Ulster to accept the rule of London? Why is it a crime for the minority to submit to the rule of the majority? The minority may not like it. But if that justifies rebellion then the Mexican system is justifiable and wise. When you do not like the rule of the majority take up arms and shoot enough of the majority to change the balance of power.—London Advertiser.
